"The next day we went to the military aviation school at Chartres. On arrival there, where the pupils were making their first attempts at flying, we remembered the words of Commandant X——: 'At mobilization all the aviation schools were closed; the effects of this measure were soon felt.' And when Dr. Maunoury said: 'the last time I was here it was with Emile Reymond,' and the mention of the hero's name was like a prayer.

"We watched the young aviators—a magnificent group of men, radiant with youth, joy and health. Machines were turning about us in the air, and every now and then one would come to earth, when the aviator would step out doff his helmet, reminding me of a diver coming to the surface and taking off his helmet.

"Captain F—— called up a pilot instructor, who had taught more than one hundred aviators during these last few weeks without a single accident. A tall, thin man, calm when we felicitated him upon his success, he gracefully turned our praises over to the chief pilot officer.

"Captain F——, so discreet, who eradicates precise intelligence, tenacious will power, calm courage and burning ardour, offered us a spectacle which the richest sportsmen have not been able to witness—the throwing off the eaglets. It was the first time that the young aviators had flown alone. One after another they mounted their machines, turned on the power, started off, and went sweeping up into the air as if they had been doing it for ever.

"The Captains F—— and V—— without a word, witnessed the triumph of their teachings.

"On to another field, where there were only the more proficient flyers who had passed their first tests and were flying alone. These men were to receive to-day their military brevet, and to-morrow were to pass into the general aviation reserve, to be drafted wherever necessity beckons. We watch them as they set out, one after the other, and go through their evolutions against the blue sky, each one with a little tricolour snapping in the breeze from a wing strut.

"And now to the Front. Here we found the response to the grumblings that our aviation service was declining. On a field at the edge of a road canvas hangars flap in the wind. Before them are arranged the machines in order. A squadron of pursuit and a squadon of reconnaissance make up the organization. The pursuing machines, the hunters, are Nieuports—short, close coupled, squat. A captain who revenged Paris by dropping one of the German aviators who was hurling bombs upon the city, turns and runs past us, down wind, with terrific speed, and turns to land again. Other officers follow, among them some whom we recognize as school friends, who have been in the aviation service ever since they gained their second galon.

"The Fokkers?" questions one of them. "With our Nieuports we overhaul them as if they were standing still. And they know it. They know better than you where this field is and our hangars, but they give it a wide berth. They know that we have some fox terriers here."

"As for the Zeppelins, we are always ready to chase them. But it is folly for us to run needless risks. In the night the Zeppelin is like a fish in the water. We can only plunge and seize it in plunging. It is able to defend itself, while we have only weak weapons of attack. At night the Zeppelin can discover our whereabouts and open fire. Nevertheless, whatever the chance is then, we will risk it. However, do not be too confident in us."

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HOT WATER THE BEST LIVER AND BOWEL MEDICINE

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

"Anmer" as a result was put out of the race. The new Canadian sire has a distinguished pedigree.

OBITUARY

JOHN DORMER.

The death took place this morning of John Dormer, one of the pioneer residents of this city, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Wm. Hartley, 174 Antrim Street. The late Mr. Dormer was born in the County of Wexford, Ireland, June 24 1833, and consequently would have been 83 years of age his next birth day, in June. He lived in Dublin in his early childhood, where he received a practical education. Leaving there on June 10th, 1848, he came to Canada in a sailing vessel and landed at Brockville, Ontario, after a six weeks' trip. In Brockville he resided for some time, but during the American Civil War he was at Oswego, N.Y., coming to Peterborough in 1869, where he has lived since. Up to the past four years the deceased was a resident of Ashburnham, of which very few, if any, of the early residents of this time are alive. The last few years he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Hartley. He was of a most kindly and considerate nature, and had all the qualities of the Old Country pioneers to this Dominion, who are rapidly becoming fewer each year, but who have helped to make Canada what it is to-day. Never a very strong looking man yet he enjoyed excellent health, and until a very short time before the present sickness, which terminated fatally, was always very bright and active, and enjoyed thoroughly the meeting of any Ashburnham friends he came in contact with. He was a Conservative in politics, but more independent than an active party man, and for may years was a faithful member of Mark Street Methodist Church.

He leaves behind him to mourn his loss, his wife, three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Hartley, and Mrs. P. J. Fuller of this city, and Mrs F. J. Headlp of Saskatoon, Sask.; also two sons, Evelyn J. Dormer of this city, and Georg's A. Dormer of Pittafield, Mass. The funeral arrangement will be made later.

HENRY CAMPBELL.

Truly as "a thief in the night," the death messenger came to our old and much respected citizen Henry Campbell on Tuesday, February 22nd, after a few hours' illness, which was not thought to be alarming. Over fifty years ago Mr. Campbell came to Millbrook and purchased the blacksmith shop of the late William Berry, brother of Mr. Geo. Berry of Cavan, and there beside the creek the anvil has rung year in and year out with his steady stroke to fashion and execute the handiwork of his art. The oldest village smithy resounds not with the ring of its master's hammer and the red glow of the blast fire smoulders not, while the hands that grasped the responsive tools lies folded in their last resting place in St. John's cemetery. Mr. Campbell took an active interest in local affairs in days gone by and served for some years as Councillor under the reeveship of the late Alex. Ferguson, his knowledge of street repairs and improvements being of admitted value to the municipality. For years he was also a leading member of the Fire Company.

He was born in Manvers and served his time to the trade at Tyrone in Darlington. Afterward he spent two or three years across the lines, working in various States, and thus secured a complete knowledge of the trade. He was twice married, his first wife being deceased shortly after settling here. His second wife who was the widow of Dr. Hillier, predeceased him nearly twenty years ago. His daughter, Mrs. Cohen (Olive) came home from Chicago for the funeral, who along with the granddaughter, Miss Fern Nattrass, who has always lived with him, mourn the loss of a kind and indulgent father. A daughter, Lilly, of the first wife, lives in New York, and a son, William, of the second wife, out west.

The funeral took place on Friday last to St. John's cemetery, Rev. Canon Allen conducting a very solemn service at the home of deceased, and very many sympathizing friends being present out of respect to the memory of a good and true citizen.—Millbrook Reporter.

JAMES FRANCEY.

After only a few days' illness with Grippe which terminated in heart failure, a life-long resident of Cavan and Millbrook passed away on Thursday night last in the person of James Francey. Sixty-four years ago he was born in Cavan, south of Millbrook and spent his early years within the immediate district. Some ten years ago they removed to Millbrook and shortly after he received the appointment of bailiff of the fourth division court which office he held for some time until a more remunerative proposition presented itself, when rural mail routes were established. His latter position was quite to his liking and his ready wit and genial manner, together with his attention to duties made him an acceptable servant of his Majesty to the farmers on his route. A Conservative in politics, a Presbyterian in religion, and one of the oldest living members of Millbrook L.O.L. No. 79 the passing of James Francey marks but another blank in the fast receeding ranks of the older residents. Besides his bereaved widow there are left to cherish tender recollections of a father's love and care, one son Harry and three daughters, Misses Emma, teacher neat Orangeville; Miss Clara of the Kells, Fowler & Co. staff, and Miss Irene. One daughter, May, died, some five years ago.—Millbrook Reporter.

ROBBED 20 HOMES TO WED, HE SAYS

Youth Who Declares He Selected Burglary as Best Means to Prosperity Is in Flushing.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Selecting burglary as the best means to prosperity, Peter Pilskow, eighteen years old, recently graduated from the Central High School at Detroit, gave to the police at Flushing yesterday a list of twenty homes there which he said he had robbed. His list corresponded accurately with the list which the police had kept for a month.

"I have a girl I want to marry," the police quoted him as saying, "and I had to have money. I came to New York to get it honestly, but I fell in with evil companions and soon found that burglary was an easy method of obtaining money I suppose this arrest will break the girl's heart out in Detroit and also the hearts of my sisters."

In a pocket he had the photograph of a girl on the back of which was written:—"To my boy, with my most sincere love. Goldie." He said his home was at No. 128 Division street, Detroit.

There had been so many burglaries in Flushing that extra policemen were detailed to night work and Pilskow was unable to tell what he was doing there at three o'clock yesterday morning. In his furnished room at No. 120 West Fourteenth street, Manhattan, the police found more than one hundred keys, much jewelery and several revolvers.

Council Sanctions Extension of Water Main From Auburn To Corner of Reid and Smith

Another Line in Force Main Service to Ultimately Stretch Down Boundary Road to Henry Hope Factory—Auburn to Get Fire Protection.

$44,000 COST OF THE WORK

The extension of the 16-inch force main from the Auburn dam down Water street to Smith, and west on Smith street to the corner of Aylmer, continuing with a 16-inch main to the corner of Smith and Reid, was unanimously sanctioned by the Council last night when submitted by Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission. Mr. W. H. Moore, Mr. R. Hicks and Superintendent R. Dobbin were also present. The estimated cost of this work is $36,000, with $4,000 more to cover the cost of coupling with several dead ends. Mr. Matthews stated that there would be no cost to the citizens or water consumers, and that the debenture interest and sinking fund would be provided for out of the water works revenue.

A Comprehensive System.

In detailing the plan to the Council Mr. Matthews pointed out that this new section of force main would form another long link in the system planned by the late Superintendent W. Henderson, which would be carried down Donegal to McDonnel street to the Monaghan Road, continuing south to loop with the main at the Henry Hope factory. When completed this will adequqately serve all the southwest section of the city, relieve the demand on the present system through the centre of the city, and give Peterborough a most complete network of watermains, with provision for future demands.

The Proposed Extension.

At present there are two force mains from the pumping station to the Auburn dam, one an 18-inch, the other a 16-inch. Two twelve-inch mains reach Smith street on George and Water street, respectively. The proposed 18-inch extension will be laid from Auburn to the corner of Smith and George street and west to Aylmer, where it will be stepped down to a 16-inch to Reid street.

So much for this year, but the whole scheme prepared by the Utilities Commission further provides for an extension to Donegal street, where it will be carried forward as a 14-inch to McDonnel and west to the boundary. It will link up with the present piece on McDonnel and will also include the stretch of 14-inch pipe already laid on Monaghan Road from Weller to King street, and will continue south to couple with the 10-inch man in the Henry Hope factory. This main can be tapped at the ends of all the streets it passes, Homewood avenue, Weller, etc., and thus relieve the central demand.

Already $366,000 has been spent on the water system with no cost to the people. The pumping plant and mains are better than that of any city in Canada under 30,000 population. Mr. Matthews said he made that statement without fear of contradiction.

Auburn Protection.

In reply to Mayor Duffus, Mr. Matthews stated that the Commission had secured an 8-inch main through the Auburn dam. This is now supplying water to the Auburn Woollen Mills' private system. The city has an agreement to cross the Woollen Mills property to a street in Auburn, and Mr. Matthews agreed that protection should be supplied in that district. It would cost $4,000 to come down along the G.T.R. to Moir street providing two hydrants. Very little revenue would be secured and the city would have to provide the interest and sinking fund amounting to $350 a year.

To complete the present system in Ashburnham north from Dufferin street, would cost $12,000.

Although it is a precedent, the Council's committee on motion of Aldermen Stratton and McIntyre, sanctioned the expenditure of $44,000 by the Utilities Commission, the odd $4,000 being for the Auburn work.

Debentures for $30,000 have already been authorized, and after that amount has been expended the Commission will return to the Council.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

TAKES A NEW NAME.

Big Mail Swindler Remanded to Tombs

NEW YORK, March 3.—Dr. John Grant Lyman, alias Joshua Brown, alias John H. Putman, whose alleged mail stock swindles are said to have extended over the entire country and to have netted him hundreds of thousands of dollars, was arraigned in the Federal District Court. He was remanded to the Tombs until to-morrow, when argument will be heard, on the request of the United States District Attorney that he be held in $40,000 bail. In asking for bail at this figure Assistant District Attorney Stanton said that two years ago Lyman violated a bond of $20,000 in which he was held at Los Angeles after his conviction for mail frauds in connection wit hthe operation of the Panama Land Development Company.

While awaiting arraignment Lyman said he shared his sister's opinion that he was insane, and announced that he had written a book entitled "Am I Crazy?"

Lyma was arrested in Florida several weeks after he disappeared from the city, where he had operated under the name of John H. Putnam. When seized he was about to put to sea in a motor launch which he had purchased and provisioned for a long voyage.

Pennants Win Championship of the City League

Murray Street Aggregation Beat Bachelors by 8 Goals to 2 and Cannot Be Headed Off From the Silverware---Americans Beat East City 9 to 3.

The Pennants of the Murray Street Baptist Church won the City League championship last night when they defeated the Bachelors by 8 goals to 2. The Pennants have another game to play; but cannot be headed off from the silverware now. The Murray Street youngsters, all of them eligible for Junior O.H.A. hockey and some of them good for a number of years in that series, have played consistently, fast and clever hockey all season, and are to be congratulated upon their clean-cut victory. The League standing is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	T.P.
Pennants	5	0	1
Bachelors	2	2	2
East City	0	4	2

The Pennants had little trouble in beating the Bachelors last night. The game was played six men a side owing to the absence of Neary from the Bachelors' line-up, but the Pennants showed themselves just as clever at the six-man game as they have been at the seven-men article. They had too much speed for the losers, and only the cleverness of Darling in goal averted a worse beating for the Bachelors. All the Pennants showed good form.

The teams lined up as follows:

Pennants.		Bachelors.
	Goal.
O'Brien		Darling
Mulhern McIntyre	Defence	Moore Stuart
Burtley	Centre	Barnett
Frost Kennedy	Wings	Hill Anderson

The Americans won the second game by a strong finish by 9 to 3. It was close going throughout the first two periods, the winners leading by 3 to 2 at the end of the first, and neither team scoring in the second. The East City aggregation put up a great fight for the first forty minutes and would have been in front had it not been for Primeau's good work in the nets. However the Americans ran away from them in the last session, Jackson starring with five goals in this period, three of them on individual efforts. The teams were:

Americans.		East City.
	Goal.
Primeau		McDonald.
Phelan Long	Defence	Murray Cullen
Wheeler	Rover	McIlmoyle
Jackson	Centre	Mein
Smythe Perry	Wings.	Phillips Head

Pte. Windsor of the 93rd refereed both games.

O. H. A. FINALS ARE NOW IN SIGHT

Next week will see the finals in the three series of the O. H. A. started. After to-night's games only two teams will be left in the senior and intermediate series. Riversides and Berlin will be the contestants for the senior honors and the toss of a coin will decide where the first game will be played.

In the intermediate series three teams remain, viz., Sarnia, Midland and Belleville. Midland and Belleville play at the latter town to-night. Midland have a six-goal lead from the first game, but they will have to play their best to hold this. Belleville play fast hockey at home and a six-goal lead to overcome will only make them play all the harder. Simmons, their big defence man who is said to be one of the best in the O. H. A., played at Midland on Wednesday, but could not do himself justice. He got out of bed to go and insisted on playing. The winner of this series will meet Sarnia in the final, and the wise ones predict that the Tunnel Town seven will land the honours.

Three teams are left in the junior running. They are Aura Lee of Toronto, Berlin Union Jacks and Collingwood. The two late teams will play at the Toronto Arena on Monday night, the winner to meet Aura Lee in the final. It was expected that the Union Jacks and Aura Lee would be in the final, but Collingwood's unexpected good showing at Berlin on Wednesday night showed that they have a strong team. The Union Jacks were in the final last year and were beaten by University of Toronto for the championship.

Curling When News Came of Fire at His Home in Norwood

While Hornie Nicoll was skipping a game at the curling rink last night he received a telephone message from Norwood that his home was on fire. He hurried to the C.P.R. station and was in time to catch the evening train. This morning he telephoned that the dwelling was totally destroyed and his mother suffered considerably from shock occasioned by the destruction of her home. Mr. Nicoll is returning to Peterborough this afternoon accompanied by his mother. Since coming to this city Mr. Nicoll has made many friends, especially among the curlers and last night's loss is keenly regretted by them.

Soldiers' Teams To Clash This Evening

The controversy between A and B companies of the 93rd Battalion as to the capabilities of their respective hockey teams will be settled beyond a doubt at Brock street rink to-night, when the teams will meet in a titanic struggle. A company having fired thousands of rounds of ammunition at musketry practice, claim their shooting will win for them, but B company say that they are going to come to close quarters and settle it with the bayonet so that the marksmanship of Capt. Widdifield's crowd will not count. Lieut. Dupuy says that B company's defence will be worse than any barb wire entanglement on the western front, but Lieut. Sexton comes back with the answer that the snipers of A company will shoot said defence full of holes. The referee question is causing trouble. Lieut. Gilman is slated to act but has as yet been unable to find an insurance company game enough to issue a policy on him. Lieut. Hills says that he can deliver the goods if the signalling officer does not come through.

The game is called for 7 o'clock and will last an hour if the teams don't run out of wind.

French Retreat at Verdun Will Rank With History's Best

NEW YORK, March 2.—A special Paris cable to The New York Times under yesterday's date, says: This afternoon's communique was read in the officers' ward of a Paris hospital, where I was visiting an artillery major brought in last night from the Verdun front. Apropos of the communique he gave the following interview outlining the different phases of the battle and describing the fighting in which he participated.

"That looks as if they were beaten at Verdun, anyway. They may try elsewhere but even Germany's need for a striking success cannot make Verdun worth the lives of another quarter of a million of soldiers, and they must sacrifice that number more if they attempt to take the fortress from the southeast.

"To give you an idea of what the Woevre mud is like, I drove a light car a month ago to a village about a mile from the cliff east of Donaumont. The road was frightful. Before we had gone half way the car was bogged to the axles; so we walked and the car was pulled out later by a team of horses. Imagine guns and ammunition wagons in such a quagmire.

Effect of Losses.

"You must take into account also the moral effect of their losses. Even German discipline can't stand slaughter on such a scale. We reckon on their total losses at 175,000 in seven days' fighting, with fully 100,000 killed. There never was a battle with such a high proportion of killed.

So there must be reaction. I don't expect another German move on a big scale for some time. Never mind what the military critics say. They forget the human equation; but you can't leave it out, even in the case of Germans. It all depends on how they hide their defeat from their own people. If they do that, they may produce another spasm before we finally smash them. Otherwise they might easily blow up from within, if once their masses realised what a disaster this failure really meant.

"Don't you make any mistake about that. No one knows the magnitude of their effort can fail to appreciate the meaning of its failure. We expected a big stroke, but when it came it utterly surpassed anticipation.

"There were three critical points in the battle as I see it. The first was at the end of the opening phase, that of fighting in the outer positions from the 22nd to days on the 25th when we had to withdraw without losing cohesion or giving them a chance to rush up and break our line. There have been some fine retreats in this war. From Von Kluck's at the Marne to Sarrail's in Serbia; but when history is written that retirement before Verdun will rank with the best of them.

"The second crisis of the battle was their success at Douaumont. Of course as a fort, there wasn't much left after the bombardment, but the position was immensely valuable. I have not seen the fort lately, but a few months ago it was just a series of armored tunnels. The central enclente, where I understand, the remnant of the Brandenburgers are holding out, was quite small, just containing a central turret, armed only with a mitrailleuse or small revolver cannon and a heavy armored observation post. I would have given ten years of my life to see our counter-attack that re-won the position.

"It was the same corps—"the Iron division" we call them—the famous 'troupes de choc,' who won the battle of Champagne.

"The Douaumont struggle, which was the crux of the whole battle, really illustrates the French and German war methods, contrasted at their best.

"The Germans took the position in a typically brutal, dogmatically scientific fashion by searching artillery preparation applied to the utmost degree, followed by massed assaults pressed home with complete disregard or sacrifice. Our charge was a triumph of the human factor, a victory of the 'legendary furie francaise,' worthy of Napoleon's guardsmen. No troops in the world could have resisted it.

Desperate Attempts.

"The last critical moment was late the same night and early Sunday morning, when the Germans made desperate attempts first from Louvemont along the road leading up to Bras village, on the plateau, and second by a later and less determined stab at turning Douaumont from the south by advance across the plain n near Vaux.

"We could concentrate nearly all the forts on the latter effort, which was weakened by the Germans having to climb a narrow ravine and debouch on a narrow front, affording us an easy mark; but the Bras fighting was quite a different affair and might have been very serious, if not actually critical.

"As the Germans advanced they were sheltered in the ravine from our guns on the plateau to their left and by the Poivre and Talon spurs from our batteries across the river, but it was the latter on Charny Heights, that finally smashed them when they reached charging distance. I saw that myself. It was just as if the plateau edge had been mined. The explosions were so continuous that the whole section was covered with a cloud of smoke through which one saw flashes.

"On came the lines of men in which huge rents were being torn, but which always seemed to fill up again, and over everything was a shower of earth, trees, and limbs of bodies flung into the air continuously. They actually managed to advance some distance; then our mitrailleuses jolted in, and they simply lay down in rows.

"The Germans may talk of their howitzers, but our artillery is inimitable. The gunners literally fire to an inch. At Verdun it was especially well organized. The commander is a wonder. You know '75s'. He showed the Germans what French artillery meant at the first battle of Verdun in 1914, when he smashed a whole Bavarian division with three batteries of 'seventy-fives.'

"He gets there because he insists on seeing everything himself—never leaves things to chance or to others. It is no exaggeration to say that he planned every round at Verdun. He is a little, slim nervous chap with a short, square, gray beard and brown complexion. He has the habit of appearing at unexpected moments, and woe betide any wretched local commander who hasn't got everything just as it should be.

"It is men like him—and there are plenty of others—that will win this war for France. You know if Frenchmen are properly led they can go anywhere. That's a truism as old as Napoleon.

"The end of the war may be nearer now than most persons imagine. Anyway as regards Verdun there is no longer cause for anxiety. We have had time to bring up supplies and reinforcements and the more the fighting is prolonged the less chance the Germans have. Then, perhaps, when they abandon the attack, disspirited we may have something to say which the enemy may not find so easy to answer.

"Whisky is made to sell—not to drink," is the sign prominently displayed throughout one of the big distilleries of Canada. Most of the employes of the concern are teetotalers. Police records for that community, which is built around the whisky industry, show fewer arrests for drunkenness than for almost any other city of its size in the Dominion.

WILL PROTECT MEN BY MORATORIUM

LONDON, March 3.—The Daily Express says to-day that the Government has definitely decided to recommend a moratorium for contractual obligations, such as rents and insurance, for all men serving in the army or navy. The newspaper adds that the announcement in the form of a proposed law, will be made in the House of Commons next week.

TEN THOUSAND MEN REQUIRED FOR FARMS OF WESTERN CANADA.

The Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta require ten thousand men from Eastern Canada and the United States for spring and summer farm work this year. There will be an abundance of employment for all men willing to work on the land. Owing to the big task of gathering in the record harvest, much ploughing and similar work was left undone last fall and even with the aid of modern farm machinery, now in general use throughout the west, this will call for a large army of men. In order to take care of this demand and induce desirable people to settle in Western Canada the Grand Trunk System has arranged to run on Tuesday, March 7th, and on each Tuesday thereafter until the end of October special home-seekers' excursions from all points in Canada. Full information can be obtained from any Grand Trunk Agent.

A HIGH-GRADE HAVANA FILLED CIGAR, FINE SUMATRA WRAPPER.

The cigar smoker will do well if he selects the improved "Halpins Ten" cigar, manufactured by the Peterborough Havana Cigar Co.

We received a large shipment of imported leaf early in January and have the manufactured article now on sale at all the leading cigar stands. Our 1915 product was a high-grade cigar, yet we can say unhesitatingly that the 1916 production is superior. The 1916 "Halpins Ten" cigar is second to no ten cent cigar on the market, and it retails at 4 for 25 cents. We are putting forth every effort to attract the patronage of the cigar smokers and would earnestly solicit a trial, which we feel sure will merit your continued patronage. 26d-28

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 14—Health of Body Affects Eyes

THERE are hundreds of cases where a person's system becomes run down, and weakened by sickness. When that is the condition, we do not wonder at finding the limbs tire easily, arms feel too heavy to lift, and almost refuse to do as we want them to. Then why wonder what is the matter with your eyes at such times. They tire quickly the same as any other part of the sick body.

Dr. Fowler does not pretend to prescribe for sickness of the body, but he can by a simple test determine whether glasses will help the eyes, or you should be left entirely in the hands of your physician, and he will be very glad to give honest advice to any such who call at his optical parlors.

MAKE PAYMENT FOR EVERY WIFE

PETROGRAD, March 3.—The problem of separation allowances to the multitudinous wives of Mohammedan soldiers, has presented itself to the Russian Government, which has long been considering whether a monthly allowance is to be paid to all the wives or only to the 'favorite.'

In such cases it has finally been decided that each wife is entitled to payment, which means a considerable addition to the army budget, as some of the soldiers have as many as 20 wives.

The Steam Auxiliary Pumping Plant Has Proved Its Efficiency

The advantage of a steam auxiliary plant at the pumping station has been illustrated by the fact, as cited by Mr. T. F. Matthews last night, that three times this winter anchor ice clogged the machinery operated by water power, and for a considerable time the city would have been without fire protection and household water had the auxiliary steam pumping plant not been available. The complete efficiency of the city's water works has thus been exemplified, although the citizens were not aware of it.

BLACK FOX INDUSTRY REVIVING

The Black Fox industry which, owing to the war, has been in an unsatisfactory condition, has recently revived. There have been sales of black fox pelt from the Canadian fox farms, in New York, at high prices. This will be of interest to some of our Peterborough citizens who are financially interested in a fox breeding company. It is now proposed to improve the conditions of the industdy by adopting the co-operative principle in the raising of foxes and the marketing of the pelts.

Still No Change in the Positions on the Verdun Front

The French Forces Heavily Reinforced Are Holding Strong

Berlin War Office Admits Loss of Positions to the British at Ypres

Violent Fighting is Reported at Labassee Canal---Vessel Believed to Be German Commerce Raider Chased by French and British Cruisers.

BOULOGNE, March 4.—A vessel believed to be a German commerce raider steamed through the English Channel at top speed. French and British cruisers have started the chase.

BERLIN, March 4.—The War Office admits the loss of positions at Ypres to the British, and reported operations still in progress. Violent fighting took place at LaBassee Canal.

LONDON, March 4.—A German seaplane returning from England was yesterday picked up by the French off the Belgian coast.

LONDON, March 4.—The British Government has adopted a new plan to eliminate inconveniences suffered by American shippers owing to the blockade, says Lord Cecil.

CAIRO, March 4.—Sid. I. Barani, a town in Western Egypt, has been occupied by British forces.

LONDON, March 4.—A Salonika despatch says the Bulgars attacked the Greeks near Matzikono.

LONDON, March 4.—Four German army corps have been withdrawn from the East to fill gaps in the army attacking Verdun.

French Troops Have Completely Blocked All German Attempts To Capture Pepper Heights

LONDON, March 4.—French troops under General Petain have completely blocked all German attempts to capture Pepper Heights, north of Verdun by a flank attack, according to Paris despatches to-day. Driven out of Douaumont village, Petain is making a stand around the strong redoubt, less than a mile southwest of Douaumont. Here the French have repulsed with heavy losses successive charges by the Teutons, who hope to penetrate the French front and cut off the defenders of Pepper Heights.

The battle all around Verdun has now been resumed. Fighting as as fierce as on the early days of the Crown Prince's drive. The Germans are wasting lives lavishly, rolling up regiment after regiment to smother French artillery fire. Delayed despatches from Paris to-day admit that the Germans hold practically all of Douaumont village, but report desperate fighting on the western outskirts. The Teutons have renewed their attack on the Village of Vaux, preliminary to a grand assault on Fort De Vaux, just south of the village. The French were driven out of Douaumont village, after hot infantry fighting that began Wednesday night and continued for more than twenty-four hours. Probably no more furious struggle has been waged in the history of the war for the possession of a little group of less than seventy-five houses. The town's importance lay in the fact that it was the intersecting point of three highways.

Riversides Win From Frontenacs

THINK IT OVER.

Many people have been puzzled and perplexed as to why God did not stop the war. The famous British preacher, Father Bernard Vaughan, takes another view. He says:

"I feel that it would take eternity to thank God for not having stopped the war, as He might have done. If it had been deferred ten years my beloved country would have been a Mongolian desert. Talk of Belgium, speak of Poland, or the Serbians—that is child's play to what would have become of hated England. Our dear island home, with its cathedrals, minsters and abbeys, would have been utterly destroyed. We should have nothing left to us but our eyes to weep with. But God, being almighty and wise, and loving, spared us."

Made in Canada by Canadians.

Lady Mabel Smith, sister of Earl Fitzwilliam, admits that before the war she had never saved a cent, but that during the war she has closed her home and dismissed her servants; has her shoes resoled; has stored her automobile, refused to buy expensive gowns and flowers; declined to use butter, buying margarine, and is putting all her savings into the national war loan.

REQUIRES BUT LITTLE MORE FOR U.S.A. TO WAR WITH GERMANY

Neutral Diplomats Foresee an Early Break With Germany

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 4. — Representatives from several neutral countries admitted they realized it required but little more for the United States to be at war with Germany. Severance of diplomatic relations, they agreed, surely would come to pass within a brief period. It is for that reason there will be no changes in the various diplomatic staffs, although it is known that some of the attaches have made requests to be transferred.

A native of Holland, who has been in Africa, who recently arrived here, asked a man high up in a foreign government what Germany really was fighting for.

"Does she want Paris, Petrograd, Calais, Alexandria, or what?" he asked.

"She wants peace," is said to have been the answer of the man, who is extremely familiar with the staff of the German Embassy.

Gold from Austria—practically all the gold in that country—has been shipped to Berlin because it has been demanded by the Germans, and gradually, it is said, Austria is getting in much the same position as Bulgaria with her dominant ally.

H. Brandeis, one of the principal agents of the Austrian Consolate here, thought he was wily enough to outwit the British seamen. He was not, and it was learned recently that there was much consternation in the Bernstorff camp when it became known that Brandeis had been taken from a prisoner of war.

L. P. Lochner, who was secretary of the Henry Ford Peace delegation, who took up his headquarters in Berlin, has been forced to leave there at a time when, it is said, he was enjoying the society of S. S. McClure. Mr. McClure sought a passport to go to England, and has been dismayed at the idea that he will not be permitted to set foot on the shores of Great Britain. Mr. McClure is said to be wonder-struck at this and also much irritated.

Furthermore it has been learned that when the Brandenburgers made their drive at Verdun they did not know what they were accomplishing in Berlin. Their efforts apparently were not appreciated, for as soon as they captured Douaumont the market in Berlin fell.

The British Post Office has sent more than 50,000 of its staff to the war. Of these 10,000 London has contributed 2,500; Manchester district, 1,500; Liverpool district, 1,500; Birmingham district, 1,250; Glasgow district, 1,200, and Edinburgh district 750.

EVERY THREE MINUTES ONE DIES IN THE U. S.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society illustrates the frightful toll of consumption by extinguishing a light every three minutes, and shows that it is the man or woman, girl or boy, who neglects colds, whose blood is impure, who feels weak and languid, who is the very one to contract tuberculosis—and none are immune.

During changing seasons, or after sickness, blood-quality is most important, and if you and your family will take Scott's Emulsion after meals it will charge your blood with health-sustaining richness, quicken circulation, and strengthen both lungs and throat.

Scott's is free from drugs—easy to take—it cannot harm. Get a bottle to-day.

Turkey in An Uproar And Surrender of Large Forces Is Anticipated

German Aeroplane Which Raided England Brought Down by French Warships---Observer Drowned and Another Taken Prisoner

PARIS, March 4.—The Government announces that three thousand French troops were lost in the transport La Provence on February 26th.

PARIS, March 4.—There has been no change in the positions on the Verdun front. French forces are heavily reinforced and holding strong.

LONDON, March 4.—The German aeroplane which raided England Wednesday was brought down by the French warships. One observer was drowned and another taken prisoner.

TORONTO, March 4.—To fill the depleted ranks of farm labour in the province fifteen thousand boys will be released from High Schools from May to October.

ATHENS, March 4.—Despatches here say Turkey is in an uproar and the surrender of large forces in Asia Minor to the Russians and the British is imminent.

Aerial Torpedoes and How They Are Operated

From the outbreak of the war there have been almost innumerable predictions as to what might, logically, be expected of air warfare developments, in a very general way. Many of these were ridiculed as impossibilities. Some of them have not yet been realized. But, many of them have been far more than realized. The wildest prophesies as to size, speed, armour, armament, and stability have been far exceeded. Special gun mounts and special guns have been developed for many of these new planes. The carrying capacity, too, has been developed far beyond what has ever been considered even remotely probable. In fact, aeroplanes have already been made, to a very great extent, fool proof. It is very difficult to realize that it is only a few years since the most reliable aeroplanes were considered virtual death traps, in which only the most dare-devil men would risk a flight. Recently, wireless control has been applied to aeroplanes so that they may be started and navigated without a living soul aboard. And about the latest development is the invention of an aerial torpedo and its combination with the wireless controlled aeroplane. This aerial torpedo is made to fly through the air exactly as the famous Whitehead torpedoes rush through the sea and they are directed by wireless to exactly the spot desired. Thus, it is now possible to load an aeroplane with a number of these aerial torpedoes, start it toward a given point, guide and control it by wireless, and when it reaches the point automatically release the torpedoes, and then direct them by wireless to the exact fort battery, or the like to be blown up. What defense could there be against such weapons? We may well ask: "Is there anything really impossible in the present age?"

THE DECLINE IN FLOUR

Present Outlook is Uncertain—New Laid Eggs—The Market Situation

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

News that will be welcome to the public and not at all unwelcome to the trade is the decline which took place in flour this week. This dropped 20c a barrel and together with the last week's drop of similar size the price of flour has decreased 40c within the last two weeks. This column stated a couple of weeks ago that a quietness in the market was not at all unexpected and when this materialized into a definite easement in prices, the trade was not surprised. The fact of the matter is flour market has been a victim, as it were, of a number of complicating influences. The matter of ocean freights has got steadily worse. Notwithstanding the exceptionally high prices which have been demanded by shippers for room on ocean-going vessels, this room was by no means always available. In fact reservations which have been made sometimes six weeks or two months before the date of shipping have been cancelled on the exporter at last minute. Naturally this reacted on the export demand for goods, which ceases when importers overseas can't procure supplies of flour ordered. English importers cannot be certain of just when they will get them or whether they would reach here at all. Overseas buyers are just as anxious as ever they were for flour and wheat but they naturally, even in a time of war, want to be as sure as possible of when they may expect arrival. So that export demand, owing to the tie-up in freight, has slackened. Also the Argentine and Australia have both been exporting supplies of wheat, as both of them had exceptionally large crop surpluses.

Wheat Market.

The wheat market in Canada during last week or ten days has tumbled extraordinarily. Drops of 3 and 4 or 5 and 5c a day have been noted, although at time of writing there seems to have been a check and partial recovery. The outlook at present shows no sign whereby one may be safe in either predicting an advance or further decline.

New-laid eggs have now gotten down to a price where consumption has become much more free and there is great demand, a better demand than deliveries can take care of. Nevertheless, prices still continue to show a slight decline and probably will for some time. Inasmuch as the American market is exceptionally supplied with new-laid eggs. These can be laid down in Eastern Canada at present at a price of 26½c per dozen and so long as that condition remains, the price of new-laids in Canada cannot very well go much above what it now is. In other words, the excess of new-laids in America, which is exportable, is a sort of sword of Damocles hanging over the heads of Canadian eggmen. Supplies of Canadian new-laids continue to come more and more easily and should gradually reach up to the condition where they can adequately take care of demand. At present, however, this condition does not exist and prices are firm, though owing to conditions mentioned above, it is not likely they will go higher.

Food cooked in vessels that are not thoroughly washed cannot have a good flavour.

If you want to peel oranges, pour boiling water over them and let them stand for five minutes. They will peel easily and all the bitter white skin will come off with the rind.

To Discard Aged or Weather-Soiled Skin

To free your skin of blotches, roughness, muddiness, over-redness, freckles or any cutaneous difficulty, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolised wax. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off next morning. Immediately the offending surface skin begins to come off in fine powder-like particles. Gradually the entire cuticle is absorbed in this way, causing no pain or inconvenience. Nor does the face exhibit any evidence of this treatment. The second layer of skin now in view presents a sparkling beauty and youthful robustness obtainable in no other way we have ever heard of. The mercolised wax can of course be found in any drugstore and you won't need more than an ounce of it.

To free yourself of wrinkles or crow's feet, there's nothing better than the ordinary lotion. You need only dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and bathe your face in the solution. The effect is quite remarkable, the lines being less in evidence even after the first application.

"I came across an advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The first night I put them on I felt as if a piece of ice had been put on my side. It was so refreshing and cool. I continued using them until I was completely cured." (Signed) A. Hamplian, July 3, 1914.

BY LOUIS TRACY

Peridot thrust his head into the hatch. "Ma'mselle," he said, "these poor devils' teeth are chattering with the cold. Will you pass the cognac?"

Yvonne felt the urgency of the request. Nearly every man was wet to the skin, and the wind bit keenly. She abandoned her nurse's work for the moment, opened a locker, and produced a bottle of generous size.

"Here you are," she said. "See that a little is left. I have given some to the men, and I hope my other invalid will soon be able to take a small quantity."

The fisherman removed a plug which had replaced the ordinary cork, and handed the bottle to Captain Popple. The brandy was a fine old liquor, brown, and mellow, and smooth to the palate, and Popple took a draft worthy of a Russian grand duke.

"Gosh!" he said, passing the bottle to Ingersoll, "that's the stuff! It warms the cockles of yer heart."

Ingersoll swallowed a mouthful. It seemed to restore his wits. The eye of the lighthouse had changed from red to green. "It is singular," he said, "how a quality of evil can be associated with certain colours. Red means danger and possible death, while green implies a jealous love perilously akin to hate."

He had not the least notion of the incongruity of such a remark just then. He might have been making conversation for some boarding-school miss whom Yvonne had brought on a summer cruise.

The other man, puzzled, stared into the gathering gloom.

Ingersoll roused himself, as though from sleep, and indeed he had been wholly unconscious of his surroundings during the last few minutes. "Oh doubtless," he said apologetically. "I was thinking aloud, a foolish habit. You were telling me about the owner of the Stella. Carmac is the name, I think? I knew a Walter H. Carmac many years ago. He was very tall, but slightly built. Surely a man cannot change his physique so markedly in the course of, say, twenty years!"

"Well, as to that, Sir, on'y the other day I was talkin' of Mr. Carmac's size to Mr. Raymond, the gentleman with the broken arm (Mr. Carmac's secretary, he is), an' he said the guv'nor used to be thin as a lath once. P'raps it was a case of laugh and grow fat. Very pleasant gentleman, Mr. Carmac was; an' his lady too—one of the best. Excuse me, Sir, but I couldn't help starin' at your girl. She's that like Mrs. Carmac it's surprising. If anyone said they was mother and daughter, I'd agree at once—if I didn't know different."

There was a pause. Peridot had intrusted the supply of brandy to Tollemache for further distribution. He came aft now, as careful piloting would soon be needed.

"Once we're inside, Monsieur," he said, "we'll set the men at work by turns with the sweeps. That will drive the chill away."

"Did the yacht belong to Mr. Carmac?" went on the artist.

"Yes, sir. He bought her a fortnight ago. She used to be Lord Aveling's Nigger; but Mr. Carmac didn't like that name, and changed it to the Stella, after his wife's Christian name."

"He didn't care to sail in a yacht called the Nigger, eh?"

A bitterness of aloes was in the words. Apparently they suggested some unpleasing notion to Popple, who branched off to another topic.

"I've a sort of idea his heart was affected," he said. "I know that some bigwig of a London doctor recommended a long voyage, and Mr. Carmac bein' several times a millionaire he just up and grabbed the first suitable craft that offered. He wouldn't wait for a survey. He took everything for granted; though I warned him that white paint may cover a lot of black sins. He an' the missis had planned a regular tour in the Mediterranean, goin' from Gib to the Balearics, and didgin' in and out of ports all along the north coast until we brought up at Constantinople some time in April. I advised him to let me meet him at Gib or Marseilles; but he was one of the men who will have their own way, and nothin' would suit but that he should come straight aboard. We left Southampton Tuesday evenin', and made Brest yesterday afternoon. To-day we were for callin' at Belle Isle and berthin' at Lorient; but the foul weather met us, an' he was half inclined to put in at this very place we're headin' for,—Pont Aven is the name, isn't it?—on'y poor Mrs. Carmac wouldn't hear of it. She said Belle Isle was no distance, an' made out she was a good sailor—which was hardly correct, because she was ill as could be for the last two hours."

"Why didn't you turn back?"

"There was no turnin' back about Mr. Carmac, sir. He wasn't built that way, bein' a sure enough American. Though I've never known anybody more devoted to his wife than he was, he ought to have let a younger man take her across to your boat. Not as I mean to argy that anyone could have held up against that sea. Lord love a duck! it was a oner an' no mistake! But there, what has to be will be. Poor Mr. Carmac was fated to hand in his checks on the coast of Finistere, an' we others weren't, and that's all there is to it; though I'd be flyin' in the face of Providence if I didn't say in the same breath that if four of the pluckiest and best hadn't been aboard this 'ere craft, none of our little lot would ever have seen daylight again."

Tollemache joined them. He had just exchanged a word with Yvonne, who had evidently placed her guest in a bunk, because the gleam of an oil lantern came through the open hatch, and, like the good yachtswoman she was, she had passed out the side lights trimmed and ready for use.

"Well, Ingersoll," he said cheerily, "how are you feeling now?"

"Rather tired," was the unexpected answer.

"I'm not surprised at that. You've had a pretty strenuous time."

"Of course you, Lorry, have had the day of your life!"

"Y-yes. I wouldn't go through it again, though, for a small fortune: that is, with Yvonne on board. It was nip and tuck when we were jammed up against the reef."

"It didn't take you long, sir, for all that, to jump in after Mrs. Carmac," said Popple.

"Oh, is that the lady's name? What a weird specimen one of your sailormen must be! I asked him the name of the yacht's owner, and he didn't know it."

"If it's the beauty I saw you talkin' to, the swine didn't know his own name when he kem aboard at Southampton," snorted Popple indignantly. "Sink me! I've never seen a man so loaded. Took me for his long-lost uncle. Me, mind you! If I hadn't been rather short-handed, I'd have run him ashore to find an uncle in a policeman."

"He is sober enough now," laughed Tollemache. "I had some difficulty in persuading him to take a sip of brandy. He said he was a teetotaler."

"He what? Which one?"

"That fellow there, leaning against the mast."

"Of all the swabs! Look here, sir, you come with me an' listen!"

"But I don't want to get the poor chap into a row."

Tollemache, an overgrown schoolboy in some respects, accompanied Popple gleefully. Broken scraps of the skipper's comments boomed back to Ingersoll's unheeding ears.

"Guess you signed the pledge when the shaft snapped. . . . Coughin' up stale beer all Tuesday night, an' all nex' day made you feel you weren't fit to die on a Thursday. . . . You can't run a bluff of that sort on Saint Peter. He'd smell your breath a mile off an' say, 'To the devil with any Jack who can't take his liquor decent-like when he's paid off without fillin' up when he's signed on!' . . . You struck a wrong job in goin' to sea. You ought to be a brewer's drayman."

"Peridot," said Ingersoll suddenly, "you saw something of the lady's state of collapse when you pulled her on board. She is not likely to recover her senses before we reach Pont Aven?"

"No, Monsieur, I think not. Women are marvels at times; but this one may not even live. Mademoiselle Yvonne is doing what she can——"

At Folkestone, Eng., the other day two men were sent to jail for two months with hard labor for supplying cognac to members of the Canadian regiments. A Canadian doctor testified that there were more than forty drug cases in the military hospitals.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Liberator

A Story of How a Small Boy Tries to Imitate Lincoln

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Little Azariah Ichabod Peters sat on the topmost rail of the fence and looked thoughtfully down at the shiny new rubber boots that encased his fat legs. A warm overcoat was buttoned tightly about his form, and on his black, woolly head was drawn a bright red toboggan cap that matched his red mittens.

"I reckon I'm mighty lucky," he mused. "Jes' t'ink, dat ole Sandy Claws a-bringin' me all dese yere spandy new closes w'en my ole ones warn't all wore out yit! Now, dat no 'count Caesar Woodson he say it's jes' because my pappy has a butler job at de hall an' gits a sight ob munny far standin' behin' Marse Clement's cha'r dat I kin hev all dese t'ings, but I likes to t'ink dat yere ole Sandy Claws brung some ob 'em. O Lawdy me! I done forgot Marse Abe Linkum an' how granny gwes if he hadn't set grandpap free my pappy couldn't hev a butler job an' git a sight of munny. I dunno!"

WILL JONES

"Whah yo' hen, Lil' Azariah?" said his old granny. "I guess yo foeses is mos' froze off; come close to de fiah an' warm up."

Azariah Ichabod sat down on a stool near the stove and slowly removed his outer garments. "Granny," he hesitated, "did ole Marse Sandy Claws bring dese closes to me or did Marse Abe Linkum?"

"Marse Linkum?" Granny stared over her spectacles. "Dat good man been dead an' berried dis fifty year. How come it yo' got dem mixed up, 'lass now, Lil' Azariah, I guess yore recollectin' whut granny said to yo' 'bout how if Marse Linkum hadn't set de slaves free mebbe yore pappy wouldn't be wurkin' up to de hall an' earnin' sights ob munny far us."

"I wish ye'd tell me all 'bout dat yere Marse Abe Linkum ag'in, granny," said Azariah.

Both Granny Peters and Azariah Ichabod were in tears at the conclusion of her recital, and when granny had brought forth the brown covered "Life of Abraham Lincoln" the old woman and the little boy pored over its crude woodcuts and large type with complete forgetfulness of the burning potatoes in the oven.

"Yore pappy larned his letters in dat yere book," said granny proudly, "and yo' recomember dat he larned yo' yores too. Now, dears' you never forgit, lil' Azariah, dat yo' larned yo' fust readin' in Marse Abe Linkum's book."

"S'posin' yo' read a lil' 'bout him now," coaxed grassy, thrusting the book into his hands. She lighted a kerosene lamp and fished the charred potatoes out of the oven with philosophic cheerfulness and thrust in another batch. "Begin now, honey."

Azariah Ichabod opened the book at the first chapter and ran a small black finger along the lines, reciting glibly what he had already learned by heart under the tuition of his father.

"Marse Abe Linkum was bo'n on Febry twelve in de yeah—what's de matter, granny?" Azariah paused as Mrs. Peters grasped the book from his hand.

"Lil' Azariah," cried his grandmother excitedly, "I done forgot whut yore pappy said dis mornin'. He come down from de no'th whut he'd found, an' see he, 'Termorrer will be Marse Abe Linkum's birthday, an' dey's gwine ter celybrate it up no'th. It's all in dis yere paper. Now, do yo' tell Azariah ter git some er dat creepin' stuff from de woods an' hang ober Marse Linkum's pictur'.' I declar' I done forgot all about it, an' yore pappy'll be mighty struck if yo' doan' do it."

"I'll git it in de mornin'. Dat Marse Linkum mus' have been drefful good ter make folks 'member his birthday. I wish I was like dat man, granny. I reckon I'd do jes' as he did," asserted Azariah warmly as he drew up to the table prepared by his grandmother.

"Lil' boys kin do jes' as much good in dere way," said granny wisely.

"I couldn't set nobuddy free."

"Yaas, yo' could set somebody free," said granny suddenly. "Whah's dat lil' rabbit yo' found in yo' trap yistiddy?"

Azariah rolled a startled eye at his grandmother. "It's locked up in de woodshed. I reckon dat yere lil' rabbit likes me mo'n he does to run aroun' de col' woodses, granny. I want ter keep him, I do!"

"Go 'long, Azariah Peters. I's 'shamed ob yo', I declare I am, wid dat example ob Marse Abe Linkum right befo' yo' all de time. Doan' yo' talk to me!"

"Tomorrer I'll let him go free. Den I'll be some like Marse Linkum. I reckon I'll give him some cabbidge now," and Azariah left the table and went to his little captive, while granny bobbled around the room singing in a high, cracked voice.

The next day Azariah's first duty was to go to the adjacent woods and search under the covering of dead leaves for trailing vines of sassafras and "old man's hand," with which to adorn the large picture of Abraham Lincoln which hung on the kitchen wall.

After that he took the little gray rabbit from the woodshed and stumped doggedly across the winding path to the upland pasture. He could feel the beating of the little frightened heart against his hand, and he snuggled the little furry body closer into his neck.

"Doan' yo' be 'fraid, lil' rabbit. I's gwine ter take yo' straight ter yore mammy," he comforted it. Then at the pasture fence he kissed the trembling animal and set it on the ground. For an instant it crouched, frightened and tense, and then with a bound it left him and disappeared in the hedge.

"Lawdy sakes!" ejaculated the round eyed Azariah. "I didn't reckon it made folkses so glad to git away. I wished I could be moah like Marse Linkum an' set moah folkses free." He walked meditatively back to the cabin and peered through the palling into the chicken yard. "I reckon yo' chickens would be mighty glad to git away. But I doan' know what granny'd t'ink erbout dat."

All the afternoon little Azariah pondered over the story of Abraham Lincoln and the lesson taught by his noble life. Toward night he went the lonely two miles into Collinsville to replenish the molasses jug. As he was leaving the town on his way home he came across that scapegrace Caesar Woodson, and, wonder of wonders, that marvel of hardness and abandoned wickedness was bawling lustily in the back yard of his father's isolated cabin.

"Mah pappy he's gone ter jail!" he wept noisily in response to Azariah's solicitous inquiry. "Kunnel Fenn he tole de constable dat dere wus only five chickens lef' in his roos', an' he said pappy had sold 'em ober ter de town folkses. An' all becus de kunnel could only find five chickens in his roos' dey locked my pappy up!"

Henry Woodson's reputation as a connoisseur of fine poultry was too well known in the county for Azariah Ichabod Peters to express much surprise or indignation over that colored gentleman's incarceration in the lock-up. Nevertheless as he left his playmate and went his homeward way his little heart was filled with pity for the genial Mr. Woodson, who was confined within four walls away from the sunshine and the crisp February air and corn pone and sweet potatoes. Azariah wondered what Mr. Abraham Lincoln would have done in like circumstances, and he finally concluded that Mr. Lincoln would have made every effort to obtain the freedom of Henry Woodson and restore him to the bosom of his family.

Azariah hid his molasses jug in the hedge, and, turning his shiny rubber boots toward the town he had just left, he trotted swiftly back, turning and twisting until he reached the small, isolated brick building that served as a temporary place of confinement for the evildoers of the vicinity. The little boy crept up under the small barred window, and in the falling darkness his form became part of the shadows.

"Hi, Mr. Woodson!" he hissed anxiously.

There was a shuffling step across the floor, and Henry's rich voice came in a hushing whisper: "Who's dere? Is dat yo', Caesar, yo' lim' ob Satan?"

"It ain't Caesar. It are somebuddy like Marse Abe Linkum come to set yo' free," whispered Azariah. "Jes' yo' tell me how an' I kin do it."

"Lawsy me!" ejaculated Mr. Woodson. "Lemme see. I reckon I oughter know dis yere ole lockup like a—like a coop. He, he! Whoever yo' be, do yo' know whah my house is?"

"Yaas."

"Well, yo' run erlong an' bring me er crowbar outer my shed. Put yo' han' inside de do' an' it's in de corner. Fetch it heah."

Azariah went and without adventure he returned with the desired implement, and at Henry's direction he handed it through the barred window. That gentleman grabbed it hastily.

"I'm mighty obleeged to you', an' I better not guess who yo' are, but yore shore a mighty little feller. Now, yo' better run erlong befo' de guard comes back from he's supper. Nobuddy 'll know 'twas yo' dat helped me out erway, an' I shill git to Richmond as fas' as I kin till de smell ob chicken has gone from de kunnel's nostrils, he!" he chuckled gleefully.

"Glory, chile, dat I am," said the grateful Mr. Woodson. "Now, yo' run erlong home, Lil' Azariah Ichabod Peters Abraham Lincoln! I'm gwine ter be free!"

Azariah scampered away and reclaimed his molasses jug, and as he trudged the weary lonely two miles homeward every step of his soft rubber boots seemed to emphasize Henry's words in his happy heart.

"Lil' Azariah Ichabod Peters Abraham Lincoln."

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA
NEARLY LOST HIM.
DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "GET RID OF IT."

Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well, in fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for 'Dr. Wood's'."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.

THE ICKEYVILLE CLARION.

There is some concern over the safety of Mr. Elmer Jones, our congenial crayon portrait canvasser who left this town two days ago on a canvassing trip. It is feared that he has met with foul play, as no picture post cards have ben received at the local postoffice for the village milliner.

Mr. Amassa Jones of our village has been stung again. He sent to a mail order house for a glass eye and he can't see with it any better than he could before.

Rev. Hudnutt of the Hardshell church says he thinks his church has paid too much attention to the heathen abroad and not enough to the heathen right here at home. Five of them went to sleep during his sermon Sunday and he had to announce a hymn to drown out the noise.

"CARMEN SYLVA" HAS PASSED AWAY

Queen Mother of Rommania Was a Victim of Pneumonia

WAS A ROYAL POETESS !

Remarkable Romance Attached to Her Marriage to King Charles.

LONDON, March 3.—A Bucharest despatch received by Reuter's Telegram Company by way of Amsterdam says that the Queen Mother, Elizabeth of Roumania (Carmen Sylva) died yesterday from pneumonia.

The pen name "Carmen Slyva" by which the Queen Mother Elizabeth of Roumania was most widely known, was chosen by her in expression of her love for song and the woods. She was one of the most charming figures in the courts of Europe, and practically the only one of the present generations to gain fame as a poetess.

In her own words she was born "far from a throne" for although she was a Princess of Wied, one of the many tiny principalities with which Germany abounded, her youth was that of an ordinary robust country girl who learned to cook and sew and who romped in the open with her companions at the village school. She was born Dec. 29, 1843 ,and in her childhood she showed predilection for the poetical fancies that had such an influence on her later life.

There is a remarkable romance attached to the fact that some years later her suitor became Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, who was refused on the same fanciful pretext that the Princess would not marry unless she could be Queen of Roumania. In 1869, Prince Charles was chosen ruler of Roumania, and in the Autumn of the next year he returned to Wied to remind the Princess Elizabeth of her desire to rule over that kingdom.

David Belasco was smiling at the extravagant attentions that are lavished by the rich upon pet dogs. He spoke of the canine operations for appendicitis, the canine tooth crownings, the canine wardrobes, and then he said:

"How servants hate these pampered curs! At a house where I was calling one cold day the fat and pompous butler entered the drawing-room and said:

"Did you ring, Madam?"

"Yes, Harrison, I wish you to take Fido out walking for two hours."

"Harrison frowned slightly. "But Fido won't follow me, madam," he said.

"Then, Harrison, you must follow Fido."

SPENT COUNTLESS NIGHTS UNABLE TO REST OR SLEEP

Was Run Down and in Terribly Nervous Condition—By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Gained Regularly

In this letter is told once more the story which comes from many thousands of women. It is the story of exhausted nerves, of a run-down system and of all the accompanying misery of sleeplessness, headaches and loss of energy and vigour.

But there is a silver lining to this cloud. There is the light of new hope and courage which comes with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter is so representative of the kind we are daily receiving that you can judge from it what you might expect from this treatment under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R. R. No. 1, Millverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat. Could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that it hurt me to walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams; in fact, I was so bad I thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

You are not asked to expect miracles from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. But if you are willing to feed back your exhausted nerves to health and strength you can depend absolutely on this great food cure to produce the desired results. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7593

One of the leading effects of the present season is found in the combinations of materials, and any design which makes this possible is doubly useful. The illustration shows a style which can be developed in one or two fabrics according to individual preference.

The waist has the side front closing that is now so popular, and the neck is arranged with a standing, flare collar at the back, while the front and sides are untrimmed. The sleeves are full length and are entirely plain. They are full length, but may be shortened and finished with a turnback cuff, which the pattern provides.

The skirt has a deep yoke, the back in one piece and the front in two, and below this is a three gore lower portion. The skirt, like the waist, closes at the side of the front and has a measurement at the hem of 2¾ yards in medium size.

This is one of the styles which will be found satisfactory for combinations of plain and plaid or striped material, for light and dark shades of the same color as well as for one color effects. The dress will be dainty in pale colored gingham, in chambray, and handsome in linen, either white or colored. It is also suitable for light weight woollen materials and for silk.

The dress pattern, No. 7,593, is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 5 yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

BRITAIN'S ARTILLERY ONE OF WAR'S MARVELS

Making of Guns is Most Difficult Feat of All—Training Men Easier

The most amazing feature about Britain's new army, which has transformed a country normally many times removed from the top rung of the military ladder, to one of the greatest military powers of the world, concerns the artillery. Forming new battalions is child's play to creating new batteries. Each battery embraces some 170 men, many of them skilled mechanics, and all of them highly trained. To produce proficient gunners from the raw material is necessarily a long and tedious process, which dare not be hurried. But, above all, ther is the production of the guns themselves.

It speaks volumes for Britain's resources in men and machinery that since war began the artillery arm has developed marvellously from one befitting an army less than half a million to the strength required for a fighting force three millions strong. Yet every new gun of the many hundreds made meant a big task in itself, over a hundred different processes being involved in its manufacture. To the casual eye a big gun is so much steel tubing, with a certain amount of regulating machinery at the breech. But that it is as delicately made and tested as an expensive watch might be the last thing thought of.

To begin with, the steel used in its manufacture is different from ordinary steel; it is produced by the open hearth process, allowing the free play of air, and the great ingots are cast solid. The steel has then to be forged, and, if the gun is of a big calibre, the bore is cut out of the forged ingot.

The selected block of steel, after being placed in a furnace, is thinned under steel hammers or hydraulic presses to the shape required. A disaster to the job may occur at the outset by the ingot being overheated or drawn out too rapidly. The steel has to be forged by degrees to a diameter nearly two inches larger than the finished tube requires to be, but, notwithstanding, the great care taken, it is impossible to avoi strain marks appearing on the bore, and these have to be eradicated by alternate slow heating and cooling.

When this harassing part of the work has been accomplished, the roughly shaped bore is put into a lathe and given its first turning. In many cases the centre of the cylindrical mass is "trepanned," that is, a central ring of steel is cut out. Now comes a peculiar but very necessary operation, nothing less, indeed, than tempering or hardening the metal by means of an oil douche. It is placed in a gas furnace, and when at white heat is plunged into a bath of rape oil, the oil being maintained at a low temperature by a lining of cold water placed all around it. Nor does this finish the tempering, for the bore is again heated to a tremendous temperature and then allowed to cool slowly, the effect of this further operation being literally to take the creases out of the metal.

New Aeroplane Invention

One of the disadvantages of an aeroplane with the propeller in front has so far been that the airman could not fire a machine gun ahead. The bullets would have smashed up the propeller. An English aviator has just invented a method of overcoming this difficulty. It is known as the "deflector propeller." The machine gun is fixed in the position shown, and at the base of each blade of the propeller is fixed a small metal plate. Every time the blade comes opposite the gun muzzle the bullet strikes the plate and is deflected. Only two bullets in every hundred fired hit the metal plate while the propeller is revolving.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

There is no more unfortunate thing than loveless marriage. The sacred relationship is only hallowed by affection, and without love it is worse than mockery — truly the irony of fate. But let the unloving and the unloved be very sure that a worse fate does not await them before taking radical steps to change their condition. There are few wives who will not respond to attentions prompted by a self-sacrificing spirit, and it is an easy matter to repay devotion in kind. Few husbands but are susceptible to sweet and gentle influences, when the guiding spirit is the one whom they promised to "love, honour and protect"; the mother of their children.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

Don't mistake notoriety for fame.

Don't do work unworthy of you if you can avoid it.

Don't say "I am a gentleman;" it is never necessary.

Be loyal to death to those who have befriended you.

Silence is the best weapon to use against a vulgar and spiteful tongue.

In ninety-nine cases in a hundred the man you wish dead outlives you.

Remember impertinence isn't wit, any more than insolence is brilliancy.

If young men will not believe in themselves, no man or woman can believe in them.

Don't indulge in the luxury of strong opinions in the presence of your elders and betters.

If you haven't the moral courage to laugh at sneerers, then you are another of nature's mistakes.

Don't talk about what you are going to do, then, if you fail to accomplish it, nobody will know.

If you learn that people say spiteful, wicked things about you, and untruthful things at that, be silent.

It isn't a very nice thing for a young man, or anyone for that matter, to smile in a superior way at ignorance.

Do not be afraid to go near your enemy. The nearer you get to a kicking horse, the less damage is done to your person.

Courtesies are indications of refinement and costing nothing, they help to make the wheels of life move more smoothly. It is not an elaborate attempt at politeness that true gentility consists, it is the simple homes expression of the genuine feelings of welfare of others. Our company politeness is generally superficial, because we are little or nothing to those we try to be polite to; but if we are interested in those at home and are anxious to make their lives pleasanter, we will endeavour to give expression to that interest, and in doing that we will be doing a really polite thing, for such things can not be expressed in an impolite way. The cultivation of this expression will be the best possible education in true politeness.

When a woman sets her teeth you may generally make up your mind there is trouble hatching.

When a woman can wash flannels so that they will not shrink, she knows enough to get married.

Men are often found at places of amusement spending time in loafing when they might find profitable employment at home, and be making themselves useful, if not ornamental—at the same time, they would stand higher in the estimation of their wives and everyone else.

SPRING AND SUMMER FABRICS

Lace Favoured for Flouncings and Trimmings

SILK SUITINGS POPULAR

NEW YORK, March 4.—Quite as interesting, at the opening of a season, as the new designs themselves and a thousand and one odd little fads which Fashion always presents at her openings, are the new materials in which to fashion these stunning modes. It is amusing to note to what an extent serge is still being used this spring for suits and one-piece frocks. It is not an exaggeration to state that at least nine-tenths of the new spring suits are being made of dark blue serge. "C'est si chic," the smiling little French vendeuse will tell you, and you can read between the words, "and woolen novelties so scarce." In America it is the dye situation which is affecting our woolens, not that we have as yet felt it to any great degree, but as time goes on and dyestuffs continue to get more scarce, it is bound to be felt. We may notice the effect this season in the prevalence of black and white checks, stripes and blocks, and in the popularity of pale shades in suitings. White cotton and wool mixtures, striped or barred with pale tones of gold, blue, green, and thin lines of black are unusually modish.

One of the New Bordered Voiles.

For sport wear there are any number of effective materials; some loose weave plaids with backgrounds of white, pastel broadcloths, barred and plaided in more vivid tones, and some particularly effective hopsacking in plain colours and plaids which may be used for street suits or sport skirts or coats.

Silk Suitings Popular.

The new silk suitings, faille, and the numerous other twilled silks, tussahs, gros de Londres, and heavier ribbed silks are very much the vogue. These silks are particularly well suited to the full skirts of the moment, affording the bouffant effect, and lending themselves most effectively to the cordings, quillings, pleatings and similar trimming notions now smart. These silk suitings come in all shades of tan, buff, blue, rose, mauve and gray.

Taffetas are being used considerably for suit purposes too; there are quantities of plain taffetas being used in combination with bayadere effects, white stripes on black, blue or green grounds. Checks and stripes are particularly smart in taffetas. Pompadour taffetas will be used generally for wraps and the trimming of suits. Light colours will predominate in these suits as in the wool mixtures. It may be safely said that the silk suit will be the mainstay of spring and early summer.

The Novelty Cottons.

There is no paucity of novelties in the new spring and summer cottons; they are most charming, both in colouring and design. Voile forms the basis of the majority of these fabrics; there are printed and striped voiles; voiles striped and barred with openwork or needlework patterns, and voiles striped and barred with artificial silk. Some of the openwork checked voiles are printed and embroidered with bright coloured flowers, oftentimes with quaint, precise, art nouveau figures.

Soft white batistes show hairlines of colour, and are bordered in plain white, edged with the colour; these are the new handkerchief embroidered batistes and are used for lingerie gowns and blouses.

ANOTHER LULL IN VERDUN FIGHT NO INFANTRY ACTIONS ARE REPORTED

Artillery Bombardment Continued With Considerable Activity in Various Sections But Not Followed by Any Infantry Attacks Announces the French Official Communique--Customary Fire Along the Remainder of Front

GERMANS TO BACK DOWN TO AMERICA

PARIS, March 4.—The bombardment continued with considerable activity last night in various sectors of the region of Verdun. It was not, however, followed by any actions of infantry, according to the War Office. At Eparges the French prevented German troops from occupying the crater made by an explosion of one of their mines. Customary artillery fire has continued along the remainder of the front.

GERMANY TO BACK DOWN TO THE U. S.

LONDON, March 4.—A firm stand by the United States Congress will force Germany to back down and remove practically all possibility of war between the two countries, English editors and officials declared to-day. Betting and insurance circles reflected this sentiment and no odds on the possibility of war between Germany and the United States were posted. The Senate's action in upholding President Wilson, not only was a great victory for the President, but undoubtedly will cause great dismay in Berlin, officials and the Press declared.

EXPLOSION IN THE SUBURBS OF PARIS

PARIS, March 4.—Twenty persons were killed and many wounded by a violent explosion at La Courneuvve, near Paris, a suburb of St. Denis, this morning. It occurred at the works known as double Courenne.

Part of the ramparts east of the fort were blown up. The cause of the disaster has not been ascertained. A quantity of explosives including hand grenades was stored in this position. Fire followed and there were further explosions on account of the flames.

Another Exciting Day at Washington

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Another day of excited debate, of crowds thronging to the capitol, and finally a real "show-down" on the Administrations policy with regard to armed merchantmen, was scheduled for Washington to-day. The Administration hoped to obtain from the House a real and definite expression of support of the armed merchantmen policies. President Wilson expected such a vote to sweep aside the widespread doubt and confusion resulting from the Senate mix-up yesterday. The programme was for the House to vote upon tabling the resolution of Representative McLemore of Texas, warning Americans off armed merchantmen, and meeting the President's request for a definite show-down. The House's action was relied upon to clarify the extraordinary situation created by the Senate in tabling Senator Gore's substitute resolution.

BERLIN OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, March 4.—No important German successes around Verdun were recorded in this afternoon's official War Office statement beyond reporting the repulse of French attacks near Obersept, with the capture of 80 prisoners.

BERLIN, March 4.—Constantinople despatches to-day, reporting the arrival at Jerusalem of Enver Pasha, the Turkish dictator, and Dyemat Pasha, commander of the Fourth Turkish army, are believed to signal the beginning of the Turkish campaign against Egypt.

ZURICH, March 4.—Following the publication of "grave" wireless press messages from America in German papers, the Frankfurt Bourse closed yesterday's operations in a condition of panic, according to despatches here to-day.

BIG EXPLOSION IN PARIS OUTSKIRTS.

PARIS, March 4.—Thirty bodies, recovered, and 150 wounded, are in the morgue, the result of a munitions explosion that wrecked the double crown defenses near Fort St. Denis on Paris northern outskirts to-day.

President Poincare and other officials went to the scene this afternoon.

SCHOOL BOYS TO ASSIST IN THE WORK ON FARMS

It Is Estimated That Upwards of 15,000 Male Students Will be Available During the Summer

A SERIOUS SITUATION

TORONTO, March 4.—To fill the depleted ranks of farm labour in Ontario on account of the war, no fewer than 15,000 male students of fifteen years and upwards attending schools and collegiate institutes will be available this summer for farm work, and an effort is also being made to obtain American labour. It is understood that two representatives of the Colonization Department have been despatched to Port Huron and Syracuse to make plans and report as to what help is available there. It is stated that from this quarter 500 or 600 men are aimed at. It is not considered that any difficulties will arise from the authorities on the American side.

A Serious Situation.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, and acting Minister of Education, declared last night that, in view of the loss of valuable help on account of the enlistments of farm labourers, the situation this year from an agricultural standpoint was more serious than before. The Colonization Branch which until recently was under the Agricultural Department, has been changed to come under the Lands and Forests Department. "We have been searching around for available resources of supply. It is, of course, desirous that every man fitted for military service should be freed from obligations that keep him here. In releasing our farm labour we must use every effort and extraordinary emergency measures to meet the present critical situation. We purpose making a somewhat radical departure. We are working out a plan now whereby we will make available no fewer than 15,000 male students who are attending high, public and continuation schools and collegiate institutes in this Province. It will make them available for assistance upon the farm. During the whole of this season, in the present crisis, everybody recognizes that a boy who can drive a team of horses and can do a thousand and one things around a farm can render almost invaluable service, and in this way every young fellow will be able to contribute to the success of the conflict we are waging at the present time. The details of the plan when they are worked out will be announced from the department and emergency regulations made to provide for it.

15,000 Lads Available.

"We will not only make those 15,000 or more young fellows available for work on the farms, but we will make it to their interest and advantage to assist in agricultural work all over the Province during this season. In this way the Government hopes not only to furnish a very large contribution to the ranks of farm labour, but a contribution that should be a most valuable one, because the large percentage of the boys attending these educational institutions are the sons of the farm, and will have more or less practical knowledge of farm conditions that will render their work of real service."

Fifteen Years and Over.

The boys in view are those who are fifteen years and older, and outside the universities it is estimated there are 35,000 in this category. It is likely that the lads will be able to go in for this work about the beginning of May until October. Making allowance for the usual school vacation period, it means the boys who are thus employed will lose two or three months' education, but it is stated that by an arrangement their academic standing will not be allowed to suffer.

THE CALL TO YOUNG CANADA

For Canada, as for every part of the Empire, this is the day of testing. There never has been any real doubt in the minds of military men as to the decisive theatre of the war. It is the western front, on which both sides are now concentrating their forces. The advantage so far rests with the Allies, but if a decisive victory is to be reached within a reasonable period this advantage in numbers and munitions must be steadily maintained.

A new spirit has seized the Allied peoples—the spirit of calm confidence. It is born of the knowledge that everythnig is being done that human foresight can suggest. They have laid their gifts freely upon the altar of patriotism. Everythnig men and women count dear is being sacrificed to the one end—victory over the enemy. What are the sacrifices which Canada so far has made, great as these undoubtedly are, compared with the uncomplaining sufferings of Belgium, Serbia, and Poland, and the burdens laid upon Great Britain and France! Canada has not felt the strain of war. Much gain has come to her farmers and manufacturers owing to the war. Much is still required from her.

The call to-day is to Young Canada to play the man. Canada wants no unwilling conscripts to carry her flag to victory. Young men are needed at the front. There history is being written with the dripping sword, and the fate of nations and of human freedom hangs in the balance. There is the place of duty and honour for every eligible Canadian.—Toronto Globe.

MRS. PANKHURST WILL SPEAK ONLY AT SUNDAY MEETING

Suffragette Leader Will Not Arrive Until To-morrow Morning so That To-night's Meeting Has Been Cancelled---Apsley Platoon Has Strength of 50 Men---To-day's Orders and General Military News

Mrs. Pankhurst will not be able to reach Peterborough in time for the meeting scheduled for to-night and as a result only one meeting will be held, to-morrow (Sunday) evening in the armouries at 8.30 o'clock. A wire received from the famous suffragette leader, who is to speak in the interests of recruiting for the 93rd Battalion, says that she will be unable to arrive here until to-morrow morning and as a result to-night's meeting has been cancelled. The invitations for seats on the platform will hold good for to-morrow night instead. Arrangements have been made for extra seating accommodation for to-morrow's meeting. The band of the 93rd Battalion will render a programme, and the probabilities are that a huge crowd will be in attendance.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Following are the Battalion orders by Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, O.C. 93rd Battalion:

Duties—

Orderly Officer for to-day—Lieut G. D. Mowat.

Orderly Officer for to-morrow — Lieut. P. G. Might.

Parades.

The Battalion will parade on Sunday, March 5th, for Divine Service at 10.20 a.m. The Senior Officer on parade will detail the Officers to take charge of the different denominations to the undermentioned churches:

Anglican—St. Luke's, East City.
Baptist—Park Street Church.
Methodist—George Street Church.
Presbyterian—St. Andrew's church
Salvation Army—S. A. Temple.

The Roman Catholics will parade at 2.45 p.m. Saturday for Church service, under Lieut. Cools. They will also parade at 7.45 a.m. Sunday for divine worship under Lieut. Crisp.

Command—Struck Off—

Armourer Sergeant Grange having reported, will be taken off command from March 4th.

Promotion—The Commanding Officer has been pleased to grant the following provisional promotion:

Lance Sergeant Stanley, to be Sergeant.

J. E. R. MUNRO,
Captain

Cobourg, March 3.—A Canadian boy in the trenches, in a letter to friends, says that he was one of a very small company who held an advanced trench for two days. The company was so small that if the enemy had known its strength they could easily have captured or killed them all. During these two days the only food the men got was brought in by their chaplain, who went through the firing line for it, escaping death in a way the soldiers could not understand. The chaplain who rendered this heroic service was Major (Rev.) Wm. Beattie of Cobourg.

The Apsley platoon of the 93rd Battalion has now a strength of 50 men. The recruiting in the north country is splendid and it is expected that twenty-five or thirty more men will join the detachment before it moves into Peterborough. In physique, bearing and shooting ability the men from the north are of a very fine type, and Capt. Beggot, the officer in command of C company is very proud of his men.

B company team are inclined to treat the challenge of A company for another game with silent disdain. "A company'll have to go and get a reputation," is B company's claim.

GUELPH, March 3.—A more aggressive campaign to bring the Wellington Battalion up to strength is announced to-day by Lieut. Wright, in charge of the recruiting. A personal canvass will be made of the eleven hundred single men still in the city. The figures for the county stand at about 3,400. There are numerous cases of large families of sons in the county where there has not been a single enlistment. Col. Craig has also asked permission of the manufacturers to send recruiting officers into the factories. The county battalion at present lacks about 450 men of being at full strength.

TORONTO, March 4.—The midnight recruiting rally held last night by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association at the Gayety Theatre, brought forth 35 recruits. Among them was George H. Goulding, the champion walker of the world whose achievements in the athletic arena are well known the world over.

"Champions of the type of Mr. Goulding and several others already attached to the 180th Battalion," said Lieut.-Col. Greer, the commanding officer, "serve as loadstones around which other men affiliate themselves. Our aim is to bring together the shining lights of the athletic world, athletes of national and international fame."

Lieut.-Col. Greer told the assemblage that with to-day's recruiting possibilities the Sportsmen's Battalion will have obtained almost 1,000 recruits—the result of three weeks' work, which is a record worth while, and one to be admired by the citizens who have liberally supported the battalion.

Single Men May Be Forced To Enlist

Two of the Police Commissioners Object to the Employment of Single Men on the Police Force —Finance Committee and Commissioners Meet in Joint Session

ECONOMY THE ISSUE

Yesterday afternoon the Board of Police Commissioners and the Finance Committee of the City Council met for the purpose of dealing with the request of the City Council to further prune the estimates for the Police Department, and reduce the police force by one or more men. The Commissioners present were His Honour Judge Huycke, chairman; Police Magistrate Dumble and Mayor Duffus. The Finance Committee was represented by Ald. Stratton, chairman; Aldermen McIntyre, Evans and Weir. Beyond a promise that the matter would be thoroughly looked into, nothing definite was decided upon. His Honour Judge Huycke expressed the opinion that all unmarried men on the police force should enlist, likewise city hall employees and school teachers. So far as city hall employees go there is only about one that might be considered eligible, and he is to be found in the City Engineer's Department. This particular department was referred to by Judge Huycke. Ald. Stratton said that the amount that would be saved by dropping a couple of men off the police force and eliminating a few items in the estimates would pay the interest on seventy thousand dollars worth of debentures.

The Resolution.

As chief spokesman for the Finance Committee, Ald. Stratton said that on February 7th the City Council endorsed a resolution requesting that the estimates be reduced by at least four hundred dollars and that two men be dropped from the force. "We are here to-day," said Ald. Stratton "as the Finance Committee of the City Council, representing the unanimous opinion of that body. Taking the matter up from a financial standpoint we would request the Commissioners to consider the estimates carefully and, if possible, reduce them as suggested, by the Council. We have not the power to dictate to the Commission and readily understand that the Commissioners are desirous of working in harmony with the Council."

Increase in Salaries.

Looking over the estimates, the first thing that strikes us is the increase in salaries, amounting to an extra twenty-five dollars a year for three members of the force. We are of the opinion that the force is too fully manned for such strenuous times as we are experiencing."

Judge Huycke—"Don't you think that the fact that the country is honeycombed with spies justifies us in adding extra men to the force?"

Ald. Stratton—"That may be so, but we have the military police."

Referring again to the estimates, Ald. Stratton said: "We have the Chief Constable drawing a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year who spends most of the time in his office doing clerical work. We think he should be downstairs some of the time and in closer contact with his men. Then there is Sergeant Brown, whom we might designate private secretary, and who receives nine hundred dollars a year. That, with the Chief Constable's salary, makes twenty-four hundred dollars for inside work. This could be done for less. In our opinion the office of

THE FRENCH PEOPLE SERENELY CONFIDENT OF ALLIES' VICTORY

No Single People in all of France Contemplate the Remotest Possibility of Not Winning the War

HUNS CANNOT WIN

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, March 4. — The first question asked me on my return from Paris is what is the temper of the French people? I could answer wholeheartedly, splendidly and serenely confident.

I found this temper even during the first agony of the gigantic attack upon Verdun, when things seemed worst. Premier Briand, by whose side I sat at a banquet given to the delegations, was quite cheerful, and I feel that I may say that no single being in all of France contemplates the remotest possibility of not winning the war.

Referring to Verdun, it is impossible to state either the final result or the real purpose of the German attack. The important question is, is it an isolated attack or the starting point of the final effort of Germany to force an early decision of the war by some striking combination of attacks along the whole Western line, in which all the military and naval forces will advance desperately together.

Germany cannot win through; besides Verdun has ceased to have the importance it once had. It forms nothing more than a series of trenches for defence fighting. But the combats that have taken place show the undiminished valour of the French troops.

Russia and Britain Ready Soon.

It is known to Germany, as it is known to the whole world, that Russia is still ice bound at her many ports, and she still is insufficiently supplied with arms and munitions. Similarly Great Britain has not yet got all possible supplies. On the other hand, both countries will have these supplies by spring, and a joint advance on the Western and Eastern fronts will subject Germany to the biggest strain she has felt since the war began.

Thus the advance on Verdun may be due to the desire on the part of Germany to anticipate this threatened, dangerous attack by the Allies in the spring.

Numbers and money and tenacity, and not positions, will decide this great war. Such positions as Germany so far has gained have entailed upon her armies, losses so gigantic as to diminish, hopelessly, both her resources and her tenacity.

Thus, though we regard the present moment as serious we remain equally confident. In England the new Conscription Act is working smoothly, with little, inevitable jars here and there, owing to the eagerness of the recruiting officers to force the pace.

The most important event would seem to be Ireland's triumphant final victory over faction in the election in County Louth, Healy's old constituency, where a stranger to the constituency defeated, by nearly five hundred votes, the strongest local candidate, simply because Louth had determined that John Redmond's

RECRUITING HELPS.

There seems to be a neglect or failure on the part of those interested in recruiting to recognize the fact that the duty and resulting responsibility of recruiting does not rest solely with the possible recruit. The idea, if not expressed, is implied in some of the appeals made, and in some of the arguments used, that the only duty to be discharged is by the recruit; and that no reciprocal obligation is created by his becoming a soldier.

There is, however, a very palpable and important obligation placed upon those for whom he is fighting or to fight. Men enlist to fight for their country, for the liberties of their country, and the peaceful enjoyment of the advantages and privileges such liberty involves. Obviously, the appeals to recruiting need to be varied to meet the different kinds of temperaments of men. Some men enlist under patriotic or other impulse, if taken at the psychological moment. In such cases recruiting is comparatively easy for both the man urging and the man recruiting. Others make enlistment the subject of more or less mature consideration. They calculate upon the consequences of their action. They are only human and are not keyed up to the point of making sacrifice — putting their lives at risk, in serving their country—without some reasonable assurance, that they will not be mere pawns in the game of war; and that the fighting they do to help us enjoy the liberty they preserve shall not exclude them from being beneficiaries of their own work.

Thousands of young men are called upon to leave lucrative employment, that, in the ordinary course, leads on to fortune; leads to positions of usefulness in the community and the enjoyment of the blessings and privileges of free conditions and free institutions. Such men are not to blame for not being influenced by the appeals of the recruiting orator who, whether he intends or not, virtually says to the young man "enlist"; and seems to think his whole duty discharged when, and if, he hooks his fish.

There would be removed one of the adverse influences to recruiting if young men were made to feel that they were not regarded as mere fighting units, but as citizens, who, by fighting for their rights and our rights, do not forfeit or risk loss of their own. They need to be made feel that if they escape the perils of war and come home unscathed, they will be assured of the place they filled before they enlisted, and will not find it filled to their exclusion and detriment by some slacker who has not lifted his finger to guard the privileges he has enjoyed in peace, thanks to the work of the man he has cuckooed out of his place.

Men enlist to fight for their country, and have a right to the assurance that their fighting will not be in vain; and that they, who are the ones to be chiefly considered, have not been, nor will be, deprived of the rights they have fought to preserve for others—and themselves.

We must not expect the sacrifice to be all on one side. In thousands of cases recruiting would be helped, if those who stay at home, of all classes, were to band themselves together, under a pledge, to see that the returned soldier shall be the first consideration, where a chance for occupation is needed and presented.

If it were made certain that the men who fight to preserve our liberty and what its possession implies, will have their share of its enjoyment, then the recruiting spirit would in thousands of cases be quickened.

This leads to the idea that there is as much need, if we want to create a recruiting spirit, that the stay-at-homes should be mobilized and organized and enlist in a home army that will be fighting the soldiers' battle at home while he is fighting ours on the red arena of war.

A better recruiting spirit would also be created if the government should adopt some definite policy of looking after the returned soldier; something that would be specific and dependable, instead of asking him to trust to vague assurances that "it will be all right" or to trust to the facile forgetfulness and notorious ingratitude of governments.

Promise of a pension, while a good thing is not enough. A soldier with a proper pride and ambition; who has in himself the elements of useful and productive citizenship will not, and should not, be asked to be satisfied with a pension, especially if he is physically fit.

There should be assurance of something better; something that would imply deference to a spirit of independence. A despatch from Sydney, New South Wales, under date of March 1st, states that the government has adopted a comprehensive scheme for settling returned soldiers on the land. The plan is so far matured that suitable Crown lands are being surveyed. Advances are to be made to each settler up to $2,500 for improvements and the purchase of stock and farm implements.

With a plan something like that adopted in Canada, the enlisting soldiers—in thousands of instances farmer's sons and young men of sense and solidity—would be more inclined to "sign up," under the feeling and assurance that their country and government regard them as citizens with rights to recognition and reward after their work is done on the battlefield and they come home with possibilities in them of useful citizenship, if they have half a chance.

EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION.

If one had any doubt of the superiority of commission government, or, rather, administration, over the average aldermanic administration, it is furnished by the record and spirit of the Utilities Commission, especially in regard to the waterworks part of its function. We have foresight, initiative and practical application of ideas, resulting from the use of the mind for thinking. This foresight and enterprise gave the city the dependable element of our waterworks, the auxiliary steam pumping plant. It has demonstrated in practice its theoretical desirability and usefulness. The city council did wisely last night in sanctioning the proposal of the Utilities Commission to extend the effective parts of our mains system—wisely because it would not, judging by results, be wise to thwart the considered and matured plans of the Commission. The new proposal will cooperate with the reinforced efficiency of our pumping facilities, to give even better fire protection for the city, and if the thing is permissible to say, kill the dead ends that interfere with efficient circulation of water, and improve the general pressure throughout the city, for fire protection purposes, as well as for domestic and lawn purposes. When the new mains are laid down we shall have less profanity, or the impulse to it, from citizens who see the puny and exasperating trickle from their lawn hose nozzles when their lawns are dying under excess of solar heat and deficiency of city water supply. So far in its history the Utilities Commission has very amply justified its existence. It has a man of resource, decision and business ability at the head of it; and his usefulness is emphasized by having official associates with kindred qualities.

LABOUR AND PROHIBITION.

This is a free country and the Trades and Labour Council have a perfect right to express their opinions, even if they seem to be a reflection of the arguments of the organized interests hostile to temperance reform. There is no class of the community that suffers more in purse and person, in physical efficiency, in destruction of home and home happiness than the working man, that is, the reckless working man. Thousands upon thousands of working-men's snug and happy homes and the price of thousands of more such homes have gone into the bar till—with nothing to show for the deposit but wrecked manhood. At a meeting, as reported in to-day's issue, a resolution opposing the adoption of prohibition was passed, and arguments presented in support of the action. It was pointed out that closing breweries and distilleries would throw many men out of work. That is doubtless true; but it is to be remembered that where one day's work is lost by such closing there are millions of days' work lost and worse, through the intemperate use of the products of the lab our of breweries and distilleries. The most foolish argument of all presented by the opponents of prohibition is the "personal liberty" fallacy. There is no such thing except in the personal application as personal liberty, and even that has its limits. A man cannot do as he likes even with himself; if he attempts to commit suicide and fails he is put into jail. The first law laid down by the Almighty Creator was a prohibitory law—that restricted the personal liberty of the two first inhabitants of the earth. It is a fundamental truth that personal liberty cannot be exercised at the expense of other persons and the community at large. Apply that truth to the drinking habit and nothing more need be said. "Prohibition will deprive the drink traffic of state control — there will still be drinking." We have laws against every crime, but still crime is committed. Is that an argument for the repeal of these laws? It may easily be that drinking will continue under prohibition. Would one, however, cease throwing water upon his house on fire, if after the first bucketful, the fire continued to burn. Hundreds of years of the licensed drink traffic have fixed drinking habits, and it cannot be expected, that outlawing the traffic will at once destroy fixed habits, and inborn appetites. The only argument advanced that will hold water at all is that the time is inopportune for popular agitation over the subject—to raise a fight within the fight that the whole country is waging. The time is of course inopportune, and that a prohibition fight is brought on now is due to the neglect of the Government to pass legislation to abolish the drink traffic during the war. This would create no controversy to distract attention from the business of waging the great war; and the Government would be as much justified in passing such a law as any other law to prohibit impairment of popular efficiency in doing our share of war work.

NEW LAW FOR ZEPPELINS

Right to Land on Neutral Soil Is Claimed by Germans.

LONDON, March 3.—The German Press is inventing a new doctrine of international law which would save German airships from the possibility of disaster when they cruise over neutral territory. As in so many other cases, the Deutsche Tageszeitung is the pioneer.

Discussing the loss of the L-19, which is ascribed to Dutch gun fire, the Tageszeitung argues that the airship cannot have been lost in a fog, because in fog it would climb as high as possible, and that it must, therefore, have been cruising so low as to be hit by gunfire only because it had been injured and the pilot intended to land for the carrying out of repairs. The writer then maintains that a damaged airship has just as much right to take refuge on neutral soil as a damaged warship has a right to spend a certain time in a neutral port, and he lays it down as a "necessity" that the "rights" of aircraft shall now be definitely determined and that the troops defending neutral territory shall be given "precise instructions and orders."

Needless to say, this doctrine is hailed with delight by many German writers. The Berliner Tageblatt is the subject of much abuse because it remarked that the Dutch were entirely justified in bringing down the Zeppelin.

THE WISDOM AND NECESSITY OF PLANNING AHEAD

In the course of his budget speech Sir Thomas White, finance minister, said: "It may seem premature at this stage of the conflict to touch upon the question of policy to be pursued after its termination." Sir Thomas need not fear that the people regard as premature the consideration of a business-like policy for after-the-war. The public feeling is rather that the government has not done enough in that direction. There will be no criticism of courageous and practical action with a view to planning ahead.

The finance minister stated that the government is fully alive to the importance of taking immediate action, looking to the promotion of desirable immigration and land settlement, both during and after the war and the creation of all necessary machinery and organization to that end. He added: "The future of Canada rests with the development of its great resources, of which the greatest and most fundamental is agriculture, and this development is, in turn, bound up with the question of increase in population, of the productive sort, and the facilities afforded it for the application of its intelligence and industry. It is probable that, in the straitened financial conditions which may prevail for some years forward, the question of capital for the development of agriculture may be of paramount importance, and it is our intention to enquire carefully, during the coming recess into this most important subject with a view, if desirable in the public interest, to supplementing, by federal aid, existing facilities in this connection. Particularly will the question of the establishment of system, whereby loans at reasonable rates, repayable on the amortization principle, engage the attention of the government."

These are important matters, but they are but some of many problems which we should be endeavouring to solve now. Despite its traditional reputation for slow movement and out reputation for hustle, Great Britain has set us an excellent example as to what should be done in war times in preparation for peaceful pursuits. Every phase of the nation's activities are having the practical attention of the British Government. Committees of experienced men are chosen to deal with different problems. A sub committee of the advisory committee to the Imperial Board of Trade on commercial intelligence has, for instance, just made a valuable report with respect to measures for securing the position, after the war, of certain branches of British industry. This report discusses transportation banking facilities, tariffs, trade marks and many other phases of the subject. Being the recommendations of a government committee, reflecting the enterprise of the Government, the Government is not likely to pigeon-hole the report without first having taken some action upon it. We in Canada are certainly busy with the war, but our preparations for the period to follow are sadly lacking.—Monetary Times.

A Bull's Eye.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

LONDON, March 3.—Three members of a crew of Portuguese sailors who were placed aboard the German steamer Schwarsburg are dead as a result of drinking from a bottle labeled "rum" says a despatch from Ponta Del Gada, Azores, to Reuter's Telegram Co., and three others are in a serious condition. Two of the men died instantly, and the other died in a hospital.

It is probable that the Schwarsburg, which was last reported at St. Michael's, Azores, is one of the ships seized by the Portuguese Government.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to the Warner Drug Company, or to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

Room Sergeant could be filled by a probationer, and a man like Sergeant Brown assigned to street duty. Constables Reid and Kidd were recently made patrol sergeants, at an increase in salary, and they spend a lot of their time relieving Brown. These men should be on the street more. Police Constable Wigg was taken on the force temporarily, in place of one of the regular men who was incapacitated. Later on, Wigg was permanently appointed to the force at an initial salary of $650 a year, making one extra man.

Question of Enlistment.

"I am led to believe," said Ald. Stratton, "that a number of the men are anxious to enlist and that the Chief Constable is not anxious that they should enlist, believing that it would lower the efficiency of the force."

Judge Huycke—"The Chairman of the Commission does not agree with him if that is true."

"I know what your record is," said Ald. Stratton, addressing Judge Huycke, and also that of the other members of the Board. I believe that we require for military service the best men that we can possibly get. Where could you get better men? I would suggest that those who do not enlist now be dispensed with after the war is over and their places taken by returned soldiers.

Mayor Duffus—"Hear, Hear."

Back to the Estimates.

Referring again to the estimates there is the matter of telephones. One hundred dollars is provided in the estimates for telephones, whereas the actual bill is sixty-three dollars and sixty-two cents. Then we have an item of ninety dollars for light, despite the fact that this bill has, heretofore, been paid by the city. The sum of $175 is set aside for coal. This means about thirty tons of coal to heat three little rooms, and I can heat a fourteen-roomed house with ten or twelve tons of coal. Printing and stationery costs $122. This is the height of extravagance. Scrubbing out the Station costs $130. That means a scrub woman, earning $1.25 a day, spends a third of a year scrubbing out the police station. Compare this with the scrubbing bill of the caretaker who looks after the entire city buildings. His scrubbing bill amounts to only $70 a year.

Morality Department.

Next we have the morality department. For this the sum of three hundred dollars is provided with one hundred dollars for extras, making in all, four hundred dollars. The three hundred dollars referred to goes to the police matron, Mrs. McElhiney. At a previous meeting I alluded to this as "salary" whereas it is expenses. The work is done very efficiently and cheaply, yet I fail to see why an extra one hundred dollars should be added. Why not provide for the extras out of the miscellaneous account. Then we have an item of one hundred dollars for expenses of the Chief to the Chief Constable's convention. Why not eliminate this as we have done in other departments. Finally, the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars is set aside for incidentals.

A few Statistics.

At this stage, Ald. Stratton quoted the following figures, relative to the population, number of cases recorded, and the number of men employed on the police force since 1905:

1905	14,391	467	4
1915	20,488	486	12

The year 1916 finds thirteen men in the employ of the police department, and a police matron. The increase in the police force since 1905 amounts to over two hundred per cent. while the increase in population amounts to approximately forty-two per cent. Thirteen is an unlucky number and we would suggest that we dispense with the services of ten men, and with three good men at the helm we could employ a number of men who might be incapable of performing active military service. In any case we would suggest that one man be dispensed with and two if possible. Thirty-five dollars could be cut off the telephone bill, four hundred dollars off the item for clothing, fifty dollars off printing and stationery, and the scrubbing bill might form the subject of a conference between the Police Commission and the Property Committee of the City Council, with a view of having the city hall caretaker undertake the work. One hundred dollars for convention expenses might also be deleted, and the three hundred and fifty dollars set aside for incidentals reduced by at least one hundred dollars, making a saving of between fifteen hundred or two thousand dollars. The estimates total over four teen thousand dollars, which is an increase of two thousand dollars over last year.

Expenses Only.

Adjutant McElhiney, who was present at the meeting, rose to explain that what had previously been designated as a "salary" of three hundred dollars for his wife as police matron represented expenses only. The work was done gratuitiously. The amount did not begin to cover the expenses incurred by Mrs. McElhiney. He was glad that Ald. Stratton had taken the opportunity of correcting his previous statement. The extra one hundred dollars was at the disposal of the chief constable in connection with his administration of the morality department.

Mrs. McElhiney explained the operation of her particular department. Over thirty girls had been taken out of the city and cared for at absolutely no expense to the city. Women had been clothed and fed and cared for and comforts supplied to the female inmates of the county gaol.

Should Enlist.

Judge Huycke—"As Chairman of the Board of Police Commissioners I realize that we are all working for a common good. We have tried in our little way to obtain the best results for the least reasonable expense. I am heartily in accord with some of the suggestions advanced by the Chairman of the Finance Committee. Others, I am not. I welcome any suggestion you may see fit to make. Reference has been made to the number of constables employed. The general rule is one man per thousand of population. We are not anywhere near that proportion. I think that at this time it would be suicidal to decrease the force. Instead of decreasing it we should increase it. Something terrible may happen here any time. If things do not look more promising I will ask that additions be made to the force. As regards enlistment, I would say that all unmarried men at present on the force should be made to enlist, as well as unmarried employees in any other department of the civic administration. If the Chief Constable has discouraged enlistment among his men, he has done it without the approval of this Board. There are also school teachers in this city whose influence amounts to nothing and the girls are talking about them. If the unmarried men stay until the war is over they will get their dismissal when the soldiers return. The same thing applies to any civic employees. Some things have been said about City Engineer Parsons. I do not agree with what has been said. Mr. Parsons is a married man with several children, but there are other men in his department who should go. A well-known citizen came to me about a month ago and said "I can't go myself, but I might be able to take a position on the police force and let an eligible man go and give him back his job upon his return. To the unmarried men I would say go, or kick them out. What is sauce for the good is sauce for the gander, and I want you to take it for yourselves, and pass it on to the Board of Education with our joint compliments," said Judge Huycke, addressing Ald. Stratton.

"As to Sergt. Brown, if, as you say, he is only a private secretary steps should be taken to see that he is out on the street more. As to the three hundred dollars allocated to the morality department, I have in the past had very grave doubts as to whether that amount was sufficient to meet the expenses. If not we should pay more, Mrs. McElhiney is performing a valuable service.

The fact that crime is on the decrease in this city is a striking tribute to the efficiency of the force.

Should be in Uniform.

Mayor Duffus confessed that he was not very familiar with the modus operandi of the Board of Police Commissioners. This was the second meeting he had attended as a member. He disapproved of the addition to the force of one extra man. Mayor Duffus was of the opinion that the Chief Constable should wear his uniform and that his duties should be defined. He was opposed to any expenditure respecting the Chief Constables' convention. He opposed it at the last meeting and would do the same again. The Mayor quoted Lord Kitchener, who is reported to have said: "We must economize; the men we have got must work harder, and we must do with fewer men at home." I think that applies here, said Mayor Duffus. Instead of putting on an extra man we might let one go. The men are not overworked.

"Will you second a resolution compelling the unmarried men to enlist or resign?" enquired Judge Huycke.

"I don't think that will be necessary," replied Mayor Duffus; "I think they will go."

"Something should be done," said Judge Huycke.

The closing of the bars at eight o'clock has reduced the work of the department considerable," continued the Mayor. A few years ago more arrests were made in one week than is now made in a month. I am sure we could get along with two men less."

Magistrate Dumble.

Speaking of the morality department, Police Magistrate Dumble said there was not a woman in Canada who could do the work more effectively than Mrs. McElhiney. Her services to the department were invaluable. A couple of years ago the appointment of a policewoman was advocated. They did not know what they were talking about. Magistrate Dumble spoke in eulogistic terms of the present force. "It is essential," said he, "to have experienced men on the force. It is the "green" men who give all the trouble. Then again, it must be remembered that half the men are in their beds while the remainder are on duty".

Dealing with the question of economy, as advocated by the Finance Committee, Magistrate Dumble said it would have been better had the Council been more economical last year, instead of spending thousands of dollars in building bridges and other public works that were not needed. If the Council had done this they would not be so anxious to place the burden of economy on the Police Commissioners. If you can show us how we can reduce the expenditures without impairing the efficiency of the force we will snap at it, said Magistrate Dumble. As to Sergeant Brown, I would say that he holds an important office and one that could not be filled by a probationer. I don't think the Chief Constable's place is on the street. If you want to know how much work the Chief is doing just spend one whole day with him in the office. It has been said that the men should go and fight. They are doing as much for their King and country as though they were at the front.

Chief Thompson.

"I have listened with great interest to the remarks of Ald. Stratton," said Chief Thompson. "I don't suppose he has ever done any police duty, whereas I have just completed twenty-three years. He is wrong in one statement, and that is regarding the men enlisting. I have done what I can do to encourage them to enlist and have promised them their positions upon their return. If I thought I was not doing my duty I would be in khaki. Commissioner Sherwood of the Dominion Police has seen fit to appoint me Commissioner of Police for this district. As it is, the men on the street are putting in ten hours a day, the men in the Station, twelve hours, and I am putting in sixteen hours a day. The force is divided into three shifts. The firemen go to bed at 10 o'clock and sleep unless they are called out. The police force is on duty day and night. I am unable to understand why any one would want the executive officer of any department on the street. He should be in his office where he will be available to the public. I have never sought to be an ornament but have tried to do my duty to my King and the people I serve. I have tried to keep the estimates as low as possible, and as a ratepayer, have no desire to squander the city's money."

Accuracy Questioned.

To Magistrate Dumble's remark, questioning the accuracy of Ald Stratton's figures and the sincerity of the Finance Committee, Ald. Stratton reminded the Magistrate that he characterized the Council as an extravagant lot and intimated that each succeeding Council was worse than the preceding one. "If you were as sincere in your statements you would get to work and reduce the estimates by at least twenty-five hundred dollars," said the Chairman of the Finance Committee. It cost the city thirty-two hundred dollars to construct the Bonnacord Street bridge. This expenditure has been complained of by Magistrate Dumble. The sinking fund on ten thousand dollars worth of debentures amounted to approximately three hundred and thirty-five dollars. In adding two men to the department, and a few extras to the estimates, the department had incurred an expenditure equal to the interest on a debenture debt of seventy thousand dollars.

Each member of the Finance Committee voiced his approval of the stand taken by Ald. Stratton. Judge Huycke assured the Committee that the matters referred to would be looked into, but held out little hope for a substantial reduction in the estimates.

MEANS OF LIVELIHOOD FOUND FOR 500 MEN

TORONTO, March 3.—Finding jobs for 500 jobless men, which meant forging an average of twenty links a day between the employer and the out-o-work, was last month's record for the Toronto Employment Bureau.

Call for Farmers Insistent.

"Too much stress cannot be laid on the call there will be for farm laborers this year," said Mr. Chisholm, head of the bureau, yesterday.

"Owing to enlistment and the loss of helpers, a number of qualified farming men flocked into town last month looking for jobs. But I feel we should not register any of these men except for farm work. Possibly the farmer may have to come up a little in his wages to keep or get helpers. He can be shown that that is his patriotic duty, as it is the patriotic duty of patriotic countrymen unfit for military service to stick to the farm.

"Yesterday two bright Russians, who had been practical farmers in their own country, were outfitted by us with Canadian farming jobs, and I've no doubt if we could get a capable interpreter that numbers of such immigrants might be found to go into agriculture in Canada."

Women on the Farm.

"I do, indeed. Of course, owing to climatic and other conditions, our women have not gone in for farm work as have the women of other countries, but a willing heart is half the battle, and there is a great deal of light farm work that the ordinary Canadian women might well do.

"Men of various trades—carpenters, painters and so on, over age and out of work, might also, I think, with a little encouragement, be induced to go out and try their hands at farming.

Retired Men Intellectually Fit.

"So far we have the names of one hundred," said Mr. Arnold, who has charge of the branch bureau, which takes to registration of retired men willing to take up active life again to free younger men for overseas.

"I am a little disappointed that more applications have not been received from employers glad to engage the services of these men. They are what I can call intellectually fit—men who have been successful in business and professional life, and who would be an asset to any concern to which they might consent to attach themselves."

It is hoped that the conference between some of the employers and a number of those who are trying to fill vacancies caused by enlistment, with emergency workers, will be productive of good results.

Suffered From Nerves

Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B. writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

Exciting Burglar Chase in Bronx

Mr. O'Hara Subdues Negro and Drags White Man from Surface Car —Caught Stealing Silver.

NEW YORK, March 3. Martin J. O'Hara of the real estate firm of O'Hara Bros., and a brother of Peter O'Hara, who ran for Borough President of the Bronx in the last election, had a busy afternoon with burglars yesterday.

When a woman ran into his office, at Bedford Park Boulevard and Webster avenue, crying that burglars were in the apartment of John J. Johnson, upstairs, he and a bookkeeper, Louis Milton, investigated. They found a negro and a white man packing the Johnson silver.

In the fight that began at once Mr. O'Hara devoted his energies to subduing the negro, while Mr. Milton pursued the white man up to the roof, across other buildings and down to the street. After Mr. O'Hara had pummelled the negro until he was sufficiently tractable he dragged him downstairs and turned him over to other men in his office.

Mr. Milton was running down the street after the other fellow. Mr. O'Hara hopped into an automobile and joined in the chase. The fugitive boarded a Webster avenue car and had reached 196th street before Mr. O'Hara caught up with him and dragged him from the car.

Although several persons were blowing police whistles all the time no policemen appeared and Mr. O'Hara had to telephone for the police to call at his office for the prisoner. The negro said he was Frank Johnson, of No. 46 West 126th street, and the tosher fello would be with Frank Wards, of the 46th English apartments. Both were charged with burglary.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad, and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Stick a pin through the cork of bottles containing poisons. This will prevent tragic mistakes when seeking medicines in the dark.

NEURASTHENIA THAT FOLLOWS LA GRIPPE

Rest and a Tonic is the Proper Treatment Distinguished Medical Authority Says

There is a form of neurasthenia that follows la grippe. Doctors call it "post-grippal" neurasthenia.

One of the foremost medical authorities of New York city in a lecture in the international clinics, said:

"Broadly speaking, every victim of la grippe will suffer from post-grippal neurasthenia also. Lowering of nervous tone with increased irritability is the most striking effect of the disease, languor of mind and body, disturbed, fitful sleep and vague pains in the head and elsewhere. The treatment calls for rest and a tonic."

If you have had la grippe read those symptoms again: "Languor of mind and body, disturbed, fitful sleep and vague pains in the head and elsewhere." If you have any or all of them it means that you are still suffering from the effects of a la grippe and that you will not be well and free from danger of relapse until your blood is built up.

The treatment, says the distinguished physician quoted above, is rest and a tonic. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a non-alcoholic tonic, are particularly suited for building up the blood and strengthening the nerves after an attack of grippe. The rich, red blood expels the lingering germs from the system and transforms despondent grippe victims into cheerful, healthy, happy men and women.

If you have had la grippe do not wait for a relapse or for the neurasthenia that so often follows grippe, but get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now from the nearest drug store and begin the treatment at once.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

leadership and the party's unity should be maintained.

The Franco-British Committee.

The Franco-British Parliamentary Committee is one of the many measures taken by the Allies to keep in closer touch with each other to procure more unified action and to keep public opinion in both countries better informed. The latter point is not unnecessary; partly owing to the constant system of disparagement which has been going on in our yellow journals; partly owing to the spiritual distance between the two nations, and, finally, partly owing to the delay in conscription, the opinion had grown among certain classes in France that Great Britain was not contributing her share to the common fund of effort against Germany. This possibly was increased by the fact that the gigantic work done by the British Navy was to a large extent, and in the absence of great battles at sea, invisible and almost impalpable.

I was astounded some months ago by continual visits from French journalists who had come to London, when I found that their mission chiefly was to detail to their own countrymen the gigantic efforts which Great Britain was putting forth to win the war. The thing seemed to be so palpable that any attempt to enlarge upon it, much less to describe it, seemed to me quite unnecessary. But that was not the case. As I have already written, the idea of a joint committee of the two Parliaments originated in the fertile brain of Monsieur Franklin-Bouillen. That remarkable personality, whom I have already described to you at length, was especially fitted for the task by the fact that as the son of a French father and Jersey mother he speaks English with the same facility as French, and is intimately acquainted with British politics and British personalites. There were some difficulties in the way at first. An essential distinction exists between the functions of the commissions in the French Parliament and the committees in the British. The French commissions have extraordinary powers in some respects, and especially in foreign affairs their powers nearly approach to those of the Senate of the United States. They have the right to see all despatches, even the most secret; they have the right of summoning before them the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and of putting him, if necessary, to severe cross-examination. Our committees in the House of Commons have no such powers. The Foreign Office still remains with us an autocracy tempered by occasional and very often perfunctory debates in Parliament. One of the many instances of the absurdity of the present arrangements of the Imperial Parliament is that a few months before the war we gave four hours to the discussion of the entire foreign policy of the British Empire, and that we interrupted this discussion, and never renewed it, in order to debate with vehemence the question whether the Water Company in Surrey County should be entitled to draw a certain number of gallons from a small river. We had to state frankly to our French colleagues this essential distinction and the limitation it put upon our powers. The Executive besides, refused naturally to take any final responsibility for our committee, and at first indeed was rather against the whole idea.

But Franklin-Bouillon is not a man to be denied. He saw Mr. Asquith several times in succession, with the result that he gave his sanction to the formation of the committee and allowed the Whips to enter into consultation with us as to its composition. We then went full steam ahead.

Lord Bruce President.

We were lucky enough to obtain the enormous advantage of having Lord Bryce as President of the Commission; Lord Sanderson, an old and respected Foreign Office official, who was for some years the right-hand man of Lord Salisbury. Mr. Stuart Wortley, an old member of the House and an ex-Minister and myself, were nominated as the Vice-Presidents. Mr. Hodge, the present acting leader of the Labour Party was elected Treasurer, and Sir Edwin Cornwall, a London member of Parliament and formerly Chairman of the London County Council, became Secretary.

We then chose members from both the House of Lords and the House of Commons, and among them we were able to enlist some of the most powerful personalities in both Chambers.

Sir Edwin Cornwall, the secretary, has had a very remarkable career. His father was a simple police constable. He himself began life as a little office boy, sweeping the floors and running errands and doing all the other small work of a coal office when he was quite a lad. In time he started in business for himself, and is now one of the wealthy coal merchants of London.

The Irish party is represented in addition by Mr. John Dillon, with whose personality your readers are so familiar that I need not attempt to add anything to their knowledge, and by Mr. Hugh Law. Mr. Hugh Law is one of the ablest recruits the Irish movement has made in the last twenty years. His father held the high position of Lord Chancellor, and it is a curious irony of fate that his father should have been the same man whom I heard more than thirty years ago leading the prosecution against Parnell and his associates for founding the Land League. The son, however, after he left Oxford University, became a strong Nationalist and has been a useful member of our party ever since. He is an accomplished speaker, a man of letters, and there is the additional advantage for this particular mission that he speaks French like a Frenchman. Ireland has a further representative in Shirley Benn. Shirley Benn is a Unionist in politics, and is a colleague of young Astor in the representation of Plymouth. Though he has thus been opposed to the Irish Nationalist party, he has been one of its friendly enemies, and did his best in the old times of struggle to find a basis of reconciliation between the two sections of Irish opinion. He is interesting as a type of the southern as contrasted with the Ulster Unionists. His father was a clergyman of Anglican Church in Ireland, but you will judge how broad and generous his spirit was, from a little anecdote told to me by his son. The old minister had a gardener who was a Protestant and a coachman who was a Catholic. He presented the Protestant with a copy of the Protestant Bible and the Catholic at the same time with a Douai version, remarking to them with a smile, that though the versions were somewhat different they would find the same Christianity in both. Shirley Benn started work when he was only eighteen and became, before his majority, a member of an important timber firm in the City of London; then went to Canada, and finally settled down for many years in Mobile, Alabama, where he married a charming southern wife. He has taken a large part in debates on commercial subjects and especially on the question of contraband.

We have also Sir James Xoxall, who began life as a school teacher, is now editor of the chief organ of his class; is also an accomplished French scholar, and has written several remarkable novels.

I need not describe the personalities further, though many of them invite comment. Suffice it to say that they represent the cream of the intelligence of both Chambers.

The French Mission.

France has attached equal importance to the Mission. M. Clemenceau is already President of the Foreign Affairs Commission, a centre in which his tempestuous spirit has found repose in the last few years: he is familiarly called the "Tiger" of French politics. He has been elected Chairman of the French Commission. The Vice-President is Monsieur Leygues, who is the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee in the Chamber of Deputies. He has been a prominent figure in French politics for many years and was a Minister several times over. He was one of the fortunate men to whom Chauchard, the multi-millionaire proprietor of the Magazin du Louvre left the greater part of his wealth. He is a brilliant orator, and took a large part in giving a splendid welcome to the Irish Mission that went to Paris last May.

Baron d'Estournelles, known for many years before the war as one of the great apostles of The Hague Conference and of universal peace, is also among the members. He is Monsieur Pichon, who, after he had been Ambassador for France in many parts of the world, including Peking, where he went through the siege, was afterwards Foreign Secretary, is now the editor of a great daily.

The British Committee has prepared a series of papers mainly concerned with a description of what the British Empire has contributed to the war. There are papers on the Army, on the Navy, on Finance and on Munitions; and in this survey some idea will be conveyed of how Great Britain is putting forth gigantic efforts in every direction to help her Allies in defeating the common enemy.

GIRL BRIDE GOES BEFORE GRAND JURY

Mrs. Harrison Calmly Repeats Confession—18 Years Old and Not Minor, Plea For Prosecution

KEPT IN SECLUSION

Mother of Prisoner Blames Cabarets and Immodest Dress as the Cause of Such Tragedies.

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 3.—On the question of the age of Mrs .Charles Harrison, the girl bride who slew W. L. Warren to, "avenge her honor" depends the disposition of her case. She says she is fifteen years old. The statement was made to-day that she is eighteen.

Two persons say they will try to prove she is not a minor, and, therefore, not entitled to the protection the Texas laws give minors who have committed homicide. They are John Warren, father of the dead man, and Mrs. J. N. Taylor, his sister.

Mrs. Harrison appeared to-day before the Grand Jury and told how she killed Warren. Her recital was a repetition of her confession of last Saturday. Her appearance and manner indicated unconcern to those who saw her.

The Grand Jury is expected to report on the case within a day or two.

Katherine's mother, Mrs. Bessie Tackett, asserted to-day that efforts to prove the bride more than fifteen will be fruitless.

Blames Pursuit of Pleasures.

She blamed the modern pursuit of pleasures for the trouble which has befallen her daughter.

"There is too much drinking, there is too much dancing, there are too many cabarets, and I must admit to much immodest dress in the country," she said.

"These conditions, falsely supposed to bring pleasure, in reality bring only sorrow," she continued. "Young men and young women worship before the shrine of lustful, selfish pleasure. Is it any wonder they fail?

"This man Warren was a cabaret habitue. His hotel was little more than a resort for those who seek the pleasures of the cabaret. To the men who frequent such places the ruin of a young girl is an everyday incident.

"License has become more or less a custom in this country. See what this life has done for my own daughter. She had a good heart, she was careful to avoid the evils and pitfalls which beset the path of young girls and yet she was ensnared. The result—broken hearts and death. Why can't something be done to stop all this?

Girl Kept in Seclusion.

Katherine remains secluded in the home of her father-in-law, James Harrison, the banker. All efforts to obtain an interview have been defeated. Only relatives, friends and detectives are admitted.

"You've published too much already," said Mr. Harrison to-day to reporters. "She is here and will stay here, but you can't see her.

A delegation of women from the First Christian Church called yesterday on the elder Mrs. Harrison. They found her ill in bed from worry. Nearby, dressed in a kimono and eating chocolates sat Katherine, apparently free from care.

City Doesn't Own Land Under Bridge On Bonaccord Street

That the ground over which the Bonaccord Street bridge was built belongs to the G.T.R. and to ex-Ald. G. Walter Green, was apparently learned for the first time by the Board of Works last night. It seems that the question of the titles of this dried creek bed were not previously examined; communications from the G.T.R. opened the whole question. The railway company offers to sell the city the small strip they own, probably for a nominal sum, and it is felt that ex-Ald. Green will likely present to the city the strip he owns. The city clerk and Mr. Parsons were authorized to communicate with both parties.

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Clean Little Liver and Bowels

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if the breath is bad; stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Vivid Description of The Doings of Submarine E-7 Told By Young Canadian Soldier

MONTREAL, March 4.—The following vivid description of the doings of H. M. Submarine E-7, from a young Englishman to his mother, was read at a meeting of the Montreal Soldiers' Wives' League:

"We returned safely after twenty-four days up the Dardanelles in the Sea of Marmora. It is hopeless to try to give a detailed account in a letter, but you can take it from me it was a fine show. We broke all previous records. The tale of our doings is the sort of thing one reads of in the old days. We went round the Sea of Marmora leaving a trail of sunken and burning ships; we fairly shook things to the core. We are the first submarine in history to bombard a place on shore under fire.

"I think we were under fire about three times a day on an average, and penetrated into all sorts of places and destroyed shipping. We then shelled a railway and destroyed two troop trains. We shelled the embankments and blocked the line, and then caught the trains as they came along. It was the funniest thing you can imagine to see the train try to hide behind trees, but we caught her and smashed her all to blazes.

"Three ammunition waggons blew up with a terrific explosion. The soldiers of course got out and took cover and fired tons of ammunition at us, but we were out of range. Altogether we sunk one gunboat, five steamers (one of 3,000 tons), and seventeen large sailing ships, two trains, one railway embankment; and a few villagers who fired on us and got it in the neck for doing so.

TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

"We also dived up to Constantinople, and fired a torpedo at the wharf, at the arsenal, where there were a lot of ammunition lighters, and there was a most terrific explosion which stook the boat, although we were one and a quarter miles away. What happened, I don't know, but something must have got it in the neck, judging by the bang.

"We had a small duel with a small gunboat one day on the surface and drove her off, although she fired two hundred rounds from her two guns.

"After that we were left alone and everything ran like blazes when we got anywhere near.

"We had no trouble diving in the Sea of Marmora, but when we came down we had an awful time as the Turks had rigged up all sorts of nets and things to catch us, and we got mixed up in them, and also got fouled by mines three times.

"The reception we got in harbour was great. The whole fleet and everything manned the rails and cheered us madly. Just imagine us—all dirty and unshaven—and the flag with bullet holes all over it, and the conning tower all dents from bullets, and rusty, steaming through the lines, and thousands of men cheering, like mad. Battleships, cruisers, torpedo boats, transports and captains leading the cheers. It was great.

"I have heard cheers before, but this was the real thing. Poor old ——'s eyes were full of tears as he saluted to cries of "Are we downhearted'? and 'Well done, E-7.'

"At present I am resting and on land basking in the light of popular favour. It is very nice to be a hero among one's own cloth you know, because they really mean it, and they really understand."

CITY PAYS $222.40 AS COST OF SCHOOL BOARD ENQUIRY

Finance Committee Passed The Bill From Judge Huycke Last Night—Other Items Dealt With

Alderman Stratton accelerated the action of his Finance Committee last night and put his file in order for the March meeting of the Council on Monday night.

Alderman McIntyre moved, seconded by Alderman Saunders, that the city's expenses in the Board of Education investigation amounting to $222.40 be paid. Of this sum $41.60 represents the account of Mr. W. F. Johnston for stenographic services. Judge Huycke received $30 a day for eight days, 20 cents each for swearing 38 witnesses and 20 cents for each of the 71 exhibits filed.

Contractor To Be Paid.

D. Coughlin's account for $402.50 for the erection of two cottages at the Isolation hospital at $200 each, and $2.50 for teaming one load of wood, was ordered to be paid when certified to by Alderman Duncan, chairman of the Board of Health.

Private Pursey Gets Refund.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Alderman Evans that Private W. Pursey be refunded $62.50 of a peddlar's license of $75 he took out in December. He used the license only a short time when he joined the 93rd Battalion, and requested a proportionate refund.

22 Cents for W. S. Robinson.

A recommendation from the Court of Revision that Mr. W. S. Robinson be returned 22 cents to cover an error in his tax bill was carried.

Horticultural Grant Laid Over.

The question of the grant to the Horticultural Society and for the care of King Edward Park was referred to the Committee of the Whole. The Health Association's request for a $1,200 grant was also passed along to that committee.

A letter from the financial secretary of the Salvation Army asking for a grant was received.

No Action on Pavers' Request.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Alderman Weir, that no action be taken with the request from the Standard Paving and Warren Bituminous Paving companies for interest on the debentures they accepted in payment of their contracts. The companies claimed that the city had been unreasonably tardy in disposing of the paving debentures. The Council takes the opposite view and states that the Court of Revision has just confirmed the paving assessment.

$33,000 ESTIMATES FOR THE BOARD OF WORKS THIS YEAR

Is Less than Last Year's Appropriation and Includes An Amount For Surface Drainage

After pruning its estimates for this year from $34,615.00 to $31,855.00 the Board of Works reversed the operation, and toward the close of its meeting last night grafted $1145.00 for surface drainage work, bringing the appropriation back to the rounder and fuller figure of $33,000.00. City Engineer Parsons' proposed expenditure wasn't vigorously assaulted. The aldermen simply whetted their knives for the superfluous. They completely removed a $225 item for a cement testing outfit, and $575 for a Ford truck; $100 was lopped from the horse account, $500 from salaries, $400 from the miscellaneous estimate and $150 from bounary roads repair, $200 from grass and weed cutting and $200 from the tree trimming item. Outside of that the estimates looked small enough for war times, except Ald. Weir's inclination to guarantee oil for Ashburnham's streets this year by adding another thousand to the $5,000 set down, and Ald. Saunders' sense of preparedness in the same direction with special attention to his own Romaine street. However, everything seemed all set to wind up the clock and fix the furnace when Mayor Duffus put in a plea for surface drainage, for which he is showing a decided bent, and back went the total to $33,000. It's a comfortable figure, easily remembered with no odd dollars trailing to it. Besides, if the drainage appropriation is not used up it may cover up unforeseen expenditures. But the unforeseen had better send out an advance agent, a voice from the wilderness if it wants to get anywhere near the pay wagons.

Last year's appropriation totalled $34,210.00 and Mr. Parsons said the actual expenditure had been about $500 in excess of the 1915 estimate.

The estimates for this year for the Board of Works are as follows:

General street work	$ 5,000.00
Gravel and stone	5,000.00
Wooden walks repairs	300.00

Weed and grass cutting	200.00
Trimming trees	400.00
Office supplies	275.00
Flagging railway crossings	630.00
Sewage pumping station	300.00
Board of Works horses	550.00
Salaries	3,500.00
Board of Works—Misc.	1,200.00
Boundary roads	200.00
Foot bridge across creek at Stewart street	75.00

THE MOTHERS' CLUB OF THE Y. M. C. A. ENTERTAIN THEIR FRIENDS

Excellent Programme Presented—Mrs. Allan Delivers an Inspiring Address—Refreshments Served

The Mothers' Club of the Y. M. C. A. provided a most enjoyable evening last night when they entertained the other Mothers' Clubs of the city and the fathers and mothers of boys connected with the Y.M.C.A. A large number of parents, as well as members of the Board of Directors and Clergymen of the city responded to their kind invitation and were thoroughly appreciative of the fine programme presented for their enjoyment.

"Women's Awakening"

The feature of the evening was an address by Mrs. John Allan, on a subject suggested, possibly, by the coming of Mrs. Pankhurst to the city, that of "Women's Awakening." After referring to an article from the pen of Lord Moley—that man of letters who made such a success of his tenure of office in India, and who seemed to thoroughly understand that mysterious people—wherein he referred to the singular and enlarging influence of women in the world, Mrs. Allan was of the opinion that in these times of stress and suffering, an opportunity was being offered woman, as never before, of showing her capabilities, her resourcefulness and usefulness.

It is the duty of woman to give thoughtful study to the questions of the day, so that she may be able to more intelligently discuss them with her husband and become a better citizen, for whatever makes for a better social state should be shared by men and women alike.

Every thinking woman, these days, turns to social, religious and patriotic work.

Some men contend that woman's place is in the home. Quite true. Home should be their first consideration, but the home life will become all the richer if the interests of mothers are not confined within the four walls of a house.

Party politics, as practiced at the present time, are the bane of Canadian life.

"If I ever have a vote," declared Mrs. Allan, "I shall not care whether the candidate is Liberal or Conservative; I shall uphold the man who comes nearest to my ideal of Christian manhood."

That party should be supported which makes the well being of the people its chief concern, striving to make this world a purer world, where it will be easy to do right.

After reviewing conditions in savage countries where men were warriors (as in Germany to-day) and women the burden bearers, and the remarkable advances made as the result of the splendid work of missionaries, Mrs. Allan ascribed the changes to gradual enlightenment greater facilties for travel, and the advances in medical science.

It was the Divine aim, as recorded in the third Chapter of Genesis, that woman should be man's equal, his helper, mate, and co worker.

John Ruskin, in "Sesame and Lillies," says that a nation takes its moral tone from its women. This was exemplified in the fatal choice the women of the great Roman Empire made in chosing as their model the wife of a profligate Emperor. The Empire crumbled as the women went down.

After this war there is going to be a great reconstruction, and women will have to take their part in seeing that Jesus Christ is made the corner stone, that Canada becomes, in truth, God's country.

Lack of space prevents a more extended report of her most excellent address.

Old People of Protestant Home

Were Guests at the Empire Theatre Yesterday Afternoon

Through the kindness of Dr. and Mrs. F. L. Robinson, the old people of the Peterborough Protestant Home were treated to an outing yesterday afternoon. Dr. Robinson sent conveyances to bring the inmates of the Home to the Empire Theatre, where they saw the famous Charley Chaplin, and that exceptionally good film, the "Two Orphans." For some of the old people, it was their first experience at moving pictures, and needless to say they enjoyed it very much. They are very grateful to Dr. and Mrs. Robinson for the pleasure afforded them.

AN EXCELLEFT REMEDY FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. Laura Jackson, Brantford, Ont., writes: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets such an excellent remedy for children that I have no hesitation in recommending them to all mothers." Thousands of mothers say the same thing concerning the Tablets. Once a mother has used them she would use nothing else. They are for sale at all druggists or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Presented With A Wrist Watch

A very pleasant event took place this morning at Messrs. Goheen & Matchett's store, when Mr. Bert Jones, who has been in charge of the meat department, was agreeably surprised when Miss Gertie Weir read the following address, and at the proper moment, John M. Munro presented him with a beautiful wrist watch.

Peterborough, March 4, 1916.

Mr. Bert Jones, City:

Dear Bert,—It is with deep regret that we learned of your intention to sever your connection here.

But we are proud of you for the step you are taking in enlisting to serve your King and country and we would ask you to accept this watch as a slight token of our esteem for you and trust that you may be spared for a safe journey to Berlin and return.

Signed on behalf of the staff,

G. A. GOHEEN,
O. S. MATCHETT,
H. WELBURN,
J. M. MUNRO,
G. WEIR.

Mr. Jones, although taken by surprise, replied suitably.

He leaves on Monday morning for Brockville, having enlisted for overseas service in the 80th Battalion.

STREET OIL PRICES AFFECTED BY WAR

Street oiling may be affected this year by the disturbed condition of the crude oil market. City Engineer Parsons has been unable to obtain quotations from the companies from whom the city secured last year's supplies. The market is unsettled, prices changing and there is no present prospect of quotations. Prices may be higher this year but even in that event the city engineer believes it would be cheaper to oil the streets than a return to the water treatment.

Ottawa Train Was Three Hours Late

The train from Ottawa this morning was about three hours late in arriving here this morning. A heavy snowstorm between the Capital City and Kemptville caused the delay, blocking all traffic on that line.

Hazel Dawn at the Empire

In the Famous Dramatic Role in "The Heart of Jennifer," Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday

Hazel Dawn, one of the sweetest personalities that ever appeared on the screen, and one of the most beloved of the younger American stars, achieves another distinctive triumph in the Famous Players Film Company's latest contribution to the Paramount Program "The Heart of Jennifer," by Edith Barnard Delano.

The photoplay presents a situation in which a big financier finds himself staring into ruin with the assistance of Welton another money power, offered him on conditions that his daughter Jennifer marry the other. To this bargain Jennifer refuses to accede, and she and her father leave for the wilds in order to liberate themselves from the society to which they cannot longer rightfully belong. In these rugged regions she meets James Murray, proprietor of a lumber tract, and as uncouth and wild as the country itself, with whom she however falls in love. Is is after their marriage that Welton discovers a bogus note issued by Jennifer's father before his departure from the east, and planning to use this as a means of compelling Jennifer to marry him he sets out for the west. When he learns of her marriage, in spitefulness he tells Murray that she wed him only for his money, so influencing the unthinking husband that he leaves Jennifer. It is then that the drama reaches its most intense climax.

"The Heart of Jennifer" more than meets the exalted standard expected of all Famous Players productions. Miss Dawn is surrounded by an admirable cast.

The production, one of the strongest dramatic offerings of recent feature releases, will undoubtedly attract large and constant crowds to the Empire Theatre next week.

OFFICERS GIVE THEIR BLOOD TO SAVE A SOLDIER

Operation Performed on Lt.-Col. Kingsmill and Capt. Wm. Lytle of the 123rd Battalion Was Successful and Will Save Lance Corporal

TORONTO, March 4.—In an effort to save the life of Lance-Corporal C. H. Tingey, 331 Jarvis street, of the paymaster's staff of the 123rd Grenadiers' Battalion, an unusual operation was carried out at the Exhibition Camp Hospital last night, when Lieut.-Col. W. B. Kingsmill, officer commanding the 123rd Battalion, and Capt. Wm. Lytle each gave half a pint of their own blood. Capt. H. H. Harvie, assisted by Capt. A. A. Parker, performed the transfusion, and it is said that as the result of this heroic sacrifice Tingey will live. The operation was performed as a last resort to save Tingey from bleeding to death. Tingey was admitted to the camp hospital on February 13 with tonsilitis. Tingey persisted in bleeding from the nose and throat, and all efforts to stop the flow of blood failed. He gradually became weaker, and little hope was held out for his recovery. It was then decided that transfusion of blood would likely stop the flow. After a consultation between Captain Harvie, Lieut.-Col. Kingsmill, and Captain Lytle, it was decided to perform the operation. An artery in the arm of Col. Kingsmill and of Captain Lytle was opened. A silver tube was then inserted into Tingey's arm, through which the blood passed.

It is stated to-day that the patient's condition is much improved. The infusion has stopped the flow of blood. It is expected that he will be able to return to duty shortly.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is lack of oxygen-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the malassimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. To do this go to any good druggist and get oil of orilene, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orilene in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer, and it is perfectly safe.—E. J. T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Canada.

A Bumper Market This Morning

Not since Christmas and the New Year has there been such a large market as there was to-day, particularly up in the hall. On first thought it would appear that all the farmers had conspired together to take the city by storm on the 4th of March, but in reality the explanation was "good roads."

Outside Market.

To the casual observer to-day's market might be termed "Wood Day," since the offerings of wood were so numerous. Prices were fully up to standard. Two foot mixed wood was $4.75 a cord, while hardwood of the same length commanded 6.25. Yesterday was "Hay Day" on the market and prices were a little above the average. Several loads were offered at $20.00 to $22.00 a ton. One load of straw brought $4.50.

Pork and beef were not so plentiful to-day as usual. Pork brought 15 and 17 cents and beef 11 and 12 cents a pound by the quarter. There was no lamb offered.

Several bags of potatoes came out of their hiding and ranged from $2.00 to $2.25 a bag. One vendor asked $2.25 and another $2.20, all the rest—and there were quite a number—quoted $2.00 a bag.

Apples were more numerous than usual. Per bag they were $1.25 to $1.50, or 40 cents a peck. They were snatched up quickly.

Neither potatoes nor apples were a drug on the market this morning.

Vegetables were plentiful, and were quoted as follows: Turnips, 40 cents a bag; onions, 30 cents a peck; parsnips, 20 cents; beets, 25 cents; carrots, 15 cents; cabbage, 5 cents a head of 50 cents a dozen.

Auction Sale.

So numerous and varied were the offerings by auction, that a person could almost start up house with the articles for sale, for they ranged all the way down the line from beds, mattresses, refrigerators, and sideboards to harness and incubators (for chickens, of course).

Basket Section.

Elbow room was at a premium upstairs. Butter, eggs and farmers' wives were in the majority (at any given time.) Everybody wore a cheerful smile—at first—but they gradually faded away as the prices began to tumble.

Butter and eggs were very plentiful.

Butter ranged from 35 to 38 cents, and eggs from 27 to 30 cents, the majority of vendors quoting the lower levels. It would not be surprising if there were still lower quotations towards noon.

A few small turkeys were offered as follows: 8 lbs. for $1.75, 12 1-2 lbs. $2.80. Chickens were quoted 5 1-2 lb. pair, $1.15, 6 lb. pair $1.20.

Oranges sold for 30 to 40 cents a dozen, lemons 5 for 10 cents, grape fruit 3 for a quarter.

As one stood watching the buzom belles from the country rolling in the coin, it reminded one of the city teacher who was starting a class in agriculture. Addressing Johnny Jones, she said: "What do we get from bees?" Johnny blurted out: "Beans." "How ridiculous!" snapped the teacher. "Jimmy, tell him," Jimmy Knowitall: "Honey." Teacher: "Correct. Now Johnny, can you tell me what we get from bens?"

Johnny: "Honey."

Teacher: "Jimmy, tell that numbskull."

Jimmy: "Money." (Jimmy knew.)

Socks For Soldiers.

The ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League occupied a table at the south end of the hall, where they dispensed good things to eat. An attractive sign on the table read:

"Have some tea, coffee and sandwiches to help buy socks for our boys in the trenches."

There was another lively battle between 83rd teams at Brock street rink this afternoon, when the non-coms of the battalion defeated the officers by 11 goals to 9. It was a quick scoring argument, with the shots flying around like bullets from a machine gun and was featured by the great goal-keeping of Company Sergeant Major Calladine for the non-coms. and Capt. Neilson for the officers. There is some talk of the officers protesting the game on account of the fact that Sergt. Major Calladine did not wear skates. The officers led at half time by 4 to 3. Pte. Harry Blewett refereed the battle. The teams lined up as follows:

HOSPITAL ACCOUNTS FOR ATTENDANCE TO RECRUITS COMING IN

An account of $95 from St. Joseph's Hospital for attendance to recruits who underwent minor operations there was received by the Finance committee last night. It is expected that Nicholls Hospital will also forward an account for similar work. The committee is inclined to the opinion that each municipality should pay for its own recruits and there is the question of how many from the city are included in the $95 account. Besides the agreement made by the city in this matter was not clearly remembered and the bill was laid over for further consideration.

ONLY 870 SAVED OUT OF 4000 ON BOARD CRUISER PROVENCE

The Greatest Marine Disaster in Modern History—Most of the Troops Were Algerians

PARIS, March 4.—It was announced at the French Ministry of Marine to-day that there were nearly 4,000 men on board the French auxiliary cruiser Provence when she was sunk in the Mediterranean on February 26.

It was stated that on board the Provence where the staff of the Third Colonial Infantry Regiment, the Third Battalion, the Second Company of the First Battalion, the Second Machine Gun Company and one extra company, in all nearly 4,000 men.

As the Ministry of Marine on February 29 announced that the number of survivors of the Provence disaster was estimated at 870, it is indicated by the foregoing despatches that upward of 3,130 lives were lost.

The loss of more than three thousand lives in the sinking of the French auxiliary cruiser Provence is the greatest ocean disaster of modern times. Up to the present the largest number of lives ever lost in one wreck was the White Star liner Titanic which struck an iceberg off the Newfoundland Banks on April 14, 1912, and sank with a death loss of 1,595. The rescued numbered 745.

Most of Troops Algerians.

The French auxiliary cruiser Provence II., so designated to distinguish her from the French battleship Provence, engaged in transporting troops to Saloniki (presumably Algerians), was sunk in the Mediterranean on February 26. Two hundred and ninety-six survivors have been brought to Malta and about 600 to Majos by French and British patrol vessels summoned by wireless.

No signs of a submarine were noticed either before or after the sinking. La Provence was armed with five cannon of 14 centimeters, two of 97 millimeters and four of 47 millimeters.

Other Marine Disasters.

Among the other great sea disasters in addition to the Titanic already mentioned were: the Cunard liner Lusitania, which was torpedoed by a German submarine and sunk off the Head of Kinsale, Ireland, on May 7, 1915, with the loss of 1,395 lives; the burning of the excursion steamship General Slocum in the East River, June 15, 1904, when nearly 1,000 persons met their death; the French Line steamer La Bourgogne, sunk in collision with the steamship Cromartyshire, July 4, 1890, with the loss of 549 lives; the Japanese steamer Kicher Maru, sunk off the coast of Japan, September 28, 1912, with the loss of 1,000 lives; the burning of the Uranium Line steamship Volturno in midocean, October 9, 1913, with the loss of 226 lives; the Canadian Pacific steamship Empress of Ireland, sunk in collision with the Danish collier Storstad in the St. Lawrence River, May 29, 1914, with the loss of more than 1,000 lives.

Father! Bless our Soldiers,

Give them strength and courage

Shield them in the trenches,
And in battles din
God of Armies help them
Victory to win.
Chorus.
Lord of Hosts, an Empire
Lifts this cry to Thee,
Save our brave defenders,
Give them Victory.
Father! Save our Sailors,
From the storms at sea,
From the foes assaultings,
And their treachery,
Working, watching, waiting,
May they know Thee nigh,
And in shock of battle
On Thine aid rely.
Comfort, Lord, the mourners,
Hear the prisoners cry
Give our Rulers wisdom,
To our King be nigh,
Fight for those who help us,
Give our arms success,
And in Thy good pleasures
Peace with righteousness.

A Company Annihilated At Brock Street Rink

A company of the 93rd Battalion was practically annihilated at Brock street rink last night when B company, under command of Lieut. Dupuy, successfully sprung a mine in A company's lines. A company was taken completely by surprise and the casualties were heavy, especially in view of the fact that A company force were composed of highly trained first line troops. Incidentally B company beat A company in a hockey fixture by 5 goals to 3, and Capt Hall's men can easily be detected at the armouries to-day by the manner in which their chests protrude. The result was a surprise inasmuch as A company had the services of Widdifield, Sexton, Blewett, Matthews and Stevenson, all of whom figured on the 93rd team this winter.

B company led by 3 to 0 at half time and in the middle of the second half were ahead 5 to 1. A company counter-attacked at the finish and scored two goals. Lance Corp. Miller, Lieut. Dupuy and Pte. Cullen starred for B company while Pte. Bell's checking was a feature. Lieut. Sexton, Pte. Blewett and Lieut. Matthews were the best for A company. Lieut. Gillham of the Signallers was the referee. The teams played six men aside, using substitutes when they desired. The teams were as follows:

A company has challenged B company to another game for an oyster supper, A company offering to double the score on their rivals.

BELLEVILLE, March 3.—Belleville is in a happy mood to-night, for the local intermediates are in the O. H.A. finals. To-night they played Midland in the second of home-and-home games in the semi-finals, and, although Midland started the game with a six-goal lead, the locals ran up a 13 to 1 score, and thus won the round by six goals.

Midland showed plenty of speed, but the strong back-checking of the Belleville forwards, backed up by splendid defence work, did not give them very much chance. The Midland defence played good hockey, especially McDonald in goal. The locals played up to their best form, and under these conditions Midland could not cope with them.

The youthful Conley, in the Belleville goal, had very little to do, but what he had he handled like a veteran. Bill Symons, on the defence, lived up to his reputation. He is one of the, if not the, best man in his position in the O.H.A. He plays clean hockey, and, although he has plenty of weight, does not use it very often. Aside from McDonald in goal, Beatty on the defence was the best of the visitors. His rushes were hard to stop, and his defensive work was excellent. This is the first year since 1909 that a Belleville team has reached the O.H.A. finals in any of the series. Line up:

DATES ARRANGED FOR O.H.A. FINAL GAMES

TORONTO, March 4.—Dates for the final games in all three series of the Ontario Hockey Association were arranged last night. In spite of the large number of teams in each division it has been possible to rush the various competitions through right on the dot. If the present weather holds for ten days or two weeks the big league will wind up its season in a most satisfactory manner.

As a result of the Riversides' defeat of Kingston Frontenacs, the locals will meet Berlin in the finals. The first game will be played here on Wednesday and the return at Berlin the following Monday. Lawson Whitehead of Toronto will referee both games.

In the intermediate series Belleville and Sarnia will meet, the first of the home-and-home final games being carded for Belleville on Tuesday night with the return fixture at Sarnia the following Friday. The teams have agreed on Oscar Bernhardt of Bradford as referee.

The junior series is not as far advanced as the other two, but it has been possible to arrange the dates for the finals. Berlin Union Jacks will play Collingwood here on Monday night. The teams are now tied on the round. The winner of Monday's game will go into the finals with Aura Lee, of Toronto. The first game will be played at Collingwood or Berlin on Thursday night next with the return contest in Toronto the following Wednesday. Lieut. Lou Marsh of Toronto will officiate in both games.

FRONTENACS EASY FOR TORONTO RIVERSIDES

TORONTO, March 3.—It's Riversides and Berlin for it. The senior championship of the O.H.A. will be decided in home-and-home games here, on Wednesday night and back in Berlin on the following Monday. Riversides beat Kingston Frontenacs here last night by 12 to 2. As they also beat the Kingstonians in the Limestone City by 10 to 1, the locals take the round by 22 to 3.

Last night's game was a go-as-you-please affair—every man for himself. There was very little attempt at team play, Kingston tried hard enough but they were stopped to almost nothing by the persistent checking of the Riversides. The game provided a very poor exhibition of senior hockey.

The Frontenacs had Jack Gooch back on the defence, but the injured foot which kept him out of the first game, prevented him from showing his best form. Norman Milan played the rover position for the visitors. He is a junior, but he showed senior form. Cook started in goal for the Frontenacs, but he had a bad cut over his left eye from the game in Kingston, and retired at the end of the first period. He was succeeded by Walsh under the rule which permits a goal-tender to be substituted in the event of injuries.

The score by periods was 5 to 0, 3 to 0, and 4 to 2. The Frontenacs were totally outclassed from end to end. Teams:

Referee—Oscar Bernhardt.

CURLING

Five rinks from the Victoria Club, Toronto, will play here on Tuesday night. This is an annual feature of the curling season and should attract a big attendance.

When roasting a fowl stuff the breast with pared and cut up sweet potatoes; the flavour will be greatly improved.

Glassware should always be washed in a wooden bowl, and there will be far less chance of it's getting broken.

Trades and Labour Notes

(By the Official Scribe.)

There was an exceptionally good attendance of delegates at the meeting of the Trades and Labour Council this week, no doubt caused by the very interesting topic reported furthre on in these notes. President Charles Hammacott occupied the position of ruling officer.

Brewery Workers Alive Again.

Credentials from the Brewery Workers' Association were received and the President welcomed them back, as for quite a while the representatives of this local had failed to adorn the benches of the Labour Hall. The same greetings were extended to the delegates form the Bartenders. The present curtailmenf of hours makes attendance at meetings an easier matter than heretofore it was explained.

Opposition and Lots of It.

The Tax Reform Association called attention by letter to the action of certain misled citizens of Kingston, who want Premier Hearst to put a $5 tax on all males between the ages of 21 and 60 who are not on the assessment roll. This would mean additional burden, the Reform Association pointed out, on those who are already shouldering as much as they can at present day war taxation. Peterborough Trades Council will send in a counter petition, sure thing.

Interesting Debate on Prohibition.

That we join in with the District Councils of Toronto, Hamilton, London Guelph etc., and oppose the prohibition measure, was the lead off in the debate. A very strong argument was the fact mentioned that 100,000 of our men were away on the pery dirty job of dealing Prussianism its death blow. Will it seem fair when they come back to say, Now boys, while you were away protecting our Empire we fixed it so that now you can't go out after supper and "chew the rag" over a drink of beer. Better take in the pink teas of the Christian Endeavour." The fairer way is to await their return and let them use the franchise they have so well fought for. The temperance party was taking a sneaking advantage to rush the thing through was also felt and expressed.

Prohibition would also mean loss of jobs to thousands of brewery workers and bartenders at a time when unemployment was rife, therefore the assembled delegates (with only one dissenting vote) deemed it their duty to stand by their fellow unionists, and the following resolution was passed.

Whereas, organized efforts are being made throughout the Province of Ontario to bring about Provincial prohibition of the sale of malt, spirituous and vinuous beverages, and,

Whereas, the success of such efforts would cause thousands of our fellow trade unionists to be thrown out of employment, thus adding to the unemployment now prevailing among the working people, and,

Whereas, we believe in the British principle of personal liberty in its broadest applications, as long as the exercise of that liberty is within keeping with law and order and good government, and,

Whereas, the prohibition breeds dives and joints where an illegitimate traffic in alcoholic beverages is carried on in violation of law, resulting not only in the government being deprived of any revenue to which it is justly entitled, but, in addition thereto, creating a demoralizing effect and contempt of all law; therefore, be it

Resolved, that the Peterborough Trade Labour Council in session assembled, hereby declares itself opposed to measures in any form prohibiting the legitimate sale of alcoholic beverages, But, in so declaring our opposition to the doctrine of prohibition, we wish it clearly understood that we favour the supervision and control through the proper officials of all hotels and all places where alcoholic beverages are sold and dispensed, and be it further

Resolved that, in the adoption of this resolution, we demand complete recognition of the just demands of labour employed in the manufacture, sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages, as expressed through their various organizations affiliated with the Peterborough Trade Labour Council, and be it further

Resolved, that the Peterborough Trade Labour Council in regular meeting assembled is opposed to the enactment of prohibitory legislation of the liquor traffic in the province of Ontario believing the system of strict license regulation is in the best interests of all concerned, and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be immediately sent to the Premier and Cabinet of the Province of Ontario and to the representatives of the city of Peterborough in the Provincial Legislature and to the Peterborough Press.

Barbers' Delegates Explain.

The folly of "war prices," as being displayed by delinquents from the Barbers' Union was explained by the vigorous delegates from the tonsorial artists' local. Recruiting was taking away the young men from our city, who were the chief support of the man who makes a living by giving a presentable appearance to the young stalwart who knows he must possess this if he wishes to make headway after work hours with one of the opposite sex. What with this source of revenue growing smaller all the time and the tax bills growing lamentably larger, then a forty per cent. cut in price on top of that, how to make a living is almost as ponderous a mathematical problem as that suggested by a city official some while since. The answer would probably work out that the go-! wife would have to cook shaving water for the Sunday dinner. Anyway negotiations between the bosses and the men are under way and no doubt that the short-sighted policy of price cutting, when there is not much hair cutting, will be lathered under.

Time and Eternity.—The prosy old barrister was arguing a technical case in the High Court. He was drifting along in a monotonous voice when the bored Judge yawned with hardly an attempt at concealment. "I sincerely trust that I am not unduly trespassing on the time of the Court? said the barrister, with just the slightest tinge of sarcasm in his voice. "There is some difference," replied the Judge, "between trespassing on time and encroaching on eternity."

Registration of Shropshires in Canada last year were nearly 70 per cent. ahead of those of any other breed.

It is said at Newton, N.J. that the Vernon Valley peach trees have been ruined by frost, the frost falling below zero many times this winter, and it is expected that New York residents will have to pay more for the fruit this season.

The production of 35,315 pounds of butter in seven days by a registered Holstein cow owned by Dr. J. G. Whitney, Motpelier, Vt., was declared by officials at the Vermont State Experiment Station to be a world's record for a one week test.

Every precaution should be taken to give the cow about to freshen the most cleanly and sanitary surroundings possible. The cow should be allowed to calve in a clean, freshly bedded stall, or better yet in mild weather, in the pasture. The calf should be halter and "led" trained as soon as it is strong enough.

MR. HARRY ADAMS is well-known to Peterborough citizens as having conducted business for himself in Ladies' Ready-to-Wear for over ten years, next to the Dickson Store; and MR. MCFADDEN will be remembered as a principal salesmen with the late Mr. Dickson and knows the trade of the store well.

DICKSON'S

Sewer Pipe and Cement Contracts Let to R. Hicks & Co. and Peterboro' Hardware

Only Two Tenders Received by Board of Works—Requests for Street Oil Already Coming In Another Effort Coming For Change of Street Names.

Ald. McIntyre presided at a meeting of the Board of Works last night, with Aldermen Galbraith, Saunders, Weir, Duncan, Stratton and Mayor Duffus present.

Only two tenders were received by the Board of Works last night for the 1916 supply of sewer pipe and cement, each quoting on both materials:

R. Hicks and Co. offered to supply Portland cement for $1.47 1-2 a barrel with storage of 3 cents a barrel; for sewer pipe they offered 70 p.c. off the list price; Peterborough Hardware Co. offered cement at $1.46 a barrel and 2 cents storage; and for pipe 69 p.c. discount.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that the lower tender in each case be accepted. The Peterborough Hardware Co. gets the cement contract and R. Hicks & Co. the sewer pipe.

A Grab For Oil

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Mayor Duffus, that Dickson street and the east end of McDonnel street be oiled this year. This carried, but Ald. Saunders killed it by demanding that Sherbrooke street between Park street and the boundary an important street he termed it, also be put on the list. Ald. Duncan asserted that it was time enough to consider street oiling when the Council had obtained prices on oil. In order to keep peace in the family the motion was rescinded for the present.

Weeds on Car Tracks.

Ald. Edgar's Railway committee submitted a recommendation that the weeds along the street railway tracks be destroyed this year

Mr. Dumble's Little Bill.

Mr. Dumble's bill of $107.77 for rent of his lot north of the Ackerman factory opened the Board's eyes individually and collectively. Mr. Parsons had replied that the city had not used Mr. Dumble's lot since January, 1914. Ald. Stratton and Ald. Weir moved that he be again notified to that effect. It is believed the Patriotic committee stored some wood on the Dumble lot which adjoins B. F. Ackerman's property, which the latter had offered the committee.

Will Try Street Changes Again.

Robert Reid, 90 Auburn street, requested that Brown street, Auburn, be changed to Auburn street, as it is generally known. Mayor Duffus suggested that with the new Council an effort be made to carry the by-law for street changes which was fought month after month last year. He believed that even Ald. Saunders might have changed his mind with the new year. But right there is where the Mayor had another think coming, for any time Ald. Saunders wavers from a set purpose you may look for the sky to fall in. Ald. Duncan was willing to help change Brown street, Auburn, and supported the Mayor's motion for another presentation of the by-law, tattered and frayed in last year's words stalemate.

The Smith street bridge will also receive snow plough treatment henceforth.

Another Big Crowd Saw "Fighting In France" Pictures

To-Night the Last Opportunity to Witness This Wonderful Film at the Grand

Another big crowd saw the "Fighting in France" pictures at the Grand last night, and went away with a clearer conception of what active service at the front is really like. To-night will be the last opportunity to witness this splendid film, and as a matter of education, those who have not already seen them will do well to secure seats for this evening. There is nothing of a sensational nor ghastly character to these pictures consequently anyone who has been holding back because of this, may feel no hesitation in going to see the films. The French trenches, dug-outs, etc., are shown. How a great army of men is fed under trying conditions, as well as the extensive preparations, preliminary to the attack in the Champagne district, were depicted and followed with keen interest. Every conceivable piece of ammunition and the workings of the big guns were illustrated, setting forth in practically the only way that those who stay at home have an opportunity to witness what is accomplished by these formidable-looking machines. Aeroplanes at work the parading of over twenty thousand German prisoners, the devastated towns and villages, the Ambulance Corps and Red Cross workers and the chief dignitaries of the Allied forces are all seen in this wonderful film, which all who have not seen should avail themselves of the opportunity to do so to-night.

Unique Boy's Class Good Hosts

The "Unique Boys" class of Murray St. Church entertained the Excelsior Boys of St. Paul's Church last night to a skating party and supper. Just twenty sat down to the table that was groaning beneath the weight of pies, the boys' delight. There was cake, sandwiches and cocoa as well, but, oh, those pies. The "Unique Boys'" teacher proposed the toast to Our King, and the toast to Our Boys was ably responded to by their president, George Richardson. Stanley Rathbone proposed the toast to "Our Guests" very fittingly, while Herb. Mason responded in true Excelsior style. Keele Tewsley made a hit with his toast to "Our Cooks" (Mrs. H. Foster, Mrs. H. Johnstone, and Miss L. Smith). Miss L. Smith responded in her immitable manner, and was elected official cook for the Unique Boys. After rising and singing the National Anthem, all went home feeling much the worst for pie, but hoping to suffer similar agonies on another like occasion. The flowers sent by Mrs. Jas. Lewis were

Separation Allowances Restored

Capt. J. H. Burnham Wires to the Examiner

The Examiner has received an interesting wire to-day from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P. It refers to the recent orders by which the monthly Separation allowance from Ottawa was done away with and a daily allowance of 60c substituted. This makes a difference of $6.10 per year in the case of privates and considerable more for non-coms. From Capt. Burnham's wire it is evident that the old system will be re-adopted. His telegram is as follows:

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 14—Health of Body Affects Eyes

THERE are hundreds of cases where a person's system becomes run down, and weakened by sickness. When that is the condition, we do not wonder at finding the limbs tire easily, arms feel too heavy to lift, and almost refuse to do as we want them to. Then why wonder what is the matter with your eyes at such times. They tire quickly the same as any other part of the sick body.

Dr. Fowler does not pretend to prescribe for sickness of the body, but he can by a simple test determine whether glasses will help the eyes, or you should be left entirely in the hands of your physician, and he will be very glad to give honest advice to any such who call at his optical parlors.

2 DOZEN EGGS SAVE BABY

Little Sammy Didn't Eat Them, but Fell Into Crate from the Fourth Floor.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Samuel Zacher three years old, living with his parents on the fourth floor of No. 25 Hester St., leaned out of the window yesterday, lost his balance and fell the four stories to the street.

Directly below the window is a grocery. In front of the shop stood a crate of thirty dozen eggs. When the boy's mother, frightened by his screams, reached the sidewalk she could see no signs of Sammy, but, in a moment, there was a movement in the crate as Sammy came up for breath.

Dr. Neil, who came with an ambulance from Governeur Hospital, found the child had been badly shaken up, but said he probably would recover.

Idleness is an inlet to disorder. People who have nothing to do are quickly tired of their own company.

"What an awful cold your husband has. He coughs and sneezes all the time." "He does, but it amuses the baby splendidly."

Willie—"Teacher says that we're here to help others." Pa—"Of course we are." Willie—"Well, what are the others here for?"

"I hear their engagement has been broken off through a misunderstanding." "Yes.' He understood she had money, and she understood he had money."

Polite Neighbour—"Everybody says your husband is such a wide awake man, Mrs. Jobbles." Mrs. Jobbles (with a sigh) "Yes: and the baby takes after him."

Employer—"Were there many people at your grandmother's funeral yesterday?" Clerk (absentmindedly)—"Yes. Indeed. Every seat in the grand-stand was occupied.

NEW CARTAGE BUSINESS.

It will be seen by reference to another column, that Mr. William H. Lytle has launched out in a new cartage and teaming business in this city. Mr. Lytle is generally known as one of Peterborough's active citizens "hustler" as well as a resourceful man in the various spheres of labor enterprise in which he has been engaged. The public will no doubt size "Billy" up as one possessing the necessary qualities for conducting a live cartage business, and with the inborn skill and ingenuity to tackle anything from a needle to an anchor. Read his card and call him up.

AMSTERDAM, March 6. — Large British reinforcements have arrived in the vicinity of Kut-El-Amara, and heavy fighting is going on near Nasrye, according to Constantinople despatches to-day.

PETROGRAD, March 6.— Russian torpedo boats raided Turkish shipping in the harbour of Trabizon, sinking several vessels within easy range of the coast batteries.

The fire of the coast guns was so weak that it was believed here that all the heavier guns have been dismantled because of the approach of the Russian land forces.

LONDON, March 6. — Zeppelins raided the north-east coast. The damage done is not yet known.

PARIS March 6. — It is believed there are from forty to fifty thousand German dead in front of Verdun.

LONDON March 6.—A total of five more steamers are reported sunk this week end.

LONDON March 6.—The Gazette announces that Capt. W. B. Perry, eighteenth battalion, and Lieut. O. S. Jones, 25th battalion, were dismissed from service by general court martial.

PETROGRAD, March 6.—The Russians have made progress on the Dneister river.

3 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Crown Prince Striving Desperately to Shatter The French Trenches

Violent Clashes Are Occuring in Fresnes Woods, But Main Struggle Has Narrowed to Two-Mile Front, Extending From Handremont Wood to Douaumont.

LONDON, March 6.—The fifteenth day of the great battle of Verdun saw the Crown Prince striving desperately to shatter the French trench in furious fighting on the Douaumont plateau.

Violent clashes are occurring in Fresnes woods. But the main struggle, according to latest Paris despatches has narrowed to the two-mile front extending from Haudremont wood to Douaumont. The French have dropped a deadly curtain of fire, checking all further German advances on this front.

At the same time they are counter-attacking viciously in efforts to re-occupy Douaumont village.

French artillery replied with an intense fire that riddled the foremost ranks. Other French guns threw a deadly hail behind the oncoming Germans, blocking the arrival of reinforcements. Caught between two sheets of artillery and machine gun fire, the Germans were slaughtered.

NEW LIGHT ON KAISER

Diplomat Reveals Inside History of Origin of the War

The Paris Matin prints the following written by Count Melgar, former secretary and confidant of Don Carlos and now a leading member of the Carlist party, the sympathies of which are strongly pro-German: "I was out at Prahadorff when the war broke out. I was then Germanophile and was pleased over the prospect of German success, on which I counted. I hurried to Vienna and the first thing I saw was the secret document written by the German Emperor to the Emperor of Austria to inform him of the order given to carry on a war of extermination. 'My soul is bursting with grief,' wrote the Kaiser, 'but it is absolutely necessary to put everything to fire and the sword; men and women, children and aged must be slaughtered; not a single tree must be left upright, nor a roof intact.'

"Such atrocious things made the first breach in my admiration for Germany. A few days later I read in an evening paper a speech delivered by the Kaiser to his soldiers in which he declared that he had learned that two French military doctors had entered Metz and poisoned the garrison wells with cholera microbes. Then I understood that such a man was not merely cruel but a shameless liar and calumniator. I also had an opportunity of learning of the grief of the Russian Ambassador, who had told one of his friends how he had, in an interview with Emperor Francis Joseph declared his Government ready to make important concessions to avoid war.

"The aged monarch had yielded to his prayers and authorized him to telegraph to Petrograd and all danger of war was over. The next morning the Ambassador was hurriedly summoned to the Emperor, who said that he was obliged to take back his word, as the Kaiser Wilhelm had telegraphed to him. 'If Austria is afraid, Germany fears nobody, and to burn the bridges I have just declared war on Russia.' This revelation compelled my conversion. I felt sure that the Kaiser Wilhelm, instead of being the instrument of God, was inspired by the devil."

TOMMY'S HARD LUCK

Only Hundred Yards From Holland and Liberty, But Is Cheerful

Among the adventurous attempts at escape from German prisons, that of the young Bristol soldier who tells the story in a letter to his father is certain to hold a high place in the annals of the war. The soldier does not state just where he was imprisoned. He says: "I put my idea of escaping from here to Holland and thence home into operation. After creeping through forests, over rough country roads, and all kinds of difficult places, travelling by night only, and in the day lying hidden in forests, I was captured on a Saturday night about 8.30 by German sentinels. I was only 100 yards from my goal, the German-Holland frontier. This came about by my feet and legs being frozen from the knee downwards, after lying in deep snow day after day without covering. At the time I felt like crying, so weak and disappointed was I, but now I am inclined to laugh, because there is a humorous side to every question. As a reward for my strenuous efforts to escape, my star is in the descendant with the German prison officials and I am kept locked up night and day alone, being let out of my cell only for exercise. I have had very bad luck and I want cheering up."

BIG DIAMOND THEFT.

CHICAGO, March 4.—The theft of diamonds said to be valued at more than $25,000 from Dreicer & Company, jewellers, was reported to the police to-day.

According to Edward L. Smith, manager of the concern, which is located in the Blackstone Hotel, a well-dressed man entered the store yesterday and asked to see some diamond rings. Smith brought out three trays, each containing twelve rings. After ten minutes' conversation with Manager Smith over the comparative merits of the rings,—all set with large diamonds, the customer left the place, declaring himself dissatisfied.

Smith says he accompanied the stranger to the door, and when he returned one of the trays with the diamonds was missing.

A tumbler with a compartment that can be filled with ice or hot water to keep its contents cold or warm has been invented.

The Place of The Canadian Red Cross In War Organizations

At the outbreak of war, the principle of division of labour was promptly applied to all organizations formed, or in progress of formation, for Red Cross, Relief work, and other forms of patiotic activity in Canada. There has been no overlapping of societies, and all forms of civilian effort have been duly incorporated, and co-ordinated into an extremely efficient federation of natural societies.

The National Relief Committee, which holds its sittings at Ottawa under Government sanction, is the Executive Committee of all the Federated National War Work Societies, such as the Canadian Red Cross, the St. John Ambulance Association, the St. John Ambulance Brigade and the National Committee of Women for Patriotic Service, commonly known as the National Service Committee.

There is a clear understanding as to duties of these respective bodies. The function of the Canadian Red Cross Society is to collect funds and materials for the equipment of hospitals, the relief of wounded, and prisoners of war. It acts in the closest possible connection with the Army Medical Service.

The St. John Ambulance Association forms centres for instruction in First Aid. It has been more active in England, where there are innumerable private hospitals and a great demand for volunteer nurses.

The St. John Ambulance Brigade selects the Red Cross nurses and orderlies, who are sent to the front under Red Cross auspices. The National Service Committee, composed of the Presidents of all nationally organised Women's Societies in Canada has the specific duty of collecting field comforts for the troops. They have their special commissioner in London, who superintends the distribution of these supplies.

Each of these organizations above mentioned has complete autonomy in its own sphere of duty. There aims are in no sense antagonistic although perhaps the Canadian Red Cross is the senior partner in this merger of Canadian Relief work inasmuch as the claim of the sick and suffering is of paramount importance.

MONTREAL, March 4.—After being confined 32 hours in the burned Bonaventure station, a four-months-old Italian police dog, the property of Lew Ritchie, an employee of the Grand Trunk, was found in the wreckage yesterday. The animal, nearly dead from cold and exhaustion, was successfully revived.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—It would be interesting to know how many were present at the Trades and Labour Council meeting that passed the resolution against prohibition. Surely they do not think that at this late day it will be thought that Peterborough sentiment is against temperance. Three times within the last seven years the electors have declared at the polls very emphatically that they do not want the bar (twice on Local Option and once at the Provincial election), and now they have sent a petition to the legislature signed by an overwhelming majority, to prohibit the sale throughout the province. Labour would be blind indeed if it really believed that the liquor trade was beneficial to it in the slightest degree. Taking up the argument on their own ground it is a well known fact that for the same amount of turn-overs the traffic in liquor employs but a very small percentage of labour and pays but a moiety in wages in comparison with other trades, and if the cash was not spent in drink it would be available and would be spent in the trades employing the larger number of men of all trades. The Personal Liberty cry in the mouths of the liquor men is a case of the devil quoting scripture with a vengeance. Since when have they been so concerned about the personal liberty of their customers? How many times have they appeared in court when their customers appeared for drunkenness and paid their fines for them so that they might not be incarcerated? How many times have they furnished counsel for the murderer who killed his victim under the influence of drink? How many times have they intervened to save the wives and children of the drunkard from the poor house, and yet to-day they are willing to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to retain the privilege of selling whiskey and profess to be doing it because they are jealous of the personal liberty of their customers. The veneer is too thin and would not deceive even one of their own customers when in his cups. Like the Germans they see the handwriting on the wall and are getting desperate. Let no one be deceived. What they are fighting for is not other people's personal liberty but the freedom to go on making easy money out of the blood and tears of their fellows.

Yours, etc.,
George Leader.

They are not really sick and hesitate to complain, but they lack that ambition and vivacity which is their birthright. They do not need drugs—but do need the tonic and nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that makes richer blood, fills hollow cheeks, suppresses nervousness and establishes strength. Nourishment alone makes blood and Scott's Emulsion is the essence of concentrated nourishment, free from wines or opiates.

INTERIOR OF ENGLISH HOME WHICH WAS DESTROYED BY ZEPPELIN BOMBS—German Zeppelins are again active in their raids on England. Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is no another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumweacop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skilful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"I know, I know! Now do me a great favour. When we berth at the quay Mademoiselle and I will slip away quietly in the confusion and darkness. See to it that none of the strangers learns our name. I'll warn Monsieur Tollemache myself. Get all these people to Julia's. Tell her that the lady, Madame Carmac, is very wealthy, and that the man with the broken arm is Mr. Carmac's secretary; so every sort of expenditure will be met, though Julia's kind heart would leave nothing undone for a shipwrecked crew if they were paupers. There may be some inquiry about Mademoiselle Yvonne; but refer to her only by her Christian name, and say she lives at Madame Pitou's."

"Oui, M'sieu'." Peridot promised willingly enough. Nevertheless he was obviously bewildered.

"I ask this," explained Ingersoll, "because my daughter and I will depart for Paris by the first train to-morrow. You see, by extraordinary mischance, this Mr. and Mrs. Carmac and I were not on good terms years ago, and I don't wish old scores to be reopened."

"No, no. I need a little holiday, and I'm taking it now. That is all. We shall come back to the old life—never fear."

"You mean that, M'sieu'?"

"Of course, M'sieu', you understand that I cannot silence the tongues of the whole town?"

"I don't care what anybody hears to-morrow. Remember, if poor Madame Carmac dies, no other person will have the slightest interest in my whereabouts. If she lives, and is able to travel, she will certainly endeavour to get away from Pont Aven as speedily as possible. Peridot, it is Yvonne I am thinking of, not of myself."

"Monsieur, you can count on me absolutely."

"And not a word of this to a soul?"

"But you need not lie at all. Simply forget what I have told you—as to my reason for to-morrow's journey, I mean."

"Monsieur, it is forgotten already."

Tollemache came, chuckling. "Sorry you missed the skipper's homily, Ingersoll," he said. "I laughed like a hyena. I hope the people in the cabin couldn't overhear me. By Jove! to tell you the truth, I didn't even remember that there was a dead man aboard."

"The best tragedies indulge in a what is called 'comic relief,'" said Ingersoll dryly. "Give Yvonne a hail, will you? I want a word with her."

Tollemache stooped to the hatch. "Yvonne!" he said.

"Yes," came the girl's voice.

Her father, intent on its slightest cadence, deemed it placid and self-possessed.

"Socrates wants you."

Socrates was a title conferred on Ingersoll by his artist friends owing to his philosophic habit of mind. Nothing disturbed him, they vowed. Once, when the queer little steam tram that jingles into and out of Pont Aven four times daily was derailed, some alarm was created by the fact that Ingersoll, though known to be a passenger, was missing. When found he was perched on the side of the overturned carriage in which he had been seated. On climbing out through a window he discovered that from this precise locality and elevation he obtained a capital view of a wayside chapel; so he sketched it without delay. The chance, no less than the point of view, might not offer again!

Yvonne appeared, her head and shoulders dimly visible in the frame of the hatch. "What is it, Dad?" she inquired.

"We're in the river now, Dearest, and I thought you might join us on deck. You have done all that is possible, I'm sure."

"I simply cannot desert that poor woman until she shows some signs of returning consciousness."

"Oh, is she still insensible"

"Yes. If only I could get her to swallow a little brandy."

"Well, she will be in the doctor's hands soon. Better leave matters to him."

"But one must try."

"Of course. If you prefer remaining below——"

"Father dear, what else can I do?" She vanished again.

Ingersoll, having ascertained exactly what he wished to know, sighed in sheer relief, and turned to Tollemache. "Lorry," he said, "have you a dry cigar in your pocket? How stupid of me! You're soaked through and through. I hope none of us picks up a stiff dose of pneumonia as the sequel to to-day's excitement. Now a quiet word in your ear. Yvonne and I are going away to-morrow for a week or so."

"Going away—from Pont Aven?"

Tollemache's voice executed a crescendo of dismay; but Ingersoll only laughed, and, or the first time since that disastrous reef was left behind, his manner reverted to its normal air of good-humoured cynicism.

"Why select two words from a sentence and invest them with a significance they don't possess? I put in a saving clause. A week, or even two, can hardly be twisted into a lifetime."

"Does Yvonne know?"

"No. I have decided on the journey only within the last ten minutes. We're taking a little trip to Paris solely to avoid the gush and sentiment that will flow in Pont Aven during the next few days like a river in flood. Moreover, Lorry, if you're wise, you'll come with us."

Tollemache little realized how truly spontaneous was his friend's invitation. "D'ye mean that, Ingersoll?" he said elatedly.

"Why not? Don't let any question of expense stop you. This outing will be my Christmas treat."

"Expense! Dash it all! I've money to burn. Er—that is—enough, at any rate, to afford a jaunt to Paris. When do we start?"

"Soon after seven o'clock."

"By jing! Sharp work."

"If we really intend to escape, why stand on the order of our going?"

"I'm not saying a word. You rather took my breath away at first, you know."

"You should allow for the kinks in the artistic temperament, Lorry. Enthusiasm is too often the herald of despair."

"What sort of job do you really recommend me to take up, Socrates?"

Ingersoll smiled. "I am not in the habit of dealing my friends such shrewd blows," he said. "I was talking of myself—and Yvonne. Make no mistake about her. She has a sane mind in a sound body; but the artist's nature will triumph some day, and she will surprise all of us. By the way—nothing of this project to her till I have explained it. We shall see you at Mere Pitou's, of course?"

"I've promised to shake a leg with Madame herself in a gavotte. You don't suppose that Carmac's death will interfere with the feast?"

"Why should it?" said Ingersoll coldly. "The man is an utter stranger."

Tollemache did not strive to interpret his friend's mood. In so far as it mystified him, and he gave it any thought, he assumed that the tremendous physical exertion and nervous strain of those few minutes when life or death was uncertain as the spin of a coin had affected an ordinarily even-minded disposition.

Peridot interrupted their talk by asking Tollemache to lower the sail. Coming in with wind and tide, the Hirondelle had scudded across the bar without effort. Hardly a whiff of spray had touched her deck, and pursuing waves lagged defeated in her wake.

The sweeps were manned by willing volunteers, and the wet and shivering sailors soon restored vitality by tackling the work in relays. Usually sardine boats are content to drift up the estuary on a remarkably rapid tidal stream; so the Hirondelle made a fast trip that evening. The change in the wind had blown away the clouds brought inland by the first phase of the gale. The sky was clear, and, stars were twinkling through the violet haze that followed the sun's disappearance. Pinpoints of light from the shores of the narrowing inlet scintillated from Port Manech, the Chateau of Poulguin, and the few tiny hamlets that bord-r the Aven. Ever the opposing cliffs grew loftier, more abrupt, more wooded, until a cluster of lighted windows and street lamps on the water's edge at the end of one of the interminable bends showed that Pont Aven was drawing near. Thereabouts the valley opened out again; though the little town itself has been compelled to lodge its "Place" and half its houses on the first easy slopes of the steepest hill in the district.

Ingersoll, who had taken his turn at the oars with the others, contrived to choke his impatience until the pollard oaks on the Chemin du Hallage silhouetted their gnarled branches against the sky. That night the weird arms, swaying and creaking in a wind that was, if anything, increasing in force, had a sinister aspect in his troubled eyes. Each oak looked like some dreadful octopus, whose innumerable suckers were searching vindictively for an unwary victim. With an effort he brushed aside the evil fantasy, and was about to summon Yvonne when a weird, uncanny, elfin shriek came from the shadow of the largest and blackest tree.

"O, ma Doue!" (Breton for "O, mon Dieu!") was the cry. "There he is! See him, then, my brave Jean!" Peridot's mother was greeting her son in a voice rendered eldritch by hysteria.

"Eh, b'en Maman!" the Breton shouted back. "What are thou doing there at this time of night?"

A number of running black figures appeared on the quay, an unprecedented thing, except in the conditions that actually obtained.

"Que diable!" growled Peridot, who had not bargained for a popular ovation. "They know all about us. Someone must have telephoned from the signal station at Brigneau."

He had summed up the position of affairs to a nicety. Brigneau had told the whole story to Pont Aven, and assuredly it had lost nothing in the telling. The signallers had seen every detail of the rescue through their telescopes, and were of course keenly alive to the peril into which the Hirondelle had plunged so gallantly and effectively.

The news had not long arrived; but sufficient time had elapsed that Pont Aven was stirred to its depths. Even old Madame Larraidou, crippled with rheumatism and sixty years of unremitting toil, had hobbled down to the quay to welcome her own special hero.

Efficiency built the Panama Canal, after inefficiency failed. The efficiency of the Panama Canal doubled the effectiveness of the U. S. Navy without adding a ship to it. It took over 8,000 miles out of the trip from New York to San Francisco and changed the highway between London and Australia from Suez to Panama.

Efficiency insures against lost motion—it produces the utmost service out of equipment and yields the finest product, at the least cost.

Certain-teed
Roofing
is an efficiency product

Every advantage that men, money and machinery can offer is used to increase the production, maintain the quality and lower the cost. Each of the General's enormous mills is advantageously located to serve the ends of efficient manufacture and quick distribution. Each is equipped with the most up-to-date machinery. Raw materials are purchased in enormous quantities and far ahead of the needs of manufacturing, thus guarding against increased cost due to idle machinery. This also insures favorable buying, and the pick of the market.

Expert chemists at each mill are employed to select and blend the asphalts, and every roll of CERTAIN-TEED is made under their watchful care.

CERTAIN-TEED resists the drying-out process so destructive to ordinary roofing, because the felt is thoroughly saturated with a blend of soft asphalts, prepared under the formula of the General's board of expert chemists. It is then coated with a blend of harder asphalts, which keeps the inner saturation soft. This makes a roofing more pliable, and more impervious to the elements, than the harder, drier kind.

CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls; also in slate-surfaced shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roofs, from the largest sky-scraper to the smallest residence or out-building.

CERTAIN-TEED is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply (1, 2 or 3). Experience proves that it lasts longer.

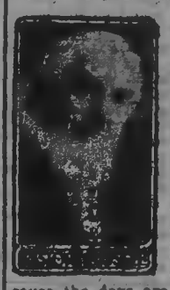
LIVING THE TRUE CHRISTIAN LIFE

Bible Addressed to the Lord's People Only.

Consecration Necessary to Understand the Bible—"Redeeming the Time"—Difficulties in the Way—Prove All Things by the Word—How to Study the Bible—Tests of Loyalty—"Because the Days Are Evil"—The Christian's Proper Adorning—Faithfulness to Our Stewardship.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]



New York City, March 5.—Pastor Russell delivered a very pointed, practical address this evening, at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway, from the text: "See, then, that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil." (Ephesians 5: 15, 16.) He said in part:

This text, like all the injunctions of the Scriptures, is addressed to the Church of God, not to the world; for the Lord is not dealing with the world at present. It is an important thing to recognize this fact. Many, losing sight of it, are in confusion when they come to the study of the Bible. In His Word the Lord is not telling the world what they should do, but is telling His servants what steps they should take from the time they become His people. Many think of the Bible as being addressed to the entire world, and then are surprised that the world cannot understand it. But we who know that our Lord said to His disciples, "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven," are not surprised that before any can understand God's Word they must take the step of full consecration to Him.

It is to Christians, then, that the Lord gives this message of our text. God's children should walk circumspectly, wisely, carefully, redeeming the time. Our time is redeemed, bought back, by making some sacrifice, that we may have that time to use profitably. There are certain natural claims upon our time. We need time to eat and to sleep, to earn and prepare our food. Besides this, there are other calls. Our families have some demands upon us, whether Christians or not. Husbands have some proper demands upon wives, and wives upon husbands; children upon parents, and parents upon children. Our neighbors have some proper call upon us in the way of helpfulness.

Many Seductive Allurements To-day.

Then, beyond all our obligations, the world now has many things to allure and attract, to please eye and ear. There are newspapers and periodicals, moving pictures and fairs, art galleries, concerts, and what not. Anyone who has brains may have his time filled to the full in these multitudinous ways. The Lord's children find that their entire time might be taken up by earthly interests, if they would permit it.

But God has called us to be New Creatures. He has put into our minds new plans, new interests, and into our lives new work, new obligations. The earthly ambitions have died since we received the new ambitions, since we have found that the Lord has invited us to become joint-heirs with His Son Jesus in the glories of the Kingdom. We say to ourselves "All those earthly things are transitory, and never were worth very much at best. The riches which God has promised are everlasting and of infinite value." So we wish to have our minds set upon these things.

God invites us to Himself through the promises of the Bible; and these promises work in us to will and to do His good pleasure. In selecting His Church the Lord is not using force. We are not cattle to be driven, but sheep to be led. The Heavenly Shepherd calls His sheep; and they follow Him. "They know His voice;" but "they know not the voice of strangers." The Good Shepherd's voice sounds forth from the Bible; and if anybody says of some voice, "This is the voice of the Lord," we are to make sure by going to the Bible and proving or disproving the claim. We might get some serious error even from a friend. We must in every case, as Christians, prove all things by the Word, and hold fast that which is good.

As we endeavor to meditate upon the things God has promised us, we find that we have very little time for that purpose. One may begin the day by thinking, "I will do thus and so." But difficulties and interruptions come pressing in, and till the day. What shall be done? The Apostle says, Redeem the time—buy it back. Curtail some of the other things, that you may have some time to use in the cultivation of your own character, in the study of the Scriptures.

How to Study the Bible.

Presumably as Bible students we have all had experiences in reading the Scriptures without help. We have read chapter after chapter, and often it did us little good. But we find that there is a different way to study the Bible, by which we may enjoy the Scriptures and be profited. We find that we have needed a kind of outline or plan for study. We now see the outline—from Creation down to the Deluge one great period; from the Deluge down to the First Coming of Christ another period; from the First Coming of Christ to His Second Coming another period; then the Millennial Age; and lastly the ages of glory to follow. This helps to straighten matters out.

When we read, we should ask ourselves: "With what does this part of the Scriptures deal?" The Bible is full of problems to solve, like an arithmetic. We do not merely read through an arithmetic; if we did we would learn little. We are to study the Bible according to dispensations, and according to what God outlines as His great Plan of the Ages. Nobody can comprehend the Divine Plan of the Ages (Ephesians 3:11, Diaglott) without studying it. This Plan of God is all outlined in the Bible. We must examine each Scripture in relation to its context. So we need considerable time to understand properly the Word of God.

Milk for Babes; Meat for Adults

The older we grow as Christians, the more time we find is necessary for these spiritual things. Natural food is to make one strong, bright, intelligent, quick, as a nautral man; and spiritual food is to make the New Creature intelligent, quick, well established, apt to teach, able to "rightly divide the Word of Truth." As we mature we need stronger food. It was sufficient that we had milk to start with. But milk will not suffice for adults.

While we are growing to appreciate more the Word of God, the whole world is becoming filled with attractions. But as we see the day of Christ drawing on, yea, that it is even now upon us, we as God's children must be more and more attentive to our Heavenly Calling. Why did not the Lord arrange things some other way, that we might have more time? He wishes to see whether we appreciate the spiritual things or not. Whoever is not hungry for spiritual food has no desire to go to the spiritual table, is not using his talents along spiritual lines. We should give a good share of our time to the study of the Truth as it is in Jesus. We should have a hunger for righteousness, for Bible Truth. The Lord is testing us. He knows that whoever is really hungry and thirsty for righteousness will redeem the time. And the zeal with which we redeem the time and devote it to the spiritual things is one of the evidences we give of our real Christian character.

If you take time for a picture show, but do not take time for the study of God's Word, this is abundant proof that you do not love Him supremely. You say that you are hungry for the Word of Truth. How much time do you spend with the newspaper? How much time do you spend with the Bible? There is no use in trying to deceive the Lord. "God is not mocked." He knows all about what we are doing. He will not be deceived in respect to our character.

We know that as Christians we have two natures to deal with. We have the old nature—reckoned dead—which has its ordinary appetites and desires, the same as other people. We like certain kinds of food. We have a variety of natural tastes, all of which are clamoring for recognition. We desire to investigate machinery, to look into investments, to think about the triumphs of mankind, to study the sciences, etc. These are all right enough in their place. God does not say that it is wrong to have a desire to know; but He is putting things in such a way as to give us tests as to whether we are the more appreciative of these things or of the Heavenly things.

Whoever spends his consecrated time in reading history, novels, etc., or in attending places of amusement, is not spending it in building up the New Creature. Each human being has his natural individual desires; but the New Creature is to put these natural cravings down. The New Creature is as yet only in the mind. He figuratively puts down his foot and says, "God has promised me His grace to rule this body. Backed up by His help, I can succeed. I agreed to sacrifice these earthly interests, and it shall be done! I am determined to live on the spiritual plane; therefore I must grow; I must get stronger every day." If we let ourselves drift, the flesh will take possession of everything; and we shall die of spiritual starvation.

The Apostle Paul wrote to certain of the Church in his day, implying that some were still babes. He says, "When for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the doctrine of Christ, and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat." (Hebrews 5: 12-14.) What a sad condition for New Creatures in Christ!

We must not think that we are to do something for somebody else first, neglecting our own spiritual development. As New Creatures we must build up ourselves first. Then we may do all that we can to assist others, "doing good unto all men as we have opportunity, especially to the Household of Faith." This is the speaker's personal contract with the Lord; and thus it is with the whole family of God. We are building up ourselves and one another. The faithful members of Christ's Body are growing, everywhere; and soon, we believe, this spiritual family of God will be completed beyond the veil.

Redeeming the Moments.

Many of the Lord's people do not see the force of the Apostolic injunction that they should redeem the time; and therefore they are living at a disadvantage. They do not notice the many minutes they waste in the twenty-four hours. Let us then as consecrated children of God see that we do not squander time. Let us see what we can lop off, how we can get the minutes under our control. If one can get sixty of them redeemed, he will have an hour. By pinching and economizing here and there one may very easily save this hour for the service of the Lord or for Bible study.

"Because the days are evil," says St. Paul. His thought is, "Realizing that our days, as they are passing, are unfavorable to us as New Creatures." This is particularly true of our own day. With all the enlightenment of to-day there are many blessings of an earthly kind coming in, preparatory to the New Age. The nearer we get to the establishment of God's Kingdom, the greater is the pressure on every side from the world.

As we see that the Day of Christ is right upon us, this should be all the more an incentive to draw us together as children of God. (Hebrews 10:25.) We shall have special need of the helmet of salvation, the shield of faith, and all the Christian's armor. (Ephesians 6: 12-18.) We have come down to the time when there is trouble all about us. It is the fire of the "great Day of the Lord." This fire "Shall try every man's work." Some who have built their faith structure on traditions of men will find that they have built with wood, hay, and stubble. Others have built their faith with gold, silver, and precious stones, God's revelations. All who have builded with combustible material will find that their structures will be consumed. Only those structures will stand that have been built with God's Truth.—1 Corinthians 3: 11-15.

Mortify the Natural Cravings.

If we wish to make our "calling and election sure," we shall have special assistance, but we shall have trials to correspond. People to-day have many more trials than our grandfathers had. On Sundays they had little else to do but attend worship. Their had much saint in which to think about God and the life. We do not find it so. But God has so provided that His people of to-day have abundant supplies of grace to carry them through if they will make use of the helps which He has furnished and will eliminate the unnecessary things. But in order to make use of God's provisions we must deny ourselves those things that the flesh is craving. As the Apostle says, "Mortify your members which are upon the earth."—Colossians 3: 5-10.

There is a beauty about the Lord's Plan. He deals with us like this: "You have said that you have given your life to Me. I told you that you must redeem the time which you have consecrated to Me. Now demonstrate your ingenuity in the matter, your earnestness and your spirit to sacrifice your earthly interests." If you have thought that in your consecration your earthly interests are to be just as well taken care of as before, then either you do not understand the matter, or else you are not living up to your covenant. Give less attention to bodily comforts. Give more time for spiritual food, to service for the Lord, the Truth, and the brethren. This is God's arrangement for us as New Creatures. We are happy to learn His will. He is not expecting anything unreasonable of us. But He does expect us to be careful of our time, of our conduct, of how we live our profession.

We know that God loves all His children, and desires to see them beautiful. Then why does the Apostle advise the Lord's people not to adorn themselves with "gold or pearls or costly array!" (1 Timothy 2:9, 10.) In the present time there are various reasons why God would advise us not to wear jewelry and expensive clothing.

In the first place, in our present fallen condition of mind, when we put gold or diamonds upon our fingers and in our ears, in the bosoms of our shirts, etc., it indicates a certain amount of pride, a factor that would not be advantageous to us. We are, naturally, like the rest of mankind, more or less susceptible to pride, although we have nothing of which to be proud. Moreover, it might have a bad effect upon others. Some might see a Christian elegantly appareled and say, "Look how that lady or that gentleman is decked out! And that ring must have cost $200 or $500!" Then they feel envious—"What right has he, or what right has she, to have these things when I cannot have them?" Is it not better that Christians who have money should not wear such things and thus excite the cupidity and envy of those who cannot afford them?

There are a great many people in the world who have a very hard time to make a living, and never get enough to have the reasonable comforts of life. Why should a child of God put on diamonds or rich clothing to show himself or herself off as a picture, while many others lack food or clothing or medicine? Rather than wear such things, would he not prefer to give its value to somebody who needs it or to carry the Truth to others? Certainly this would be the mind of the Lord?

There is a further reason. As Christians we stand more or less as reflections of God. We profess to have renounced the pride and vanity of the flesh and to have set our affections on Heavenly things, and to be putting on the spiritual adornments. We must therefore not follow our natural mind in this matter, but the mind of God, that we may show forth His praise "who hath called us out of darkness into His marvellous.

When we have given our little all, it is a mere trifle. None of us have very much. It is only our reasonable service to render to the Lord all that we have. God will not extort these things from us and use them for us. We must use them ourselves to His glory. He says to us, "I wish you to take charge of these matters as My steward, and I will see how you fulfil your stewardship. If you have much love and much of the spirit of obedience, you will prove it by your conduct, by your spirit of sacrifice."

If you have few talents, or opportunities for service, you will have a chance to show what you can do with little. If you have more talents, the Lord will watch to see what you do with much. Everyone whom God accepts into His family may, if he will, eventually hear the Master's "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the lable and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisonous and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath bad taste, coated stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

BISMARCK'S BIG COUP

Misleading Telegram Aroused Both France and Germany

It was Bismarck's tricky handling of the famous Ems telegram that started the long-prepared war of 1870-1 against France. The history of the Ems telegram is briefly, as follows: June 25, 1870, Isabella II. of Spain, who had been deposed in 1868, formally abdicated, July 5 the foreign Governments were notified, and the fact generally made known that Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern had consented, evidently with the approval of the King of Prussia, to become a candidate for the Spanish throne. The announcement, of course, created intense excitement in France, and on July 12 the withdrawal of Prince Leopold's candidacy was made public. France did not want Hohenzollern ruling on two frontiers, and on July 13 the French Ambassador forced himself upon the presence of the Prussian King, Wilhelm I., at Ems, and insisted that the King make a formal and specific declaration that no Hohenzollern Prince would be permitted to accept the crown of Spain. The King declined to listen to the Ambassador's demand, and broke off the interview. He then sent Bismarck a copy of the French demand, with permission to "use" it. Bismarck gave the press only parts of the demand that would be sure to arouse and inflame the Germans. France declared the nation insulted, and declared war against Prussia, July 19.

Bayonet's Novel Use

In order to avoid the German artillery, reserve troops are always marched to relieve the "Tommies" in the trenches under the cover of night. This means that several hundred men have to grope their way through the lengthy communication trenches in pitch darkness. Some means has therefore had to be devised to prevent the men from losing their way in the darkness and wandering down one or another of the network of trenches which lie in the rear of the firing line. This is accomplished by the ingenious plan of each man grasping in his left hand the bayonet scabbard attached to the belt of the man in front. Thus a line of several hundred men can be led through zig-zag trenches, without risk of one soldier going astray, as the whole file is joined together like a long chain.

RUSSIA'S HUGE ARMY

Czar's Dominion Possessed of Unlimited Men For Warfare

Rabino Bisboff writes: Before the war broke out Russia was credited with possessing by far the largest army on a peace footing in the world. It was estimated at 50,000 officers and 1,300,000 men, of whom over a million were combatants. The peace strength of Germany was about 850,000; of France, 800,000; of Austria, 500,000; and Italy, 400,000. Every year in this country rather more than 1,300,000 males attain the age when they are liable to military service, but only about one-third are called to the colors ordinarily and embodied, the "annual contingent," amounting to some 450,000 men. For her vast extent, and owing to special local conditions, the Russian army was divided into four parts, each of which was an army in itself with features of its own, though all, broadly speaking, had a similar basis. The whole formed a grand total of thirty-seven corps, each approximately consisting of 45,000 men. In addition to her army corps and rifle brigades, this country had in peace twenty-three cavalry divisions, each 4,500 strong when mobilized, and vast numbers of Cossacks, estimated at about 250,000 effectives.

The imperial ukase ordering mobilization at the end of July, 1914, called to the colors 2,800,000 men of all arms, but this great host was rapidly increased, as the country had immense reserves. Germany and Austrian military authorities stated that Russia had more than 7,500,000 trained men at her disposal. Long ago the German chancellor admitted, not, it may be supposed without fear, that this country possessed a practically inexhaustible supply of men. Russia's resources in men were 20,000,000 fit for war duties. The most of them are still available. No wonder the loss of territory does not dismay her people.

The German Patriotic Fund

The German Government are making the wives and children of the Hun soldiers an allowance; but it is only a small one. The wife receives the magnanimous sum of twelve marks per month, with an additional six marks for each child. The mark is worth about 25 cents, so that a wife with two children would receive $6 per month from her grateful Government. This law, of course, to be augmented by grants from local authorities.

She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

Learned From a Sample Nineteen Years Ago

Living eighteen miles from a drug store Mr. Carr found it necessary to keep in the house some treatment to regulate the action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

To the habit of keeping these important organs active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, when required, he attributes the good health of his large family.

Here, surely, is evidence of the value of these pills as a family medicine to protect the members of the family who use it from the common ills so many of which arises from constipation of the bowels and torpid condition of the liver and kidneys.

Mr. James Carr, Maynooth, Ont., writes: "About 19 years ago I received an envelope containing two of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I was doctoring at the time with two doctors, and as they did me no good I used the Pills, and by the time I had finished one box I was cured of the pain in the back and shoulders.

"We have great confidence in Dr Chase's Medicines. I have a family of ten children and have never had a doctor in the house for any of them. We live eighteen miles from a drug store and find that these Pills cure nearly all the ordinary ills by regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels. That we are all well and sound I attribute to their use and I have recommended them to hundreds and given away many a box because I believe there is no medicine so good."

By awakening the action of liver kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the system of poisons and remove the cause of biliousness, headaches, backache, lumbago, kidney disease and rheumatism. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

"My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction,' and spent large sums of money, until we happened on 'Fruit-a-tives'. We have used it in the family for about two years, and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives."

ACCIDENT STARTED ENGINE ON A RUN

A peculiar accident occurred on the T. B. & O. Railway at Wilberforce. The engine was detached from the train and was taking water when a steam pipe burst and blew the cap off a steam valve in the cab. Mr. Barcottie, the engineer, was knocked back to the tender, and the force of the explosion threw the throttle wide open. The engine was reversed at the time, and it started back at a high speed. When it bumped into the train the impact broke three or four drawheads and smashed the coach so badly that it had to go to the shop for repairs. It was very fortunate that no one was seriously injured.—Bancroft Times.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The Kansas Experiment Station is trying to find a suitable point for the Kansasclimate. For oils they are trying linseed, fish oil, soy bean, corn oil and sunflower.

Dairy cows should be dehorned, because dehorning makes a cow more docile, and easier to handle and feed. There are now plenty naturally hornless dairy breeds to select from.

In deciding what labourers should be retained on the farm each instance should be regulated by the demands of the farmer, as indicated by the probable help from unskilled labour.

Beautiful grounds can be obtained without a lavish expenditure of money and without sacrifice of convenience. Since the house is the centre of all home enjoyment too much attention cannot be given to its beautification.

Field and garden seed supplies are practically assured for the 1916 planting. There is a scarcity in beans, onions, and to a lesser extent sweet corn. Swede turnips enough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Women may train their daughters in all the ways they imagine to e pleasing to men; they may teach them to wiggle and squirm and reef in their waists and roll their eyes and limp out insipid nothings between carmine-stained lips, and yet the men will desert them to flock about the girl who is fully and completely independent of them, and who cares very little whether they fall in love with her or not. It is natural for men to want what they cannot get too easily and women cheapen themselves who thus "stoop to conquer".

The kitchen in house may represent an engine room in a steamship and the cook may represent the engineer. However beautifully furnished the rest of the ship is, if the engineer is incapable, or the engine is broken, all will go wrong; so it is with the home, no matter how nice the parlors are furished, if the cook is not competent, everyone connected with the home will have to suffer the consequences.

Let us not wait for chances for doing good to come to us, but to go out to meet them. Too many beautiful opportunities escape us otherwise. As charity begins at home, so should love. We don't care much for either the charity or love that would leave its nearest to want for duty or affection and go out into the world to work. We find it a delightful plan to make each one of our homefolks happy about some one thing each day of our life—plan little surprises for their delight, do little deeds for them, brighten a dull hour, or congratulate them upon some achievement of their own.

Money is a good thing, especially in these times, but there is something much more valuable. It is character, the consciousness of a pure and honorable life. This should be young man's first aim to preserve at any cost.

Home life is the sure test of home character. Let the husband grow cross and surly, and the wife grow cold and unamiable. The children grow cross and savage as young bears. The father becomes callous, peevish, hard, kind of a two-legged brute with clothes on. The wife bristles in self-defense. They develop an unnatural growth and sharpness of teeth and the house is haunted by ugliness and domestic brawls. This is not what the family circle should be. If one must be rude to any, let it be to some one he does not love—not his wife, brother of parents.

Sometimes the hasty word has been spoken, the sharp, snappish word been carelessly uttered in the home circle. The true wife's heart so often bleeds at the bitter, thoughtless, but cutting word of a husband. When she is gone to Heaven and he "weeps o'er her bier" he will remember it.

There is a demand for good boys. The boy who is honest, earnest and industrious, will not be long out of a job. There are lots of prosperous business men, merchants and mechanics, who are constantly on the look out for good boys. They do not look for them on the streets, however, but in some sort of employment. They have no use for an idle boy. He is too apt to make an idle man.

Though you may cut off from your early associates, and though you may be separated from all your kindred, young man, is there not a room somewhere that you can call your own? Though it be the fourth story of a third class boarding house, into that room rather books, pictures and a harp. Hang your mother's portrait over the mantle. Bid unholy mirth stand back from that threshold. Consecrate some spot in that room with the knee of prayer. By the memory of other days, a father's counsel, a mother's love and a sister's confidence, call it home.

Shovel your saloon money, theatre money, shooting gallery money, rink money, tobacco money, into the bank, and gather something to beautify and render more pleasant the sweetest place on earth—home.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

GREAT SCOTCH

Teacher—"In what year was the Battle of Waterloo fought?" Pupil—"I don't know." Teacher—"It's simple enough if you only would learn how to cultivate artificial memory. Remember the twelve months. Add half that number to them. That's eighteen. Double that number to 36. That's the year of the twelve months again. Add a quarter of their number to them. That's three. Add what you have got. That's 39. That's the date. Quite simple to remember dates if you will only adopt my system."

Clear artificial teeth with fine salt. Olive oil will clean aluminum ware and keep it free from rust.

Did not Include Either.—At a social gathering in Scotland the hostess, who by the way was exceedingly plain looking, had been pressing a bashful bachelor to sing a song or give a toast. After being several times pressed to sing and refused he resolved to give a toast, planning at the same time to have a dig at the hostess. "Well, Davie, let's hear from you," says she; then, he gave "Hoopit-ours and bonnie lasses." "Wi'a' ma heart, Davie, for that neither includes you nor me!"

TAKE "CASCARETS" IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS AND CONSTIPATED

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

A NO-MAN'S LAND HIDDEN IN BELGIUM

Perpetual Neutrality of Moresnet Neutre Guaranteed—Entire Territory Is Owned by a Zinc Mining Company.

In an effort to penetrate to every portion of Belgium in their relief work the delegates of the American Commission for the Relief of Belgium have discovered in the remotest corner of that country a no-man's land which since 1815 has enjoyed absolute independence under a guarantee of perpetual neutrality, which even in the present struggle has never been violated. The little country of one square mile in size is called Moresnet Neutre and has Holland to the north. Belgium to the west and Germany everywhere else. But Moresnet Neutre is neither Belgian, German nor Dutch. It used to be a part of Belgium and was until 1815 like the rest of that country a province of France. By the treaty of Vienna, Belgium and Holland became independent countries, but Moresnet, which at that time held the greatest zinc mine of Europe became a bone of contention between Prussia and the Netherlands. Finally neither got it and the difficulty was solved by making it neutral territory.

The mine of zinc has long since been exhausted in Moresnet, but, digging into deeper strata the vein was continued into Belgium and German territory. Consequently the country has lost its chief reason for retaining its independence, but by keeping the mine smelter in its territory it has continued to receive the same consideration from its powerful neighbors as in the past.

The whole country is owned by the Vieille Montagne company, which, with the exhaustion of the zinc deposits, sought other fields until it has become so internationalized that it is as neutral in its impartial activities as the country where it got its start. The president of the company is Baron Rothschild of Frankfort, who sells products from the company's mines in Germany to that country. They also have mines in France, and their general manager, a loyal Frenchman is selling zinc to the French government. Their manager in Great Britain where they have a zinc mine in Scotland is a Belgian and he is selling the product to the British government. The company has mines in Africa and other remote places, and under its international management, is prospering.

The country is governed by two burgomasters, one named by the German, the other by the Belgian governments. There are 2,000 Germans, 2,000 Belgians and 400 Neutres in the country. To become a Neutre it must be proven that one's family has resided in Moresnet 100 years. The Belgians are under their own burgomaster, the Germans under theirs while the Neutre have the privilege of choosing between the two. In criminal cases the burgomaster can choose either German or Belgian judges. But whatever judge is selected must use the Code Napoleon and make his decision in accordance with its principles.

The taxes are also equally divided between Germany and Belgium as are the two post-offices.

When the little country began to suffer for a lack of food the problem of relief became acute. The country was not German therefore the Germans refused to feed the Belgians while the latter refused to admit food for the feeding of the Germans. An effort was made to separate the two, but they were found so mixed, living in the same house, members of the same family and many speaking the same tongue, that any separation was impossible. It was found that all or none must me fed. And moreover in the original dispute the Neutres seem to have forgotten. Finally a rough compromise was made whereby the commission supplied the people of the whole country with bread while Germany furnished them with meat, potatoes and butter.

In attempting to feed the Moresnet people the commission faced some problems out of all proportion to the size of the country. Under its agreements with the various belligerents it must if possible only import food from neutral countries, but the frontier of Moresnet with Holland is the apex of a triangle without roads and for obvious reasons Germany does not desire any communication to be established from that direction.

Some idea of the difficulty of getting into Moresnet may be gained from the following description of the trip which two of the delegates of the commission made to the country.

"In order to reach Moresnet we journeyed by automobile from Liege for about two hours to some of the most beautiful districts in the Ardennes, mounting gradually higher until at last on the opposite side of a little stream, the black and white striped bars across the bridge announced that we had reached the border. The stripes also told us that this was Prussian territory. We stopped and showed our passports. The English-speaking German officer objected that they were not vised for Prussian territory. On telling him that we were on a tour of inspection and did not desire to enter Prussian territory, he explained that to reach Moresnet Neutre we would have to cross about twelve feet of Prussian soil. We finally found that by climbing a fence we could reach the country without invading Prussia. The officer, however, objected, and at last we discovered that half of the road was neutral while the other half was Prussian. We offered to keep the auto on the wrong side of the road and thus evade the Prussian territory. After a long wait occupied with much telephoning we were permitted to cross the twelve feet of Prussian territory with unvised passports, provided a German officer was in attendance. The gate was lifted, we entered Prussia and turning sharply to the left began climbing the hill of Moresnet. We reached the home of the president of the relief committee who is also the manager of the Vieille Montagne company, and not until we asked him for an explanation of our difficulty in reaching him did we learn that we were in no country that we had ever heard about."

RUN-DOWN WOMEN

We Have a Remedy That Will Cost You Nothing If It Does Not Help You.

Peterborough women will please realize that we mean just what we say in the above heading. Letters like the following prove the efficiency of Vinol in such cases:

"For the benefit of the other tired women, I want to say that I keep house for seven in my family. I became run-down, all played out. I did not seem to have any life in me and looked badly. I read so much about Vinol I decided to try it and I must say it helped me in every way. It built me up so I felt like a new woman, and my friends said they could see a great change in me." Mrs. John M. Waldron, Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

We recommend Vinol to our customers as the greatest strength creator we know—due to the extractive medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, combined with peptonate of iron and beef peptone, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Dainty as one could wish but very plain is this little frock. It has a plain princess panel in the front and this extends from the neck to the hem. Joined to it are the sides of the front and the whole back, both made without division of waist and skirt. A belt extends across back and sides and buttons to the edges of the front panel.

The neck is round, with a small flat collar as a finish, and the sleeves are three-quarter length with a cuff as a finish.

Such a dress as this is a delight to make. It will not take even a morning and but very little material. The style is excellent for plain colors in serge, chevlot and similar materials.

The dress pattern, No. 7,690, is cut in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅛ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

KINGSTON HERO LEFT $30,000 FOR EDUCATION OF HIS SOLDIERS' CHILDREN

KINGSTON, March 4.—Another evidence of the kindly Christian consideration of the late Capt. Geo. Richardson had for his fellows is shown in his will. Giving his life that he might save others on the bloody western front, the same characteristic for the future welfare of those whom he held so dear, is shown in his will.

The document, which was drawn up at Valcartier was made public this morning by W. F. Nickle, K.C., M.P., solicitor for the deceased.

It is just such a declaration that those who knew Capt. Richardson expected. The will disposes of $80,000 for charitable institutions, Queen's Universaiy, improvement in local bathing facilities and for the children of the men who may be killed or maimed who are members of "E" Company of the Second Battalion and whose homes are in Kingston, Hastings or Frontenac.

The provisions of the will follow:

A trust of five thousand dollars for the improvement and organization of the athletic grounds at Queen's University.

A trust of five thousand dollars for the improvement of bathing facilities in Kingston.

A trust of thirty thousand dollars for distribution among the charitable and educational institutions of the city.

A trust aggregating thirty thousand dollars for the education and advancement of the children of the married men, at the time of embarkation at Quebec, of "E" Company of the Second Battalion, who may die, be killed or permanently injured while the company is on service, in the event of said married men having enlisted from and being at the time of enlistment, citizens of the City of Kingston or of the counties of Frontenac or Hastings.

"E" Company was in command of Captain Richardson and he fell while attempting to save two of the men of that company.

LENT REGULATIONS ARE SUSPENDED FOR SOLDIERS IN BARRACKS

With Lent commencing on Ash Wednesday this week the usual regulations pertaining to fasting and abstinence were read in the three Catholic churches yesterday. An exception is made in favour of soldiers who take their meals in barracks or in camp. They are expected to abstain from meat on Friday, but this regulation is suspended for men on active service at the front. The intention, it was stated, is to make conditions as easy as possible for the men in the ranks. In the several churches the people were exhorted to enter into the spirit of mortification and self-denial during the holy season, and while praying for peace to pray for the soldiers in the field and the success of the Empire.

Farmers Want More Outfall Sewer Action

A meeting of representatives of the two Monaghans and Otonabee was held in Peck, Kerr and McElderry's offices on Saturday, when the city's outfall sewer was discussed. The farmers are growing weary, it is understood, if the city's promises of action and the failure to produce material indications of it. There was some talk of twisting the injunction screws as an urge to the city.

HOTEL AND STORE AT WARSAW WIPED OUT BY FIRE

Got Started in the Hotel and Gained Great Headway Before It Was Noticed—Bucket Brigade Worked Hard

A DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY

WARSAW, March 6.—Fire destroyed the hotel here, and the store of Mr. G. W. Reid on Sunday afternoon.

Starting from a defective chimney in the hotel and getting a great start before it was noticed, there was no chance for the volunteer bucket brigade which quickly responded, to do any work on the two buildings. A great and successful effort was made to save Mr. Reid's residence, occupied by Mrs. Chas. Ellis. The residence of Mr. A. F. Choate was also in danger for a time.

The hotel, known as the Commercial House and later the Morgan House, was erected about the year 1860 by the late Wm. Snelgrove, and later passed to the Tully Estate, the present owners.

Mr. Mark Robertson, the present tenant, lost practically all his personal and household effects, on which there was no insurance. The building was insured for a small amount.

The store building of Mr. G. W. Reid was insured for $400.00, while the stock was completely removed.

Important Transfer

The Dickson Business Sold

The established dry goods business of the late A. G. Dickson, which has been carried on for the past quarter of a century at No. 326 George street has been purchased by Messrs. T. H. Adams and F. J. McFadden and will be continued in the same premises as formerly.

Mr. Harry Adams is well known to Peterborough citizens as having conducted business for himself in ladies' ready-to-wear for over ten years, next to the Dickson store; and Mr. McFadden will be remembered as a principal salesman with the late Mr. Dickson and knows the trade of the store well.

The new proprietors will follow closely the same business methods which proved so successful with the former proprietor—carrying a similar superior class of dry goods, staples and household goods at equally attractive values as heretofore.

The favour of a continuance of the liberal patronage of the public is respectfully solicited. The store will continue to be known as Dickson's.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE DEPARTURE OF MOUNTED RIFLES

B Squadron Left Peterboro' a Year Ago To-night---Many of the Men Have Been in the Trenches For Months Now ---New Officers Join the 93rd Battalion---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

To-day is the first anniversary of the departure from Peterborough of B Squadron of the 9th Canadian Mounted Rifles. A year ago to-night the squadron left for Ottawa and were given a memorable send-off as was befitting the splendid quality of the men and the fact that it was the largest body of men to leave Peterborough at one time for the front. In fact even now the Mounted Rifles hold the record in that respect, but it will be smashed to bits when the 93rd leave, as the Rifles detachment consisted of only 160 men. B. Squadron as it was a year ago to-night, has ceased to exist. Many of the men were drafted soon after reaching England, and have been at the front for some time, while a few weeks ago the regiment was broken up and the balance sent to the front with the Mounted Brigade, fighting as infantry. Lt.-Col Johnston, O.C. the 93rd Battalion, was the recruiting officer for B Squadron of the Mounted Rifles, and it was a fine body of men that he sent away on March 6, 1915.

The following list of allowed separation allowances has been made public. These grants will come forward presently, from the Divisional Headquarters at Kingston. Many of the wives of the enlisted men have been anxiously waiting notification:

Ferguson, Mrs. Clara, 548 Weller St.

Frost, Mrs. Mary Matilda, 513 Albert St.

Hall, Mrs. Helen, 116 Hunter St.

Lancaster, Mrs.. Annie Jane, Peterborough.

Rollins, Mrs. Susan, Peterborough.

Marling, Mrs. M. S., Lakefield.

McNab, Margaret, Peterborough.

McIntyre, Mrs. Mary C., Peterborough.

Stock, Mrs. Leelah M., Peterborough.

Widdifield, Mrs. Marion, Peterborough.

Kingston War Garrison, March 4.—There is a well defined rumour in military circles, that within the next few weeks, there will be a change in the military situation which will affect the 38th Battalion, now in Bermuda, the 77th, now in Ottawa, and the 80th battalion, now in Belleville. Rumour says that the 38th Battalion has received orders to be ready to proceed to England, and that the place of the 38th in Bermuda will be taken by the 77th of Ottawa, and the place of the 77th in Ottawa will be taken by the 80th Battalion. There may be some truth in a part of the rumour, at least to the extent that it affects the 38th and 77th Battalions, but it may be the intention of the military authorities to permit the 80th Battalion to be held for a short time at the capital, so as to give the capital the benefit of the presence of a good unit, and at the same time make it possible for the 38th to be in a position to do more battalion work than its scattered condition now permits. The 80th was not included in the list of the 14 battalions selected some time ago for overseas with the next contingent and this may be the reason. The 80th with its fine lot of men and excellent band would be an acquisition to Ottawa for a few months before it is permitted to go overseas.

VAST CROWD HEARD MRS. EMMELINE PANKHURST

MRS. E. PANKHURST
Famous Suffragette leader, who delivered an arousing recruiting appeal to 4,000 people at the Armouries last night.

Armouries Was Filled to Capacity and Over One Thousand People Turned Away — World-Famous Suffragist Enjoins Eligible Men to Redeem Their Pledges.

A STIRRING APPEAL.

What was easily the largest and most enthusiastic recruiting meeting ever held in this city was accounted for last evening when Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst addressed a gathering of between four and five thousand people. Long before the hour set for the meeting arrived, the Armouries was packed to overflowing, and it is estimate that at least a thousand people were turned away. Double guards were placed on the doors to keep out those who sought to gain admittance long after the drill hall was filled, while inside every conceivable space, including the galleries, was crowded to capacity. Nearly a dozen recruits accepted the invitation of the famous suffragist to come forward and "redeem the pledges they made to women in times of peace," while a large number of women volunteered to take the place of those who might be desirous of enlisting. Capt. James Rollins presided.

A New Guise.

The meeting last night brought the world's most famous suffragist before the public in a new guise. For the past thirteen or fourteen years her mission has been to help women. How much she has accomplished in this, how much she wants to accomplish, and wherein she has succeeded or failed, has become overshadowed since the war began. "Do the suffragists intend to continue their fight for votes after the war?" she was asked. "We are like a dog with a bone," she replied. "We have buried it, but know exactly where it is, and the proper time to dig it up."

Mrs. Pankhurst was born in Manchester, England, the daughter of D Robert Goulden, and is the widow of Dr. R. M. Pankhurst, barrister-at-law. She was educated in private schools at Manchester and Paris. She was elected to the School Board and the Board of Guardians, Manchester, and after the abolition of the School Board, became a member of the Education Committee. Later she resigned all her other work to devote her life to the Woman Suffrage cause.

Patriotic Activities.

But these facts are world-known. It is her work in the last year and a half that has won for her the admiration of the anti-suffragists as well as the sympathisers of the cause; and strange to say, of this, one hears least, so that one wonders, apropos of her present quiet fruitful endeavours, just how much she may have accomplished of real lasting good, that lay not open for the scrutiny of critics, even while her public career marked her as an extremist, a radical, sometimes of more daring than discrimination.

At the outbreak of the war Mrs. Pankhurst called a truce to the militant agitation of the Suffragettes. While visiting her daughter, Miss Christabel Pankhurst, about the same time, she saw the mobilization of the French army and the splendid way in which the labour of women everywhere replaced the men called to the colours.

She returned to England to conduct a vigorous campaign in favour of national service for men and women. She held big recruiting meetings in Great Britain, some of them under the auspices of her own society, the "Women's Social and Political Union," of which she is honorary treasurer, and others promoted

G. T. R. Coach Skidded Into Lakefield Engine

MRS. PANKHURST.

In spite of the anti-Ballum antics of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, she charmed an audience of 5,000 at the armouries on Sunday night. All who have been heard to express an opinion were delighted with her oratory, asserting that in spite of all the big wigs who have spoken in the armouries, never man spake as this woman spake. For an hour and a quarter an unbroken stream of eloquence flowed from Mrs. Pankhurst's mouth, without a halt or hesitation, and without the help of a note. Her admirers say that her clear, well modulated voice made itself distinctly heard in every part of the immense auditorium. Many who went to scoff remained to cheer.

THE SWEET AND THE BETTER.

Our railways are indispensable elements of our civilization. They serve, the interests of the people in a way that could only be appreciated if were deprived of railways. While they cater to the wants of the people with excellent freight services and passenger services, they in some way ignore the people. The union station master in Toronto has hung fire for a dozen years, though the public demand is urgent. Passengers are carried on trains de luxe, to be dumped into a dilapidated barn called by courtesy a railway station. British Columbia has loaded down the C. N. R. with grants of land of an expanse equal to the area of many a European kingdom. One condition of these grants was the building of a station and terminals in Vancouver. This promise has not, according to the Vancouver World, been fulfilled—"all the city has got is a lengthy series of letters and interviews"— something in the style of the epistolary Mr. Woodrow Wilson.

BREWSTER VERSUS BOWSER.

In the bye-election in Victoria, B. C., on Saturday, Mr. A. C. Flummerfelt, Finance Minister-designate in the Conservative cabinet of Mr. Bowser was defeated by Mr. H. C. Brewster, Provincial Liberal leader, by a majority of 2,397, a result that, as the victorious leader said, in an address heard by 8,000 people, "spells defeat for the Bowser party at the coming general elections, and the doom of the machine." The defeat was purely political, achieved by honest Conservatives uniting with Liebrals to protest against the flagitiously wasteful, corrupt and grabbing regime of McBride and its continuance with the master spirit, Bowser, at its head. Mr. Flummerfelt, the defeated minister, was personally very popular, being a king of finance, but his personality did not count in face of the desire of British Columbians to free themselves from their fetters. The most bitter critic of the Bowser government was Sir Charles Tupper, a famous Dominion minister, and son of the late Sir Charles Tupper one of the fathers of Confederation. Public opinion in British Columbia must take a mighty sharp course between now and next May if the general elections to be held then do not wipe out the nominally Conservative government of Mr. Bowser, and leave too few remains to hold a post-mortem on.

TRUSTING GERMAN HONOUR.

The Mail and Empire says that the International Nickel Company of New Jersey, escapes the war tax in Canada because it is a foreign corporation. Its dividends of five millions a year, according to the Mail and Empire, are made out of Canadian raw material. Here we have a strong plea for a policy which the Dominion Government refuses to consider, that of refining our nickel in Canada. All we get out of it is a few hundred dollars in supplying the material, while five millions goes into the pockets of stockholders in a foreign company, the majority of whom are Germans; or Germans hold the majority of the stock, and, of course, absorb the bulk of the dividends. Thus five million dollars that should be kept in Canada in the form of labour and industrial operations, go into the pockets of our biggest enemy. What guarantee have we that Canadian nickel does not find its way to Germany. Would this company which signed an understanding with the Canadian Government that no nickel refined from Canadian ores should be sent to Germany keep its word? Especially when the majority of the stock of such company is held by Germans. Innocency is one thing, and idiocy another.

TREES AND WEEDS.

The city estimates for the year 1916 contain, among other things, an item of $200.00 for trimming trees, and another $200.00 for cutting weeds. The grant for tree trimming might better be dropped unless there is something better than the tree butchering of last year, to the injury of the trees and the annoyance of citizens who have had to suffer the deformity of the trees they have planted and nursed and made beautiful, in spite of the city authorities, who neither plant street trees themselves, nor give intelligent care to those planted by the enterprise of public-spirited ratepayers.

Our street trees have been placed under the care of the City Engineer and we expect something better from a man who cares for trees and should know how they should be treated. We look to an end of having men who do not know how, mutilate our trees. We do not want men who are animated by the German brand of Kultur—destruction for destruction's sake—cut and slash and lop off anything to insure some destruction and make a show of earning their wages, set to work on our trees.

The City Engineer would do well if he invited tenders for tree trimming and held examinations to test the knowledge of applicants for the important work to be done. It takes a generation to grow a useful street tree; and we should not turn them over to the tender mercies of those who do not thoroughly understand the work.

The city estimates do not contain a dollar for planting new trees, which are needed for new streets and to replace gaps in the tree lines of older streets. Fifty dollars would plant a hundred good trees.

Why do the city authorities and the school board authorities neglect this important matter? They must be of the earth, earthy, without care for the beautiful. The utter indifference shown is distressing. Both bodies seem to think that tree trimming is in the same line as skinning a telephone pole, and that tree planting should be done on the principle of planting a fence post. The Board of Education has planted, or poked into the ground, scores of trees on the streets surrounding Queen Mary school grounds, two or three times. They have been planted like hop poles, and the result is that not one of the many planted is growing in any sort of thrifty state to-day. The money spent has been absolutely wasted and the beauty of the grounds held back.

The city estimates also contain $200 for cutting weeds—another form of waste of money, for the work is improperly done. Worrying off the tops of weeds with a scythe and leaving the rubbish on the spot does little good and a good deal of harm. The litter is left on the spot, to the disfigurment of the street.

A clean job should be made of the work once for all—remove the principal weeds, root and branch.

For a dozen years the top growth of the giant burdocks on the vacant lot west of the telephone office, Hunter street, have been cut off, only to grow again, and with greater vigour from the pruning, like a giant refreshed with new wine.

If a common pick were flattened at the end and sharpened, a man, by placing his foot on the trunk stem of a burdock, banding it towards him and cutting off the tap root an inch below the crown (the point where the leaves throw out), the plant would be destroyed for ever.

The city is to blame for the weeds on the streets. If the streets were narrowed to the width of traffic needs, and provided with curbing the traffic, itself, would keep down the weeds. But where we have unduly wide streets, eight or ten feet wider than needed for traffic, we have, on each side of such streets five or six feet width of splendid plantation for weeds, where they grow mightily, in soil fertilized by the alluvium from the crown of the road ways on earth streets. If we had the streets of the proper—only the necessary—width, we should have no weeds to speak of. If things were done right in the beginning, with some dim deference to the principle of permanency, we should save two-thirds of the patchwork expenditure now wasted upon our streets and in other ways.

HOW THE "UNSPEAKABLE TURK" TEACHES THE GERMANS HUMANITY

Although we live in an area of high explosive shells, machine guns, poisonous gas, and other murderous devices known as munitions, the chivalry of the soldier has not died out. This spirit of chivalry is not confined to Christian and civilized peoples. It is recorded of the Zulus that, in the war with the British, they scorned to attack or kill non-combatants. Contact with some of the most primitive tribes has shown at times similar codes of honour to exist. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that the campaign on the Gallipoli Peninsula revealed the Turk in a new and favourable light to the British soldier. The British soldier is quick to respond to chivalrous conduct in a foe. That the Turk is a brave man and a good fighter all the world knows. It was left to the British to discover that the Turkish soldier fights like a gentleman.

When the British forces evacuated the Anzac region, and the Turks, after a long wait, discovered that the bird had flown, one of the first things that met their eyes when they rushed through the silent and deserted British trenches was a table laid for dinner. Everything that the most fastidious hungry man could desire was there. On the table was a card from the British officers who had occupied the dugout, inviting the Turkish officers to accept their hospitality as men who had fought like gentlemen. Germans were specifically barred as unfit to sit at the same table. This superior streak in the Turkish character was noted also in Mesopotamia. A British officer who was severely wounded at Ctesiphon writes:

"I have such an admiration for the Turks that I wonder more and more how they ever came into the German net. They did a thing after Ctesiphon that commands recognition. A barge-load of three hundred of our wounded stuck in the mud, and, with some medical personnel on board, had to be abandoned. The Turks towed the barge down stream, and under cover of a white flag sent the whole lot, including the medical personnel, back to the British camp, unharmed. I know of two wounded British officers left out on the night after the battle, who were found by the Turks, who did not harm them in any way, and in the case of one man they gave him water, loosened his coat, and made him more comfortable. They left both for our people to collect next morning. It is the Arabs who maltreat our wounded, and commit all sorts of atrocities."

In Armenia the atrocities were committed by the Kurds, although connived at by German and Turkish officials. How far the Turkish people as a whole are partners in, the crimes of their Sultan and officials it is difficult to say. They have no political power, and those who control the reins of government are for the most part men who are not of pure Turkish descent. That the British army has learned to admire and respect the soldier and to detest the Prussian is evidence that the Moslem is not as black as he is painted.—The Globe.

LITTLE PORTUGAL PLUCKILY CHALLENGES THE HAUGHTY HUN

One of the most startling and interesting events in the war was the seizure of thirty-six German and Austrian steamers in the Tagus by the Portuguese navy. The salute of twenty-one guns to the Portuguese flag hoisted on the seized ships must have sounded to Berlin like a clap of milk-souring thunder from a clear sky. Portugal has suddenly and unexpectedly become a path-finder and pioneer in the realm of commonsense, and the fact that Italy has followed suit in seizing German ships makes the action all the more significant.

There is a close and cordial alliance between Portugal and Great Britain defined by treaty and ratified by resolutions of the Portuguese Congress in August and November, 1914, evidently in preparation for the contingency which has now arisen. The enemy ships were there in Portuguese waters, and one more enemy ship had escaped from Funchal, in Madeira, in characteristic German fashion by sneaking off without clearance papers. The other thirty-six were a menace not only to the commerce of the Allies but to Portuguese independence; and Portugal needed ships for its own transport service. The obvious thing to do was to make the seizure, and we strongly commend the example of Portugal for the imitation of other nations which have had to suffer the presence of Hun pirates who are animated by hostility to their hosts.

A break with Germany and Austria is said to be imminent, but who will that hurt? Certainly not Portugal, which can raise an army of nearly a quarter of a million men for defensive or aggressive purposes; and which can only be attacked from the sea. Germany could not land fifty thousand men in Portugal to save its pitiful apology for a soul. It was reported that Spain was preparing to attack Portugal and join the Teutonic Alliance. The time for that bad break elapsed when the ships were seized in the Tagus and the King of Spain may be thankful that he missed the opportunity to make a fool of himself. He must be a very short-sighted gentleman indeed if he cannot see the danger of coquetting with the Hohenzollerns, whose ambitions in connection with Spain and Morocco have never been concealed. The best thing he can do is to join with Portugal in the defence of the Iberian Peninsula.

One of the world's greatest tragedies is the departure of Spain's glory, power and wealth, and its losses have chiefly been due to the folly or stupidity of its rulers. Its colonies, its commerce, its industrial greatness, are all things of the past. Barcelona was a great commercial and maritime centre before the Roman Empire was dreamt of. The Catalans excelled not only in shipsailing but in shipbuilding, in the manufacture of cutlery, firearms, woollens, cottons, silks, laces, linens, paper and leather; and only by Genoa was Barcelona excelled in foreign commerce. All these advantages have been thrown away by the kings and ruling classes of Spain. It only remains for King Alfonso to give away all that is left, including the liberties of the Spanish people, to the Hohenzollerns. The country is rich in natural resources, and the people have some admirable qualities. It is a country worth saving from Prussian tyranny.—Montreal Herald.

NONSENSE.

The statement that Ontario has 100,000 soldiers "at the front" is nonsense. Up to the end of February Ontario had raised 110,775 men, of whom probably half are still in Canada. Of the balance probably 85,000 would represent the men of twenty-one years and over entitled to vote on a prohibition referendum. — The Globe.

THE GENTLE GERMANS.

Another Zeppelin bomb killed a baby in England yesterday. On the same day pro-German philanthropists in New York expressed themselves as quite sure that England would consent to the sending of milk to the poor German babies, who were in dire need of nourishment, their milk having been requisitioned by Berlin in manufacturing explosives for the killing of English babies.—Toronto Star.

THE TEST OF MERIT.

In the case of a life insurance company, Actual Results paid to Policyholders are the supreme test of merit, and should be given careful consideration by anyone desirous of placing insurance in the "best" company. The Dominion Life, whose annual report appears elsewhere in these columns is especialaly worthy of investigation. During the past year it earned the highest rate of interest on its funds, operated at the lowest proportional expense rate, and experienced the lightest death loss of any well-established company in Canada. It is from these three sources that profits to policyholders are derived and consequently there seems to be peculiar force in the argument of this company that it "provides the best insurance at lowest net cost." Mr. P. A. Ferguson, Manager for Central Ontario for this Company, with his office in this city, has no doubt contributed very materially to the very handsome gain the Dominion Life have made during the past year. We understand his branch ranks high with those of the Company.

Ireland is to have its own national orchestra for munition workers, quite an artistically-designed affair of khaki material with the fifes and shamrocks and Imperial crown all worked in green. The women workers are to be provided with them as well as the men.

COLLECTED $20 FOR THE RED CROSS

The Wide Awake Club of School Section No. 13, Otonabee, of which Miss G. M. Clark is teacher, has been successful in raising $20 for the Red Cross Fund. The money was collected by the members of the club who are anxious to see if there are any schools in the county who are willing to try to equal this record.

The money handed in was as follows:

James Hayes, Jennie Nurse	$6.40
John Thompson, Charles Kindred	4.10
Laura Driscoll, Elva Jackson	4.80
G. M. Clark	5.00
Total	$20.00

A military lorry was overturned in a street collision in Central London. Many of the soldiers in it were hurt and were taken to Charing Cross Hospital. One of them who was treated for a bad face cut, was informed by the doctor that he had had to have thirteen stitches. "Make it fourteen, for luck," said the soldier, and the doctor to comfort him gave him another.

A Bull's Eye.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

MILITARY NEWS

Give your answer brothers all.
Manhood knows not freedom's murderers,
Freemen born we'll bear the brunt,
Ridding earth of its despoilers
You will find us at the front.

Chorus—
At the front the place of freedom
Manhood elsewhere we'll not shunt,
Justice says suppress the tyrants,
Liberty says at the front.

Have we felt the hate of despots
On a foreign country's shore
'Gainst our brothers, sons, and fathers
This our chance to change the score,
Justice knows not desecrators'
Fiends who now our homes affront,
Honour craves to be uplifted,
Yes, our place is at the front.

Can you think of what 'twill cost us
If as shirkers all stood back,
Mothers, sisters, wives and daughters
Need protection, must they lack.
Liberty to us God given
Should we selfish pleasures hunt,
Duty ask for men unfailing
Yes, our place is at the front.

To the 93rd, and if music is needed I can supply it to any of the bandsmen who will ask for it through the Examiner.

KINGSTON, March 5.— As Barriefield camp can accommodate only 6,000 men, Cobourg is seeking one of the 3rd District military encampments in the spring.

The following parody on "Your Faithful Sailor Boy" was written by Miss B. Warren, 514 Patterson street, city:

'Twas on a cold and stormy night,
The snow lay on the ground,
A soldier at the station stood,
His train was Eastward bound;
His sweetheart standing by his side,
Shed many a silent tear,
And as he parted for the front,
He whispered in her ear

Chorus—

Farewell, farewell, my own true love.
This parting gives me pain;
I'll be your own true guiding star,
Till I return again.
My thoughts will be with you, my love,
While fights are raging high;
Farewell, farewell, remember me,
Your own brave soldier boy.

All in the fight, they fought with might
His sweetheart waits alone;
She watched the soldiers going away;
Wondered if they'd come ba...
She prayed to God in Heaven ab...
To guide him on his way,
And as he sang those parting words
An echo came o'er the waves:

Chorus—

'Twas hard to see the lads come home
Without her soldier boy;
For he had died on the fields,
Her only pride and joy.
And when the soldiers came on land
They told her he was dead,
And handed her a crimpled note,
These lines she sadly read:

Chorus—

Farewell, farewell my own true love,
On earth we meet no more;
I hope to meet you in Heaven, above
On that eternal shore.
I hope to meet you in the sky, where parting is no more.
Farewell, farewell my own true love,
Your true, brave soldier boy.

by prominent public men. At all these meetings she urged that women should be allowed to render patriotic service as well as men, and that any scheme of national service brought forward should include women.

In the Spring of 1915, "Britannia," the official organ of the W.S.P.U. was re-issued as a war paper, advocating patriotism, self-sacrifice and a vigorous prosecution of the war. It also impressed upon public mind the willingness of the women to serve their country.

A Special Mission.

After four weeks spent in the United States, Mrs. Pankhurst was more than pleased to accept an invitation to visit Canada and one more participate in the work of recruiting. I am here to help men redeem the pledges they made to women in times of peace," said Mrs. Pankhurst. I feel deeply touched at the warm reception accorded me in Peterborough as well as in other parts of Canada. I came to Canada after spending four weeks in the United States because I felt that Canada would be more like the homeland. I remember the opening days of the war when the call for men was sent throughout the British Empire. There was a ready response from Canada as well as her sister colonies. In England we held a series of recruiting meetings. They occasioned great interest. Some came to hear what we had to say, others came to see what, we as suffragettes, looked like.

Very Tolerant.

"You know the Englishman is very tolerant and patient, but strong and determined when aroused," said the speaker. "Canada's part in the war did much to wake up the men at home, and for that reason alone, we owe you much. When we were striving to have the franchise extended to women we were told that it was our duty to stay at home. We were not expected to fight or take an active part in the affairs of the country. When we opened our recruiting campaign we went to the men and said, 'You are the fighters, now redeem your pledges'

How would you feel if the invasion came to you. Think of poor devastated Serbia with its depleted army. I make this appeal because it is the duty of all civilization to protect the weak. This war is unlike any previous war. We never can have too many men. There has been unnecessary sacrifices among the armies, because there was not sufficient reinforcements and munitions to back up their efforts. We were unprepared.

Plans Miscarried.

In England the difficulty has been that we never have had a war in our country for hundreds of years. We have never been beaten and are inclined to think we are not needed. How can we expect to win this war if we go as you please about it, said Mrs. Pankhurst, with considerable emphasis. The Germans hate the British people more than any other of the allies engaged in the present conflict, because we own most of the world, and they want it. When the Germans commenced their march on Paris, the Kaiser thought we would be too busy quarrelling among ourselves to heed the danger. Their plans miscarried and they were stopped at the Marne. I was in France when the war broke out. If I had failed to do my duty in that fateful hour I never could have looked another Frenchman in the face. We immediately stopped our campaign and arraigned ourselves with the men against out common enemy. The workingmen with a few relapses have done nobly.

Women Workers.

Mrs. Pankhurst had a word to say to men who claim to be indispensible. She reminded them, that in the old land, women are performing the duties of bank clerks, tram conductors, munition workers and in various other capacities. The speaker predicted that after the war, few male clerks, if any, would be employed in departmental stores. This work would be done by girls. She was opposed to men devoting their time to occupations that were not suitable to women.

Mrs. Pankhurst closed with a stirring appeal to the eelgible men in the audience to come forward, followed by a similar appeal to women who were asked to signify their willingness to take the places of those who are desirous of going to the front. Nearly a dozen men responded.

Address of Welcome.

The appended address of welcome was read by Mrs. John Allan, while Miss Eastwood presented the distinguished visitor with a beautiful bouquet, which was gracefully acknowledged by the recipient.

Dear Mrs. Pankhurst—We the members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Patriotic League desire to express the gratification it affords us to extend to you a warm welcome to our city.

The subject of your address to-night appeals very strongly to us and we feel sure that your words will awaken in us a stronger conviction of the duty we owe to ourselves, our country and the whole Empire.

But chiefly do we prize the privilage of meeting with you because of the splendid adherence and service you have given to the Motherland during the months of the war. We remember with gratification that it was to you David Lloyd George came when he realised the necessity of replacing men with women workers. Your powerful organization of women combined with your own personal influence among them made you indispensable to the country in its time of trouble. And with what intelligence and diligence did the women respond to the call, so that the organization of England's women for work had soon won the admiration of the world. Might it not be that to you was given the arduous task of replacing false traditions with a newer and truer interpretation? That to you was given the supreme task of interpreting to our age that new and quickening spirit which has given fresh scope and impulse to the ideals, standards, interests and activities of womanhood? Your fine interpid courage was so rooted in moral aim and resolution that when the supreme test of war conditions tried fs in a furnace your aims and motives their unselfishness and nobility were clearly revealed.

With your powerful influence, you and the women of the British Empire answered the call of the Empire with splendid generosity, pouring forth unstintedly your resources of time, strength, ability and means.

National leaders in turn sought the counsel and assistence of you and your compatriots and the invitation was eagerly accepted, by thousands of available women, glad for a chance to express their real selves, and surprised womanhood expanded at the call of her country's need. Not only bank clerks, customs office clerks, post offices, taxi-cab drivers, street car conductors, but actually the production of armaments, shells, manipulating machinery and agricultural work is being done by women labourers.

We now find women physicians in the Royal Medical Army Corps, women police corps, women patrols whose sphere of work lies between that of the rescue workers on one hand and the police on the other; emergency corps, employment bureaus, hostels for Belgian refugees and day clubs for the children affected by the war; in addition to women's energetic efforts for the alleviation of the sufferers on the field and in hospitals.

The splendid spirit of the women of France is best illustrated by the National Council of Women in France in response to an invitation to take part in an International Peace Congress that was to have been held in December. The manifesto reads as follows:

"The German women are making demonstrations for peace. We mothers, wives, daughters, and sisters, who have not lost but have given all that is most precious to us, must make demonstrations for war."

"We must not let a word of peace be utteresl until our dear dead are avenged, our country liberated, and a great victory achieved. We do not want war for wars, we want war for the sake of peace."

"French women love to be worthy of your country. If we cannot give our blood, let us give our heart and soul."

And what of our Canadian women? The call to service in connecion with the war is coming to our women in louder tones, and in more insistent utterances as the months go by. The first call was to raise money for a hospital ship, the next was to the making of material things to help those whose services for King and country lies in the battle line, or in preparing for the same.

Then came the call to sacrifice, the call to give up the dearest thing in life, be it husband, son, brother or lover.

Still the call sounds out and fresh opportunities of service are placed before the woman. To-day it is to help recruiting in ways that can only be done by women.

Still another call has come to the women, together with that which the Prime Minister has sent forth for 250000 more men. This call is to ask all women who can in any way do the work that is now being done by a man of military age who is physically fit to register for service either as a paid or volunteer worker.

To this call over two hundred women have already responded. Among these are women registered as qualified chaffeurs, postmen, post office clerks salesmen, stenographers, bank clerks and bookkeepers. Others have registered as willing to work in munition factories, or any place possible for them to fill. Belgian and Serbian relief committees are also being formed. It is this last, the cause of the Serbian people rendered homeless and destitute by the war, to which you are devoting your energy and influence at the present time, a cause sure to appeal to your sympathetic heart.

And so we greet you as you come to us from over the sea, a messenger from our sisters in England and France, and we bid you God speed and success as you plead for distracted, homeless Serbia; for though women
We, too—you, too—to battle go.
Not with the marching drums and cheers
But in the watch of solitude
And through the boundless night of tears,
And not a shot comes blind with death
And not a stab of steel is pressed,
Home, but invisibly it tore
And entered first a woman's breast.

Signed on behalf of the Women's Auxiliary of the Patriotic League.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SEASICKNESS AS IT IS DESCRIBED BY CORP. HUNTER LEWIS

The following interesting letter is from Corp. Hunter Lewis, son of Rev. J. G. Lewis, who left with the 93rd Battery draft:

S. S. Metagama,
Tuesday, Feb., 1916.

Essey On An Ocean Voyage.

As I sit in my bunk in a little two-by-four stateroom experiencing a thrill, oh what a thrill, with every heave of the mighty liner which is bearing me steadily toward——what? I don't know what but it is bearing me toward it anyway, the muse urges me to put down for the benefit of those lucky enough to be on land, a few experiences more interesting than pleasant.

My pad rests on a life preserver which in turn rests upon my knee, while at my right hand, and within easy reach is a basin, and what a necessary basin it is—and how comforting yet without—to be dreaded. Many a time and oft have I gazed steadfastly into it with a fervour that almost (?) pained and yet how gladly have I turned away relieved of a load that bore me down, crushing my spirit and wrecking my strength. Truly 'tis a necessary basin, and yet 'tis an unpleasant necessity.

The scenes which are by this time quite common are awe inspiring to a degree that is almost—yea actually painful. An ocean of water—cold water that seethes and boils and makes one dizzy to look upon, and which rises up in billows before which even the mightiest and strongest stomach would quail. Surely these sights are inspiring and will be remembered to my dying day. How the sun shone on the waves casting reflections, most brilliant and most beautiful, and which nevertheless shone in my aching eyes, and made me seek a less beautiful place, but one with more comfort for a heard worn landling. Yet again how often has the sun hidden his beauty behind the racing clouds and like a magic flash the sea has changed from a thing of flashing beauty to a sullen, raging monster, which tomes the ship on his leaden waves, and raises mighty arms to the sky as though demanding more sacrifice from man.

And verily his demand is fulfilled for as the boat lurches a score or more rush to the rail and give up their sacrifice at his command. Many a time have I leaned o'er the rail and gazed into those unfathomable depths —depths filled with mystery and wonderment and said with the poet "Oh sea give back—my dinner." (But he wouldn't do it — nor my breakfast either.) The meals which once held for me such an attraction are now hideous nightmares from which I try to flee. From force of habit, and through the advice of others more knowing than myself, I endeavour with a superhuman effort to down the unpleasant thing, but yet it gives me not much comfort, for as I sit at my meal one eye is cast steadfastly on the quickest means of exit—enough of this.

My room-mate, Waters, is seasick too, and has just thought of a scheme to get back when the war is over. He vows he'll stay in England if he has to come back by boat. Yesterday there was a fellow leaning over the rail very vigorously and I said, Be careful Coleman or you'll fall overboard. You can judge how it feels to be seasick by his answer which was —"Don't give a hang if I do or not," and he meant it.

We pulled out of St. John some time Saturday night. I felt fine all day Sunday, but on Monday morning the disease got me and I had to search out a secreted little nook somewhere along the rail, and —guess I'll spare the details. This continued most all day ok and on. Didn't take a chance on dinner though I did on supper, but what's the use——?

To-day it's been the way I felt. Not so much the actuality as the expectation of it. That's bad enough goodness knows. Hope I'll be better to-morrow. Stan. has been sick, but so far Ken. is O.K.

The fool isn't anything to blow about. The thing I get which suits me best these days, is hard-tack. It seems to stick.

The first day out was fairly quiet, but it was a bit rough yesterday, so the sailors said. I'd have called it mighty rough. Waves broke on deck a couple of times, and we all expected a storm to-day, but it's about the same.

There are no fruits to be bought on board, and that's about the only thing I want. They're all sold out at the canteens, so I went scouting around in the regions of the kitchens this afternoon and succeeded in raising some. You may be sure I paid jolly well for them though.

The sergeants have dandy quarters. All other N.C.O.s are with the men, but we're getting along. Love to all. Will probably write another before I get across.

Your loving son,
HUNTER.

ANNUAL MEETING LIFE UNDERWRITERS

The Central Life Underwriters' Association held their annual meeting Saturday noon at the Oriental Hotel, preceded by a luncheon. The meeting was one of the best held in a long time, both from the point of numbers and topics discussed. The officers elected for the ensuing year were W. Reginald Scholfield, president; P. A. Ferguson, vice-president; Thos. Mark, sec.-treas. A very suitably worded vote of thanks was proposed in a most able manner by Mr. D. R. Moore, which, being seconded and most heartily passed, was tendered to the retiring president, Mr. Wm. A. Haslam, for the interest he has shown in the Association.

The Underwriters' Association starts off with a vim and determination to accomplish the highest service to both the public and insurance agents during the coming year.

Those present were: D. H. Moore, Sun Life; W. R. Widdis, W. R. Scadding, T. W. Robinson, Canada Life; P. A. Ferguson, J. C. Wood, H. J. Hall, Dominion Life; Thomas Mark, Manufacturers Life; W. A. Haslam, Metropolitan Life; J. I. Allen, Prudential Life.

Early attention should be given to the seed grain which is to be sown in the spring.

The yearling cow requires a warm pen, but the remainder of the flock is better in an open front shed or shelter.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE LUKEWARM CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Pogue Pours Out the Yearning of His Heart For a Church of Prayer and of Power, a Church Eager For the Salvation of Souls

A lukewarm Christian is in some respects no better than an atheist. The atheist disbelieves the existence of God, and therefore cannot worship Him. The lukewarm Christian owns the existence, the goodness of the Supreme Being, but denies Him that affection, that devoutness of heart and activity of service, which the excellency of His nature demands. Such a character is obnoxious to Him.

In like manner the lukewarm Church is loathsome to God, and liable to a visitation of His wrath as expressed in Rev. 3:16: "So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth," which was the text chosen by Rev. Mr. Pogue for his Sunday morning discourse on "The Lukewarm Church."

These words, said he, are taken from the message to the Church of the Laodiceans, one of the seven churches of Asia. It is generally supposed that we are now living in the Laodicean period. Each of the seven letters represents a different period of the Church's history, and this one to the Laodiceans is supposed to represent the condition of the Church just before the coming of Christ. The position of the Church to-day harmonises in every respect, such as having popularity, influence, unlimited finances, as well as lukewarmness in things spiritual.

Those who are in the condition of the text, who may be said to be lukewarm, are those who are careless about their own salvation, those who are outside of Christ, and are strangers to His power to save from the wrath to come. Many attend Church who are lukewarm about the multitudes living in sin, drifting down the stream to destruction, yet they give it no thought.

Many in the Church are not truly saved. It is one thing to profess Christ, but it is another to possess Him. It is one thing to have your name on the Communion roll, but it is another thing to have your name written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

To a minister it is a sad thing, indeed, to see men and women rushing on to eternity, yet giving no thought to their hereafter. Their only ground of assurance is that away back in their youth they became attached to the Church, but "by their fruits shall ye know them." They say "peace, peace" but there is no peace, they say "Lord, Lord," yet do not do His will.

"Let me entreat you," pleaded the preacher, "to awaken from your sleep of death lest it be too late."

Many in the Church live under the dominion of sin, and are indifferent to it. To be saved from is to be able to think pure thoughts, to live the kind, Christian life. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Many church members are lukewarm in being saved from the world and the things of the world. Many harbour secret sins, yet never try to get away from them, and try to reason themselves into an assurance of false security. It is only by the grace of God that we are able to live holy lives.

Many in the Church make absolutely no effort to be present at the meetings of the Church. This is a sweeping charge, but mild when one considers the importance of prayer services.

The Prayer Meeting.

The social prayer meeting, held in connection with the Christian church (at which all members are to be present), is for the purpose of praying for the blessing of God on our own souls, praying for lost souls, praying that we may be built up in our own Christian faith, and for the ministry of intercession. This may be true where "two or three are gathered together," but they cannot be classed as a congregational prayer meeting. It is a Divine institution, as recorded in Acts, where Christ commanded His disciples to tarry in Jerusalem and wait for the power for service. As a result we find three thousand souls, under Peter, in one sermon being swept into the kingdom of God.

Is it any wonder there are next to no conversions to-day? The explanation is, God's people do not meet together for the promised blessing and power. This is the heart-breaking thing about the ministry. "Last Wednesday evening," said Mr. Pogue, "I had prepared a subject upon which I had put as much time and thought as on this sermon, yet there were present only twenty-four out of a total membership of 1,040. I used to think two or three were all right, but I have changed my mind. As a means of securing the power of God it is God's appointed method. It is my duty as a child of God to meet another child of God to ask blessing on the work of the Church, and that souls may be won for the Kingdom. If this meeting is ignored we shall never have a triumphant church."

The Church will never become a power in the community until its prayer meetings are thronged by men and women of Christ to pray for the promised power.

We generally find as many anxious sinners as anxious saints. When church members become as anxious about souls as they are about dollars, then we shall see souls saved.

On every side we are surrounded by multitudes rushing on to perdition, slipping down the slippery slopes to hell. If we do not pluck them at once their next step will be into the place where there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. Think of the damnation they are rushing to, of the heaven they are losing, of the mercy seat, of what Christ did to save them; think until your soul becomes stricken with a desire to save them; then enter your closet, bewail their lost condition, feel for them, cast their sins on the atonement; plead, because God does and will answer the prayer of faith; bring their sin to the Cross of Calvary; be a Christian who drinks the bitter cup with Christ; then, and only then, will we learn the secret of shaking any town. May this earnestness come upon your minister and you, too.

Saving Our Children.

We are lukewarm when we are in different to the salvation of our own children. Next to saving a soul, the greatest honour that can be conferred upon man is the honour of parentage. But this great privilege and blessing brings responsibilities. It is as if God said to us "This is mine, take it and care for it, and bring it up in the fear and admonition of the Lord. It is inconceivable how parents can do without the religion of Jesus Christ, if they are to discharge aright their responsibilities.

We give our children a liberal education, teaching them of the things of the world; do we teach them of the love of God? We instruct them in social etiquette, but do we take thought as to how they shall appear before the King of Kings?

If instructed properly during childhood their hearts open unconsciously to Christ. Why should they know about wickedness and the sins of the world?

We should support and encourage our Sunday Schools; but while the Sunday Schools are doing an excellent work they should not take the place of home teaching.

In conclusion, the speaker told the story of a mother who instructed her children in their youth and was instrumental in bringing her three sons to Christ and of her happiness later though two were in glory. He pleaded that parents be lukewarm no longer, but start at once—to-day—and draw their children to Jesus Christ, lest they face the awful judgment seat where "Parent and child then do part,

Part to meet no more."

LIBERAL LEADER BREWSTER BEATS BOWSER'S FINANCE MINISTER

Liberal Leader Defeats His Opponent in Victoria Bye-election by a Nearly Two to One Vote

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 6—The people of British Columbia are telling Premier Bowser in no uncertain way that they will have nothing to do with his so-called "business Government." A week ago they voted his new Minister of Public Works out of office, and yesterday they wrote "finis" to the brief political career of his Finance Minister, when the city of Victoria elected Harlan Carey Brewster to represent them in the Legislature, and left at home Hon. Alfred C. Flumerfelt, whom Bowser had placed in the charge of the finances of the Province. Brewster secured 4,972 votes to 2,535 polled for Flumerfelt, who therefore only saved his deposit by forty votes.

Mr. Brewster's Career.

Mr. Brewster, the victor in to-day's fight, is the leader of the Liberal party in British Columbia. He came to the coast from New Brunswick, his native Province, in 1906, and has since then been actively interested in the fishing business. In 1907 he entered the Legislature as member for Alberni, and in 1909 was re-elected. At the election of 1912 he was defeated in Victoria City, in the Legislature of 1909 Mr. Brewster and John Jardine were the only two Liberal members in the House, and when in 1916 Jardine went over to the Conservatives on Premier McBride's railway policy, Brewster was left with two Socialists as his only companions on the Opposition benches. In May, 1913, he was formally elected leader of the Provincial Liberal party.

Flumerfelt's Defeat Not Personal.

Hon. A. C. Flumerfelt, the defeated candidate, was next to the Premier himself, regarded as the heavyweight of the Bowser Cabinet. He has a reputation Dominion-wide as a successful business man and financier. He is President of the Granby Consolidated Rubber Co., a director of the Bank of Commerce, a director of the Ames-Holden-McCready Co., shoe manufacturers, and is on the boards of nearly a dozen other important companies east and west. He has been in British Columbia since 1905, but till he entered the Bowser Cabinet in December, had never taken the smallest part in politics. As he stated himself, he had never till then even attended a ward meeting. He was well and favourably known in Victoria, where he was for ten years President of the Board of Trade, and it may be said of him as it was said of Mr. Tisdall in Vancouver a week ago, that his defeat is in no way personal. During his campaign he addressed his hearers as he would a meeting of shareholders, spoke to them plainly, disclaimed all knowledge of the ways of politicians, criticised the Government freely, and gave evidence of no little independence. Everywhere the impression he created was favourable, but he was connected with Bowser, and nothing could save him. Seemingly the motto of the British Columbia electors these days is: "When you see the head of a Bowser Minister hit it," and they are hitting them hard.

Same Issues Decided It.

The issues which decide this election were much the same as those which were responsible for the Liberal victory in Vancouver a week ago; the unsavory record the Conservative Government has built up during its twelve years in office, the recognized need of effective opposition in the Legislature, the determined opposition of Labour owing to the Government's action at the time of the Nanaimo coal mine strike; the disaffection of the prohibition interests, and the Dominion Trust failure.

General Election Will be Keen.

Interest is growing in the Provincial political situation. The Opposition in the House is stronger now than at any previous time in six years. A general election must come within three months, and the campaign is certain to be a keen one, for the Conservatives are thoroughly frightened and will fight for dear life.

Liberal Commoners Glad.

Ottawa, March 5.—On behalf of the Liberal members in the Dominion House of Commons Mr. Fred F Pardee, Chief Whip, to-day forwarded a telegram to Mr. H. C. Brewster, the Liberal leader in British Columbia, extending heartiest congratulations upon the sweeping victories in Vancouver and Victoria, and expressing the appreciation of Canadian Liberalism toward the electors of the two Pacific Province cities upon their emphatic pronouncement in favour of improved conditions in public life.

Spells Doom of "Machine".

Victoria, B.C., March 5.—By a majority of 2,397 votes, Mr. H. C Brewster, Liberal candidate in Saturday's bye-election for the Provincial Legislature, was elected over Hon. A. C. Flumerfelt, Conservative. The returns were: Brewster, 4,824; Flumerfelt, 2,427. Majority for Brewster, 2,397.

The successful candidate was given a hearty reception, being carried shoulder high by enthusiastic friends along Broad Street.

In an address, listened to by 8,000 people, he said the result spelled victory at the coming general elections, and the doom of the "machine." The member-elect will be introduced to the Legislature on Monday.

Sir C. H. Tupper's Arraignment.

A feature of the last day of the campaign was the publication in The Times Saturday evening of a message from Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper: "I ask Conservatives to drive from power this Government, which has disgraced the Province, and which has been the service tool of adventurers.

"There are mile-posts on the trail of this corrupt combination. An Opposition, had it existed on the floor of the House, would long ago have exposed their iniquities.

"What about Sir Richard McBride and the Judas Iscariot who sold him? Who is this little Kaiser who attempted to read out of the party Conservatives who dare to have opinions of their own?"

Few people here know that the plague is rampant in India. The Times of India reports that in the week ended January 8 there were 5,777 deaths and 7,604 new cases. The Bombay presidency and Sind had over 2,000 deaths.

According to a London County Council return, there are 5,937 public houses in the City and Council of London, and 2,200 off-licenses.

Two Ennismore Men Before Judge Huycke To-day

Charged With Assaulting and Obstructing Detectives Newhall and Meagher—Defense This Afternoon

Thomas Murphy and John Shannahan two Ennismore men who staged a fracas on December 26th in the yard of the American Hotel, Hunter street, with Detectives Newhall and Meagher appeared before Judge Huycke in the County Court this morning. Murphy was charged with assaulting Newhall and Shannahan with obstructing an officer while making an arrest.

The two officers stated in their evidence that they were visiting the hotel yard at 7 p.m. on Christmas Eve protecting sleighs from theft. It is part of their duty to make this inspection. Detective Meagher said that they met Murphy who asked them if they had seen his glove for which he was looking. The officers went on toward the east shed. Murphy said that if he could take down one of the lamps he'd soon find it.

"We replied that it was an incandescent lamp and was fixed there. It could not be removed". Detective Meagher stated "Murphy asked us who we were. I heard Murphy say to Shannahan 'Come and have a look at what's talking to us'. Newhall told them we were two policemen and not to bother us. Murphy said he didn't give a d—who we were. I went into the shed to have a look around. My back was turned to the others, and when I was in there I heard some one fall. I ran out and saw Murphy on top of Newhall. I pulled him off and we took him to the police station we went back later for Shannahan.

P. C. Kidd.

P. C. Kidd said he had charge of the police station that night. When Murphy was brought in under arrest witness saw prisoner kick Newhall high up on his thigh. This occurred in the narrow passage leading to the cells. Murphy was very violent. He offered Kidd all the money he had to let him out. Murphy said in the presence of Shannahan that he did not know who they were; he was very sorry for it.

Shannahan replied:

To Mr. O'Connell witness said Newhall struck Murphy after the latter kicked him. The next day or so Murphy had a black eye.

He had some bruises on one side of his head, abrasions on one hand which was swollen and other injuries. A week later Dr. Eastwood looked at his throat. The muscles were sore but there was no excessive swelling. He spoke with difficulty and was ordered to remain at home for a week until he recovered.

The evidence was practically a repetition of what was taken in the preliminary hearing. An adjournment was called until 2.15 when the defence will be begun. Mr. O'Connell is appearing for the defendants and Mr. Hatton is prosecuting.

Engineer's Report On Improved Roadways For Light Traffic Streets

Different Types Specially Adapted For Residential and Other Streets Except Main Thoroughfares—Combine Permanency and Cheapness.

PRESENTED TO COUNCIL

With the Council considering the paving of residential streets, probably this year, Engineer Parsons presented a specially prepared report to the Committee of the Whole on Friday night giving a detailed comparison of form and prices of six types of roadway adapted for streets where traffic is not particularly heavy. Certainly the time is not far distant, whether this year or not, when Peterborough will enter upon a system of permanent roads for streets that are not main thoroughfares, and one or more of the types described by Mr. Parsons will undoubtedly be used here. The report which is a comprehensive one follows:

In accordance with your instructions, I beg to advise you as follows:

The question of low cost pavements for city streets with light traffic is one that is occupying the attention of all towns and cities. It is recognized that it is wasteful to lay a heavier and more expensive pavement on a street than the traffic demands or is likely to demand. As a result, several types of roadway have been developed, some of which are of considerable promise. These road-ways are briefly described as follows:

Water Bound Macadam.

The simplest type of improved roadway for a city street is what is known as a water bound macadam. This roadway, when properly built, presents a good surface, but it is dirty, noisy and cannot be called permanent and unless care is taken to keep it in first class order continually, it becomes filled with ruts very quickly. It should be built with a broken stone base, thoroughly rolled to a thickness of six or eight inches, this thickness depending a great deal upon the character of the sub-grade. On this stone base stone crushed to about two inches in diameter is spread so as to form, after rolling, a course two and one-half to three inches in thickness. The surface is then covered with stone screenings, running in size from three-quarters of an inch to fine dust. These screenings are wet and the surface thoroughly rolled until it is perfectly firm and compact. All voids are filled with the screenings and the contour of the road conforms to the required crown and grade. This makes a roadway that is fairly satisfactory for light traffic, if properly maintained, but does not stand [illegible] traffic well. The cost of a water-bound macadam roadway, properly built, will vary from 75c to [illegible] square yard, depending upon the [illegible] of stone used and the amount of grading to be done.

Oiled Macadam.

The second type of roadway is similar to the one described above, but in addition the surface is treated with two or more applications of a heavy road oil. This keeps the dust down, tends to bind the particles of stone together and also to make the surface of the roadway waterproof. The application of oil does away with the necessity for watering and thereby greatly increases the life of a macadam roadway, as the constant application of water tends to disintegrate the road surface. The application of oil to a new road will increase the cost from 12c to 15c per square yard, depending upon the number of applications of oil and the quality of the oil itself.

Bituminous Top.

The third type of roadway to be considered is similar to the first, with the exception that the wearing surface, instead of being bound together by water, is coated with a heavy bituminous material by means of hand sprinkling or a machine built specially for the purpose. The machine work is more satisfactory, as the cementing material can be distributed more evenly by machine than by hand. After the application of the bituminous cementing material, the wearing surface is covered with a layer of stone screenings, which are thoroughly rolled in until practically all of the voids are filled. A second coat of bituminous material is then flushed over the surface in a thin layer so as to seal the surface and make it water tight Fine stone screenings are then sprinkled over this seal coat in a very thin layer and thoroughly rolled in. This is what is called the penetration method of applying the bituminous material to the roadway. The additional cost over a plain water bound macadam will be about 25c per square yard.

A Similar Type.

The next type is practically the same as No. 3, except that the stone in the wearing surface is heated, dried and coated with the bituminous mixture in a regular mixing plant. It is then hauled to the street in waggons, spread to the required thickness and rolled in a manner similar to that of an asphalt pavement. The advantage of this method, in my opinion, is that all of the stone is thoroughly coated with the cementing material and goes on the street and is rolled while hot and dry. This is what is called the mixing method of building a bituminous macadam pavement. This type would cost probably 30c to 35c per square yard more, at the very least, then a plain macadam pavement.

Concrete Base.

The next type of pavement to be described is one with a light concrete base, say about four inches thick, with a surface composed of stone cemented together by a bituminous cement applied either by the penetration or mixing method. On the concrete base is laid the wearing surface, consisting of stone varying from an inch [illegible] quarter to one half an inch, which has been coated with a bituminous mixture, preferably in a regular mixing plant. This surface should be from two and one-half to three inches thick, well rolled, and after rolling, coated with fine stone screenings also well rolled into the surface. The estimated cost of a roadway built in this manner is from $1.25 to $1.50 per square yard, depending on the method of coating, the stone in the wearing surface and of the quality of the stone used.

Concrete Pavement.

The sixth and last type of pavement to be described consists of a plain concrete pavement, preferably built in two courses. I consider that a concrete pavement, five inches thick at the gutter and seven inches thick at the crown, can be built cheaper in two courses than in one, as the lower course can be made considerably leaner in cement and a poorer quality of stone or gravel used. For the upper two inches of a concrete pavement, I would advise the use of nothing but the best granite or trap rock procurable, carefully mixed in the proportion of one part of cement, one and one-half parts of sand and three parts of stone. This wearing surface must be laid on the base before the base has had time to take its initial set. A properly built concrete road, I estimate, would cost from $1.50 to $1.60 per square yard.

Of the above types of roadway, the last two, in my opinion, are the only ones that really come in the class of pavements. The bituminous surface is preferable to the concrete surface, in my opinion, from every point of view. Both the cities of Stratford and Berlin have had the bituminous wearing surface on a concrete base by the penetration method and seem to be very much pleased with the results. The City Engineer in Stratford has also had a small amount of concrete pavement, but his preference is for the bituminous surface. Concrete pavements have been used to considerable extent in a large number of places and in some of these places the results have been very satisfactory.

If it is desired to try these types of pavement, I would suggest that Murray street from Aylmer to Water streets and Water street from Brock to McDonnel street, be paved with concrete. For a street on which to try a bituminous pavement, I would suggest Weller street from Park street to the Monaghan road or Gilmour street from Park street to the Monaghan road.

"THE WHITE FEATHER" TO RETURN

"The White Feather," which created such a favourable impression here some times ago, will again be the offering at the Grand in a return engagement on Saturday next. That this drama pleased when first presented here goes without saying. It is a stirring military play, especially appropriate at the present time. There are many dramatic situations in the piece, but they are never overdrawn and there is a vein of excellent comedy which calls forth hearty laughter on many occasions. The company is an unusually strong one and deserves unstinted praise for the splendid manner in which the various parts are taken. Albert Brown, as Brent, the seemingly inane and foppish society man; Olive Temple as Brent's co-worker; John Burkell as Fritz Stapleton Kent as Carl Sanderson; Geraldine Beckwith as Brent's sweetheart; Vira Rial as Mrs. Sanderson, and Louise Muldener as Fraulein Schroeder will come back to us in the same parts. "The White Feather" is a welcome and appropriate play in these times, dealing as it does with the conspiracy of a number of German spies in England. Of course we are all interested in spies at the present time. There is no attempt to be sensational at the expense of truth, and the many who saw the piece on its first local presentation can testify to that.

126 Starts Per Day

New Hampshire Man Proves Worth of Willard Battery

New Hampshire Man Proves Worth of Willard Battery.

H. R. Sawyer, a retail milk dealer at Atkinson, N.H., has established what appears to be an enviable record for successive starts from the storage battery on his delivery car.

The car is a Studebaker 1915 model, and the battery a Willard. In delivering goods to customers, Mr. Sawyer has kept an accurate record of stops and starts. He starts his motor from the battery 126 times every day on the average. This number is in addition to the starts he makes with his motor running, which average 46 per day.

Mr. Sawyer's car has an approximate mileage of 6,700. The original Willard battery delivered with the car has never been recharged or adjusted in any way, which performance speaks more for Willard batteries than any amount of literature could do.

The motor in this car has not received any mechanical attention aside from the ordinary adjustments, and during the entire period of service Mr. Sawyer's total repairs have been forty-five cents.

At the time of his purchase, he made a careful investigation of battery and starter performance, because he knew that his delivery service would necessitate absolutely reliable starting equipment. Now he is quite emphatic in his praise for the Studebaker car and its electrical system.

Don't Forget War Prisoners

The lot of the prisoners of war becomes more unfortunate the longer the war lasts. Their number steadily increases. The task of supplying them with the necessities of life becomes more and more difficult and the harshness of their captors is not lessened by the progressive bitterness of the conflict.

It was easy for us to be mindful of the prisoner in the early days of the war. As times goes on we have a tendency to forget him, to regard him in the same light as the dead and the missing. But the Canadian prisoners are far from being either dead or missing. They are all known to the Red Cross Society, and some day they will be restored safe and sound, that is if we supply the means of keeping them in good health.

All who have returned from prison camps agree that the chief need of the prisoner of war is food. Mr. Henry M. Field, a well known Toronto musician who secured his release from a civilian internment camp, bears testimony to the importance of food parcels sent by the Red Cross Society.

The Society has the names of all prisoners on its lists. It has special privileges from the German Government and is able to transfer the generosity of Canadians to their brothers who suffer the hardships of German prisoners. Anyone desiring to help a Canadian prisoner of war can do so easily and expeditiously through the Canadian Red Cross Society.

German Aviator Tells Of Night Raid Over Italian City Of Verona

A German lieutenant who recently flew over Italian cities and spread terror in Verona by dropping bombs on the city when its inhabitants were asleep, has written an article for the Neues Wiener Journal, in which he describes his exploits:

"Darkness had fallen on the streets of Trieste," he writes, "as I emerged from the coffee house. The orchestra was playing some sentimental music which I heard during my entertainment. The chauffeur was waiting for me in the automobile, and like a flash we were off, flying like the wind for the hangar. There we arrived one after my men, with the usual Germans thoroughness, [illegible] every part of the aeroplane, the motor and rudder.

"'Is everything ready?' I asked.

"'Yes, Lieutenant, we can start in a quarter of an hour.'

"Another of the men who [illegible] my furs and marine glasses. I [illegible] a cigarette and waited.

"'Don't you think we will have wind?' I said to my assistant.

"'No, Lieutenant, not this time; I think that it will be a very calm night.'

"It was now moonlight, and the moon was shining brightly. We started. I love to fly but I detest the constant spluttering of the motor which prevents me from thinking. Despite the brightness of the moon everything about us was black. The higher we rose the darker and colder it got. Suddenly we were in a cloud whose chill went through every bone in my body. I ordered my assistant to rise still higher so as to get away from this cloud. It is a peculiar sensation. One imagines that he is in a vast ocean. We lose the sensation of soaring through the air and have hallucinations, as if one were raging, as when seized by a fever. I shouted to my assistant:

"'Are you sure, Fritz, we have not lost our bearings?'

"I glanced at my watch and from the time judged that we must be near Verona.

"'I believe that we can now slowly descend,' replied the assistant.

"Now began the delightful sensation of falling in the air. We were near the city which we were to terrorize by throwing down bombs. I looked through my glass. I saw nothing at first but gradually my eyes showed me the environs of the city. The machine fell more and more and then the lights of the city became visible. It was Verona. Like tiny pearls the electric lights seemed to be strung out. It was a beautiful sight. The steeples of the churches were in sharp contrast to the roofs of the houses.

"'Turn slowly to the right and go north' I shouted to my assistant.

"It was in that direction where the arsenal and citadel of the city was located and I had orders to throw bombs there. I saw people in the streets below that looked to me like a lot of ants.

"'Are you ready?' shouted Fritz.

"With trembling hands I reached for the first bomb, dropped it and quickly followed it by another. I raised my glass to watch the result. We heard the explosion, sounding to us like rocks falling on a tin roof.

"Our machine quickly ascended as I dropped the remainder of the bombs.

"I looked down. The city showed no signs of life. Every light had been suddenly extinguished and all was quiet as death. Only to the left I noticed a thick smoke arising, indicating that a fire had been started by our bombs. Several military buildings were burning. I had the satisfaction of feeling that my mission had been crowned with success."

MILITARY NEWS

Frank Allen, who was employed in the draughting room of the De Laval Company, and who is now in King ston as a member of the 32nd Battery, was the recipient of a handsome wrist watch from the office staff of the Company, and accompanied by the following address:

Frank,—This is the third occasion on which we have gathered together to say farewell to one of our number who is leaving his service here to take up higher and more noble duties in the service of his country. If you should meet any of the De Laval boys who have already gone forward just say to them that they often come into our minds and that the good wishes we extended when they bid us good-bye are still with them, and we always inquire when ever possible for any news from them. And so to you to-day, we say that our best wishes go with you, and that we know you will fulfil your duty to your country in the same spirit that has marked your duties here. We ask you to accept this token of our regard; and when you look at its face remember that no matter what the hour, our thoughts are with you, and as we say good-bye, our hands go forth to you in expressing once again our good wishes for your welfare.

Private Noel Clarke of the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, is in the city on two weeks' leave of absence, granted by the authorities in Kingston. Private Clarke was invalided home after having been wounded on two different occasions. Private Clarke was wounded in the arm at the battle of Langemarck and subsequently received a wound in the leg. The latter gives him a decided limp and it may be some time before recovery is complete. At present Pte. Clarke has not been discharged from the military hospital Kingston, but has been granted two weeks' leave of absence. He enlisted here at the outbreak of the war having resided in Peterborough for a number of years, although his mother resides in Omemee.

On Thursday evening last the choir of George Street Church cancelled its regular rehearsal for the purpose of spending a social evening with three of their members who have enlisted for overseas service, and were shortly to leave the city.

The organization has lost five of its members through the call to arms.

In the fall of 1914 Messrs. Cole and Fraser enlisted and are now doing good work for their country "Somewhere in France."

Sergt. John Miller is a member of the 93rd Band, and Mr. Fred W Miles and Mr. Chas. Thorpe left this morning for Kingston to join the 32nd Battery.

The choir, to the number of fifty assembled at 8 o'clock, and after a very pleasant sleigh drive around the city, arrived, about 9.30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adair, Homewood Avenue.

Here Messrs. Miller, Miles and Thorpe were each presented with a wrist watch on behalf of the Choir, by Miss R. McKee, while an address peculiarly fitting to the occasion, was read by Miss Minnie Higgins in which each made a neat and feeling reply.

After refreshments had been served the evening quickly passed with song and mirth. Mr. Stratten, in Highland costume, contributing no small part.

After thanking Mr. and Mrs. Adair for their kindness in throwing open their comfortable and commodious home and voting them jolly good fellows, the happy evening was closed with Auld Lang Syne and God Save The King.

Turkish Troops Evacuate Palestine and Lybia

French Drop Deadly Curtain of Fire and Prevent Any Further Advance By Germans

Continuous and Terrific Bombardment of Defensive Positions Fails to Shake Morale of French Garrisons, and Answering Cannonade Stops All Infantry Attacks Northeast of Verdun.

PARIS, March 7.—The latest news from the great battle at Verdun is that the French, despite continuous terrific bombardment by hundreds of the enemy's big guns against their lines from Haudremont Wood to Fort Douaumont, are not only holding their own but by a deadly curtain of fire have repulsed all attempts made by the enem'ys infantry to advance.

The latest figures indicate that the futile attempt to force the Lorraine gateway which leads to Paris has cost the Kaiser at least 200,000 dead and wounded. As this despatch is filed the news comes that the Germans are attacking along the whole French lines to the east of the Meuse and west of Dead Man's Hill, but that the French not only have not yielded an inch, but are pressing the enemy and piling up many thousands more of German dead on this greatest battlefield of the war.

In French Flanders and Belgium there is heavy fighting, too. The French fighting to the south of Lombaertzyde have smashed the enemy's trenches, while the British have clinched their hold on "International Trench," near the Hohenzollern Redoubt. There have been lively engagements in the Argonne, and the French as a result of their heavy artillery fire have wrecked trenches and destroyed communication lines in the neighbourhood of Haute Checauchee and Boureuilles.

All military experts here agree that the French have covered themselves with glory in their defence of Verdun. All reports indicate that the British are still making substantial headway in the hot fighting near the Ypres salient.

That the tide is turning against the Germans in the titanic struggle before Verdun is evidenced by the admission made in the German wireless Sunday afternoon that "in order to avoid unnecessary losses we have evacuated the trenches which we captured from the French on February 28 near the Forest of Thiaville, to the northeast of Badonviller, before a concentrated fire directed by the French against our positions."

"In Belgium, to the south of Lombaertzyde, trenches of the enemy were demolished by our artillery.

"In the Argonne our batteries fired a great number of shots against the enemy's trenches and communicating lines in the region of La Haute Chevauchee and at Boureuilles, where a fire was started.

"In the region of Verdun the fighting was confined principally to the village of Douaumont, continuing into the night. At six o'clock the enemy, after a violent bombardment, launched a heavy attack against our lines from the Haudremont Wood to the Fort of Douaumont. This attack was repulsed by our curtain of fire and by the firing of our infantry.

SHELL DEAD MAN'S HILL.

"During the night the bombardment was continued with a fair degree of intensity over our whole front to the east of the Meuse and, to the west, at Ie Mort Homme and Cote de l'Oie."

It is stated semi-officially that the battle at Verdun continued Saturday throughout the day with the same intensity and without causing any change in he respective positions of the opposing armies. Fighting is still going on for definite possession of the village of Douaumont.

The situation as a result of this second phase of the German offensive is regarded as altogether different from that of the first days of the battle. The only progress made by the Germans was during the first two days of the second attack. For the last forty-eight hours they have not advanced.

The comparison also is in favour of the French by reason of the fact that the Germans now have lost the advantage of surprise, and also because the ground has been torn up to such an extent that it cannot be organized properly.

This information from semi-official sources suggests that it must be demoralizing to the Germans to see some 40,000 to 50,000 bodies of their comrades lying before the French lines.

Reinforcements brought up by the Germans since the beginning of the second phase of the battle on Wednesday are estimated here at 250,000 men, raising the total forces utilized by the assailants to more than half a million. Estimates of losses show wide variance. Details of local actions and the size of the reserve forces brought up cause French observers to make the deduction that the Germans have paid a very heavy price for the six square miles of ground they have gained.

FOUR THOUSAND DEAD LIE BEFORE VAUX.

In front of the village of Vaux alone four thousand German dead were counted after the eighth unsuccessful attack. This part of the battle, though overshadowed by the fight for Douaumont, is regarded in Paris as a serious check for the attackers. The Germans carried on the assault with great courage until the dead lay thick on the field. Then the officers, it is said, were compelled to urge on the troops as they clambered over the bodies of their fallen comrades for the last assaults.

The attack on Vaux began on the evening of March 2, after a furious shelling, and continued until the following night. Columns of Germans, advancing simultaneously from the north and northwest, tried to envelop the village. French artillery immediately opened a heavy fire, which separated the first wave of the Germans from their reinforcements. Nevertheless the fresh troops came on, and observers saw plainly the tragic spectacle of lines of men plunging into that storm of steel and emerging thinned to half their strength. Some contingents lost six out of every ten men before ever having fired a shot.

The survivors, undaunted, resolutely stormed the French trenches and fought hand to hand in melees at the outskirts of the village. The bitterest fighting was for possession of the road leading to Douaumont, the advantage of which was obvious. The Germans charged eight times there. The supreme effort was carried out by six regiments, advancing in close formation. French machine guns did grewsome work in the mass, and French infantry, held carefully under cover until the advancing force approached the trenches, leaped out to meet the onrush with cold steel. The fighting was finished in a few short minutes. The Germans retired, leaving hundreds torn and tangled in the barbed wire defences and thousands laid low by machine gun shots and bayonets.

Teuton Verdun Victory Would Sway Neutrals

Scandinavia Watching Closely, Says Dr. Dillon—Defeat Would Mean New Peace Proposals

CHRISTIANIA, March 7. — The tremendous onslaught at Verdun is rightly construed throughout Scandinavia as Germany's final desperate effort to score a victory over the Entente Powers and hasten the issue of the campaign before the dejection now rapidly spreading among the peoples of the Central Empires paralyzes their waning strength.

The hardships endured by the Austrian and German peoples are known to be greater than has been officially admitted. Their staying powers are strained to the snapping point and a gleam of new hope is imperatively needed to brace them for further endurance.

Moreover, a decisive German success would, it is believed, produce a far reaching political effect on certain neutrals. The repercussion in Sweden, for example, would be enormous and almost immediate. It is hardly realized abroad that the recent fluctuations in the attitude of that State were a direct result of the vicissitudes of the campaign in general, and Russia's grave reverses and marvellous recuperation in particular.

The Swedish people, while resolved to make every sacrifice for their national defense, entertain no desire to exchange neutrality which is safe and lucrative for belligerency which can bring no lasting advantage and may spell ruin.

But nowadays the sentiments of a majority of citizens are of no avail against the motives which sway ruling statesmen and personally, I feel certain that a decisive Teuton victory at the present conjuncture would be followed by far resonant changes in the international situation.

On the other hand, Germany's failure to break through the Allies' lines and open the road to Paris will dispel the illusions harboured by those politicians who are itching to obtain for their respective countries participation in the historic struggle and a share in the spoils of war, and will be followed by renewed peace proposals which, while still unacceptable, would be far more modest than any yet emanating from Berlin.

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at Tongue! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

The railway engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen who demand $100,000,000 a year more pay for the same work, constitute about 18 per cent. of the total railway employees and now receive 28 per cent. of the total wages paid.

Back of the demand for 25 per cent. more pay for these highest paid employees is a thinly-veiled threat to stop every train in the country if the raise is refused.

Are the rights of other railway employees, the stockholders and the public not to be considered in this issue?

Excepting engineers and firemen, who collectively get the highest wages of all railway employees, those in other branches of train service are paid much more on the average than all other employees of the roads. On Western railroads the average yearly compensation of conductors in 1914 was $1,593, and of other trainmen was $1,068. The average wages on Western roads are slightly higher than on Eastern lines. The following figures, taken from actual pay rolls of Eastern railroads in 1912 show the average hours on duty per day or trip for all trainmen, as follows:

Service	Conductors	Flagmen and Bag. Masters.	Brakemen.
Through passenger	6.06	6.52	6.08
Local passenger	8.10	8.12	8.06
Suburban passenger	6.38	6.12	6.37
Fast freight	9.38	9.25	9.38
Slow freight	11.40	11.41	11.40
Local and pick-up freight	12.04	12.01	12.04
Work and wreck train	11.58	11.53	11.55

1,082 conductors (6.8 per cent. earned from $1,000 to $1,100 a year.

1,895 conductors (12 per cent.) earned from $1,100 to $1,200 a year.

2,706 conductors (17.1 per cent) earned from $1,200 to $1,300 a year.

2,743 conductors (17.4 per cent.) earned from $1,300 to $1,400 a year.

2,391 conductors (14.7 per cent.) earned from $1,400 to $1,500 a year.

1,482 conductors (9.3 per cent. earned from $1,500 to $1,600 a year.

946 conductors (5.9 per cent.) earned $1,600 to $1,700 a year.

646 conductors (4.1 per cent.) earned $1,700 to $1,800 a year.

892 conductors (5.6 per cent.) earned over $1,800 a year.

Other trainmen—

5,446 other trainmen (18.9 per cent.) earned from $1,000 to $1,100.

3,394 other trainmen (11.8 per cent.) earned from $1,100 to $1,200.

1,746 other trainmen (6 per cent.) earned from $1,200 to $1,300.

576 other trainmen (2 per cent.) earned from $1,300 to $1,400.

13 other trainmen (.04 per cent. earned from $1,500 to $1,600, earned $1,796.

Without expecting any change whatever in their hours of service the engineers, firemen and trainmen on all the railroads in this country and some in Canada, are demanding a wage increase of 25 per cent., a mounting to $100,000,000 a year.

Death Due To His Own Negligence

In Not Wearing His Rubber Gloves as Required to Do—Verdict of Jury That Enquired Into Death of Gordon H. Hewson

The coroner's jury which met last night to inquire into the death of the late Gordon H. Hewson, found that the young man died from an electric shock received at the corner of Aylmer and Murray streets, on Tuesday, Feb. 29th, 1916, that his death was due to his own negligence in not wearing his rubber gloves as required to do while at work on the pole.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt, and dandruff

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat; but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating throuhg the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

POPE ONCE MORE PLEADS FOR PEACE

Lenten Letter Recites His Work to End Conflict and Contains New Appeal

ROME, via Paris, March 7.—Pope Benedict has again raised his voice for peace. In a special letter written for the Lenten season the Pontiff says he cannot sit silent, indifferent to the terrible conflict which is rending Europe. He recalls all he has done to induce the contending nations to lay down their arms, virtually throwing himself between the belligerents and conjuring them in the name of the Almighty to desist in their work of mutual destruction.

The Pontiff again sets forth the proposal which he male some months ago, as follows: "Each belligerent should clearly state his desires, but should be ready to make necessary sacrifices of pride and particular interests, thus ending the monstrous conflict in accordance with justice and re-establishing peace, advantageous to neither side, but profitable to all, and therefore a just and lasting peace."

"This paternal voice," continues the Pope, "was not heard. Thus the war continues with all its horrors. I rejoice that our cry for peace has had a profound echo in the hearts of the belligerent peoples—indeed, the peoples of the whole world—and has aroused a deep desire to see the sanguinary conflict soon cease.

"I must, therefore, once more raise my voice against this war which appears as the suicide of civilised Europe."

The second part of the letter deals with prayers, penance and alms in the neutral countries, the alms to be devoted especially to the relief "of the pitiful children of those dead in this horrible war."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

A dense crowd of Bretons, with a sprinkling of the Anglo-American community that remains faithful to Pont Aven in all seasons, had gathered on the broad, low, stone wharf, and surged down to the river itself on the sloping causeway provided for boats carrying passengers. Nevertheless, if the signalmen had brought about this gathering, they had also reported the presence on board the Hirondelle of three men and a woman who were badly injured; so the local gendarmes had procured stretchers, and three automobiles were in waiting.

Ingersoll, whose nerves were already on a raw edge, nearly abandoned the struggle against Fate when he saw the dense concourse of people. "Lorry," he said in an agonized tone that the younger man had never before heard on his lips, "Lorry, help me now, or I'll crack up! Jump ashore and ask those good folk to clear a path. You know what it means if we get among them. I can't stand it. I can't! Bid them let us pass, for the love of Heaven. Tell them we have to deal with death and broken limbs. You go first. They'll listen to you."

Tollemache obeyed without demur. He was completely at a loss to understand his friend's collapse; but its undoubted seriousness called for decisive action. His vibrant, ringing tones dominated the cheers that burst forth when the Hirondelle bumped into the quay.

"Mes amis," he cried, "hear me one moment, I pray you. The people we have rescued are suffering. One is dead—others are in great danger. Unless you make way, and permit us to bring the injured ones quietly and speedily to the hotel, some may die on the road."

It sufficed. The cheers were hushed. The throng yielded place without demur. A low susurrus of talk and the sobbing of women were the only sounds that mingled now with the unceasing chant of the gale.

Ingersoll had literally forced himself to stoop into the companion hatch. "Yvonne," he said in a curiously muffled voice.

Yes, Dad," came the girl's answer. He could not be sure, owing to his extremely agitated state, but fancied that another voice gasped a word faintly.

"Come now, Dear! Come at once!" he appealed.

Again Yvonne's head and shoulders emerged. "Oh, Dad," she almost sobbed, Mrs.—Mrs. Carmac is conscious now. She beseeches me to remain with her until—until—"

Ingersoll literally pulled his daughter up the few remaining steps. "We are going straight home!" he cried, savagely impatient of the resistance his plans were encountering at every turn. "I am ill—nearly demented! You must come now!"

Still clasping her arm in a grip that left marks on her white skin for days thereafter, he forced her to the side of the boat.

"Father dear, of coutse I'll come, but you are hurting me," she said quietly. "Please don't hold me so tight."

He was deaf to her pleading. They raced together up the causeway. To avoid attracting attention Yvonne did not try to hold back and bystanders wondered why the two made off at such a furious pace. Madame Pitou, Madaleine, and Barbe, drawn to the quay like the rest of the inhabitants, were divided between concern for father and daughter and desire to witness the landing of the shipwrecked crew.

But Mere Pitou could not contain her anxiety. "Tcha!" she cried, bustling through the crowd. "What's gone wrong with Monsieur Ingersoll and Yvonne? They might have seen the devil out yonder. I must hurry after them. I'll hear all the news later when Peridot comes."

The two girls went with her. For once feminine curiosity was less potent than sympathy. Moreover, Tollemache's announcement of a death among the rescued people had terrified them. They shuddered at the notion of the solemn procession of men carrying a limp and heavy body. The mere sight of such a thing would take the heart out of them for the evening's merrymaking.

Ingersoll had passed the first mill—or the last—that bridles the river, and was striding through the narrow street leading to the bridge, when he became conscious of the force he was exerting on his uncomplaining companion.

"I'm sorry, Yvonne," he said, freeing her arm immediately. "I forgot myself. Really I hardly know what I am doing. Am I hurting you? Why didn't you tell me?"

He spoke in a queer, choking voice which at any other time would have aroused his daughter's affectionate solicitude. That night, however, probably because she too was in an overwrought condition, she contented herself by a seemingly unchalant reply.

"It doesn't matter, Dad. A bruise more or less, after all that we have gone through, is not of much account."

"I hurried you away——" he began; but, greatly to his surprise, Yvonne interrupted the laboured explanation he had in mind.

"I thank I understand, Dad," she said. "Wouldn't it be better for both of us if you left unsaid what you were going to say — at any rate, till the morning? We are—how shall I put it?—somewhat unhinged by to-day's events. You are weary and heartsick. I know I am. Let me go and see that Mrs. Carmac is being cared for. I'll not remain long, and we can retire soon after supper. Then, when we have slep perhaps, we shall wake into a new world with nerves not so exhausted, or strained, as at this moment."

Ingersoll, brooding on his own troubles, and feverishly eager to snatch his daughter from a soul-racking ordeal, was wholly unaware of the passionate tumult vibrating in every syllable of that appeal. He caught the sound, not the significance, of the words that irritated him.

"Now you are talking nonsense!" he cried. "You cannot possibly know what course I have decided on. It is this: I loathe the sensational element attached to such an event as the rescue we have taken part in. You hardly realize what it implies to you and me personally. Not only the French but the English and American newspapers will send her a horde of special correspondents and photographers. If we remain in Pont Aven, we cannot escape them. They will take the cottage by storm, or, if we bolt our door against intruders, we shall have to withstand a siege. To avoid this, you and I are going to Paris by the early train to-morrow. Lorry is coming too. He agrees with me—or, if I shouldn't say that—he is delighted at the prospect of the outing."

"Poor Lorry!" said Yvonne.

"Why 'poor Lorry'? He is only too pleased at being invited."

"But Dad, he doesn't know what you and I know."

A sudden terror fell on Ingersoll. "What do you mean?" he murmured hoarsely, stopping short as though he had been struck by an invisible hand.

During a few fateful seconds father and daughter stood in the centre of the four ways that meet as soon as the road from Paris crosses the Aven. No one was near. The eternal plaint of the river was drowned by the fierce wind whistling under the eaves of the old houses with high-pitched roofs, and singing an anthem of its own around the pierced spire of the neighbouring church. Yvonne placed her hands on her father's shoulders, and her sweet lips quivered in an irresistible rush of agonized emotion.

"Dad," she said, striving vainly to keep her utterance under control, "if you—wish—to go to Paris to-morrow—I—shall not try—to dissuade you. But I—cannot come with you. I dare not! You see—I have just found my mother—and—she may be dead to-morrow. Oh, Dad, Dad! No matter how my mother maye have erred—or what wrong she may have done you in the past—I cannot abandon her now!"

CHAPTER V.
The Lifting of the Veil.

It was well that Mere Pitou came upon them before another syllable was uttered, since not all Ingersoll's philosophy could have withstood the earthquake that had destroyed in an instant the carefully constructed edifice of many years. His very soul was in revolt. Heart suggested and brain lent bitter and cruel form to rebellious words; but, such is the power of convention, the unexpected arrival of the sharp-tongued Breton woman silenced him.

"O, la, la!" she cried breathlessly. "If I had known you two were making off in such a jiffy merely to stand in the Place au Beurre and look at the stars, I wouldn't have waddled after you like the fat goose that I am. What, then, is the matter? I thought you were hurrying home because you were perished with cold, and I find the pair of you stuck in the middle of the road. Monsieur Ingersoll, you at least are old enough to have more sense. Both must be soaked to the skin; yet you keep Yvonne out in this biting wind, to say nothing of a thin scarecrow like yourself!"

Yvonne had dropped her hands when she heard the approaching footsteps. Unconsciously she had raised her eyes to Heaven in agonized supplliance, and her attitude was naturally inexplicable to her Breton friends. She recovered some semblance of self control more quickly than her father.

"Madame," she said, "we were, in a sense, debating whether or not we could spare the time to change our clothes before attending to the wants of the poor people saved from Les Verres. I think you are right. It would be foolish to take any additional risk. Come, Father dear, let me help you now."

She took her father's arm, and drew him on. He walked unsteadily, and might have fallen if it had not been for Yvonne's support. The first mad impulse that bade him pour forth a vehement protest against the injustice of Fate had died down. He was as a man stricken dumb, and even physically maimed, by some serious accident.

Mere Pitou, imagining that he was benumbed as the outcome of prolonged exposure to the elements, was minded to rate him soundly; but happily elected instead to pour the torrent of her wrath on things in general. "A nice fete we'll have, to be sure!" she began. "There was I, boning beautiful white meat and roasting fat pullets when the news came that the Hirondelle was acting the lifeboat off Les Verres! I thought you'd all be drowned, at the very least, and I wouldn't have been a bit surprised, because anything might happen that light-headed Monsieur Tollemache and that grinning, good-for-nothing Peridot. Ore nom! I wouldn't have crossed the street if you two weren't aboard! And now the bottom will be burnt out of the pan, and my four lovely fowls frizzled to a cinder! Barbe, you little minx, run ahead and see that the big kettle is put on to boil! Monsieur Ingersoll and Yvonne must have hot baths, with mustard, and I'll stand over them till they swallow a good tumblerful each of scalding wine. I'll give them Les Verres—see if I don't!"

Whereat Madame gurgled in momentary appreciation of her own wit, because verree means "a tumblerful," and she had blundered on a first-rate pun.

"There maman, we are not ill, nor not likely to feel any bad effects from a wetting," said Yvonne. "My father is shaken because, although successful, we have brought one dead man to Pont Aven, and perhaps a dead woman too."

"Ah, that's sad—that's dreadful!" whimsed Mere Pitou. "Poor things! Who are they?"

"An English gentleman— and his wife."

"They may be Americans. We hardly know yet." Ingersoll was striving bravely to recover his poise. Those words told Yvonne that he wished their secret to remain hidden from all others—for the present, at any rate.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

PURE METAL.

A Woman Who Proved Her Worth When the Test Came.

By RICHARD BAKER SHELTON.

The rain came down in sheets. The wet pavements glistened as if with a recent and thorough polishing. In the wide front window of the club Blake and Johnson burned good tobacco and listened, with a feeling of supreme contentment, to the beating of the rain against the panes.

"I'm sorry," said Johnson slowly, as if he had weighed the words with extreme care before uttering them.

"Sorry?" Blake repeated, with a surprised start. "Why, look here, I thought you'd be the first to congratulate me."

"I don't congratulate you," said Johnson flatly.

Blake's face suddenly hardened. "Why not?" he demanded in crisp tones.

Johnson studied thoughtfully for a moment the cigar he was twirling in his fingers. Then he smiled.

"It's all too obvious," said he.

"Don't speak in riddles," said Blake sharply.

"Well, then," the other went on, "if you want me to be plain I will be—brutally plain. I can't congratulate you, Tommy, because it's all so ghastly apparent that you've been played for a good thing. I haven't a doubt her mother is gloating over the match. Tommy, you're deserving of better things. You, with your good nature and your big heart, ought to marry a woman—a woman"—

"Go on," said Tommy Blake coldly.

"Well, you ought to marry some one who would care for you for your own sterling qualities. Can't you see the length of your nose, boy? What show would you have had with her if you hadn't been the catch of the season? None, sonny; not a ghost of a chance. They've played you for a good thing, Tommy—a good thing. That's why my congratulations on your engagement to Ethel Carrington aren't forthcoming."

"You're mistaken," said Blake.

"Am I?" said Johnson quietly. "I wish to heaven I were."

"You are," said Blake in the same tone. "You are. Why, confound it, man, I ought to give you an everlasting good thrashing for even hinting such a thing. The girl's my fiancee, and—and"—

"Thrash away, if you like, Tommy," said Johnson calmly. "Only remember you asked me not to talk in riddles."

"You blamed old misanthrope!" said Blake, with some show of temper. "You—you—hard shelled old cynic! I suppose you'd swear any girl I got engaged to had an eye only for my money."

Johnson shook his head slowly. "No, I wouldn't, and you know it," he declared. "But the Carringtons, Tommy—well, I'm afraid I know them a bit better than you do."

Blake sat silently watching the stream of passersby on the gleaming sidewalks for a time, then suddenly threw away his half burned cigar and pushed back his chair.

"Good night," said he curtly and stalked stiffly out of the room.

There wasn't a word of truth in what Johnson had said, he told himself over and over again. Johnson was a woman hater anyway. He would have said the same of any woman. It wasn't Ethel Carrington in particular. Yet, despite all his mental arguments on the matter, Blake was vaguely disturbed in his mind as he called a cab and drove uptown to his apartments, for, more than he would admit to himself, Blake was prone to rely on Johnson's judgment. But Johnson was off in this case—surely, he was way off!

Ethel Carrington was the finest, the truest woman in all the world, and Johnson was a dyspeptic croaker. There the matter must end.

Two weeks later Blake again sat before the window in the club. Again it was a rainy day, and again the pavements gleamed in the wet mist. Blake was quite alone in the room. His face was drawn and haggard. Great rings showed around his eyes.

He turned as he heard a step behind him and saw Johnson coming toward him.

"You were right," said Blake. "O Lord, you were right."

Johnson very quietly drew a chair

SHE TORE THE LETTER INTO BITS AND FLUNG IT FROM HER.

beside the distraught man and sat down.

"Maybe you'll feel a bit better if you tell me about it, Tommy," he said.

Blake smoked furiously for a moment. "When the crash came," he said at length, "I was almost glad at first. I told myself it would disprove all those things you had said. Of course I was intending to release the girl. I was in honor bound to do it. But I thought—I was fool enough to think she cared as much for me with my fortune wiped off the boards as she did before."

Johnson said nothing.

"It was yesterday morning that the news of the wiping out of all I had in the world was published," Blake went on. "At 10 o'clock I got a letter from Mrs. Carrington—a special delivery letter, mind you. She said that Ethel was too broken up to write personally, but under the circumstances—O Lord, you know well enough what it was without my going into all the horrible details."

"This may prove a blessing in disguise, Tommy," said Johnson, but Blake, with drooping head, was shuffling out of the room.

* * * * * * *

Blake, moping in his apartment an hour later, was summoned to the office by a message that a lady was waiting for him. He went down to find Ethel Carrington, rather wet and very white, in the reception room.

"You!" he cried in dazed surprise. "You!"

"I—I couldn't be hedged in by conventions when I was so worried about you," she said hurriedly, "so I came straight here. What is wrong? Why have you stayed away for two days without sending me a word?"

Blake stared. Then a light of understanding came into his eyes.

"How much has your mother told you?" he asked.

"Nothing," she said, looking at him with widening eyes.

"Ethel," he said slowly, "I have committed the unpardonable sin—unpardonable in the eyes of the world today. I have lost every cent of my money."

"Is that all?" she said in relief.

Blake stared.

"Why didn't you come and tell me, then?" she demanded.

Silently Blake drew her mother's letter from his pocket and handed it to her. She read it through with deepening color and an angry light in her eyes. As she finished she turned to him, and at the look she flashed upon him his heart began to pound madly.

"Nothing."

She tore the leter into bits and flung it from her. "My cab is waiting," she said, her face crimson, but her eyes bravely meeting his. "We'll drive down and get the license first and then to St. Luke's rectory. You'll need me more than ever now."

Blake would have demurred, but a look in her eyes stopped him.

"After we come from the rectory I want to stop at the club for a moment," he said. "There's a certain old misanthrope there that's got the shock of his life coming."

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DR. DeVAN'S FRENCH PILLS A reliable Regulating Pill for Women. $5 a box or three for $10, sold at all Drug Stores, or mailed to any address on receipt of price. The Scobell Drug Co., St. Catharines, Ontario.

TO TRIFLE WITH CATARRH IS TO RISK CONSUMPTION

Usually it comes with a cold. Being slight it is neglected—but the seed is sown for a dangerous harvest, perhaps consumption. To cure at once, inhale Catarrhozone. It destroys the germs of catarrh, clears away mucous, cleanses the passage of the nose and throat. The hacking cough and sneezing cold soon disappear, and health is yours again. Nothing known for colds, catarrh and throat trouble, that is so curative as Catarrhozone. It cures by a new method that never yet failed. The one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

FATAL RIDICULE.

Youths of Ancient Alexandria Paid For Their Caustic Wit.

In ancient days the impudent wit of the young Greco-Egyptian dandy was proverbial, says Arthur E. P. Brome Weigall in "The Life and Times of Cleopatra." That was especially true in Alexandria, whose people were characterized by the Emperor Hadrian as "light, wavering, seditious, vain and spiteful, although as a body wealthy and prosperous."

No sooner did a statesman assume office or a king come to the throne than the wags of the city gave him some scurrilous nickname that stuck to him throughout the remainder of his life. Thus Ptolemy IX. was called "The Bloated," Ptolemy X. "The Vetch" and Ptolemy XIII. "The Piper." Seleucus they named "Pickled Fish Peddler," and in later times Vespasian was named "Scullion."

When King Herod Agrippa passed through the city on his way to his insecure throne these young Alexandrians dressed up an unfortunate madman whom they had found in the streets, put a paper crown upon his head and a reed in his hand and led him through the town, hailing him as king of the Jews and that in spite of the fact that Agrippa was the close friend of Caligula, their emperor. Against Vespasian they told, with delight, the story of how he had pestered one of his friends for the payment of a trifling loan of 6 oboli, and some one made up a song in which that fact was recorded.

They ridiculed Caracalla for dressing himself like Alexander the Great, although his stature was below the average, but in that case they had not reckoned with their man. His frightful revenge upon them was the almost total extermination of all the well to do young men in the city, whom he collected together under a false pretense and then butchered in cold blood.

Cooking and a College Education.

You may have met some academic damsel or other who in her zeal over Greek particles or the carbohydrates has no conception of the difficulties of a cook or the tactful management of a parlor maid. But these disabilities are also found among the ignorant. David Copperfield's Dora was no scholar and yet contrived to be a very inefficient housekeeper. The practical wisdom of life is neither impaired nor conferred by higher education. Nor conferred—that is at the moment the important point. As a matter of justice it is worth while to insist that the erudite woman is just as likely as her sister of a cousin to manage private and domestic affairs with success. But do not be deceived. She is no more likely.—London Telegraph.

WHY HUN HATRED BURNS HOT AGAINST ENGLAND

Wounded Pride and Vanity Chief Causes Says a Swedish Neutral—Democracy Entirely Absent

The intense hatred of Great Britain which is expressed daily in ninety nine out of a hundred households in every part of the German Empire, is not new. The seeds of this poisonous weed were sown by Bismarck in the middle of the last century. They were fertilised by England's sympathetic, but feeble, attitude towards Denmark in 1864, and especially by the equivocal action of England in 1870-1.

It is inconceivable to one who, like myself, writes a Swedish traveller, lived in Prussia for some 10 years, and was educated at a German University, that the British Government or individual Englishmen should ever have been deceived as to the aims of Germany in regard to the British Empire. It cannot be said that the Germans have ever hidden their sentiments about the English. When I arrived in England some seven years ago from Germany, I was quite surprised that there was no anti-German feeling in England. A few wise newspapers from time to time called attention to German hostility, but for the rest it seemed to me that the public were dragged by the cynical visits of German burgomasters, professors, and the like.

Prince Henry's Duplicity

I remember the amazement with which a young German acquaintance of mine in London watched an automobile tour of Great Britain organised by Prince Henry of Prussia. It was of course a spy expedition, and the Germans thoroughly knew it to be such. Prince Henry's anti-English sentiments are well known to every one in Berlin. He is largely responsible for the ruthless treatment of certain English prisoners at Nauheim. Prince Henry's is a typical example of the better class German attitude towards England. Over an intense hatred it is deemed wise to throw a cloak of bonhomie and friendship. Thereby you deceive the Englander and at the same time obtain information. The bases of German hate are envy, greed, and the resentment that all Germans have against the undoubted air of superiority adopted, and probably with very good reason, by the English towards Germans. "One day we will show these decadent Britons that we are no longer the poor relations of Europe," was said to me at Frankfurt.

It has taken 50 years of propaganda, deliberately spread by the Government to bring about this state of feeling, and nothing but a settlement of the war on German soil, and far forward on German soil, will, in my opinion, check it. The greed of obtaining English colonial possessions, the envy of the lofty position occupied in the world by Great Britain, the determination of the second-rate races that compose Germany to make the world believe that they are first-rate, added to the horrible surprise of the intervention of England in this war, are factors which confronted me every day in my tour, with the very few exceptions that I have noted. Nor has the conduct of Great Britain during the war been of a nature to do much to change German opinion.

Wounded Vanity

Wounded vanity is another cause of German anger. Great Britain has been very slow to realize the services in certain branches of science and industry which have been conferred upon the world by the Germans. Let us admit that the Germans are the first chemists in the world. Their engineering, as a rule, is copy of American engineering; their shipbuilding a slavish copy of English shipbuilding. On the whole, I am inclined to think that Great Britain has been too cavalier in her treatment of German science and chemistry.

A great many efforts have been made by Germans, who largely control the Austrian Press, to inculcate hate in Austria. They have had very little success. I did not hear one single expression of hatred towards England or France in any of the Austrian towns I visited recently. I argued with a good many Germans as to the wisdom of their attitude towards Great Britain. I pointed out that it would be unreasonable to expect the English to admit Germans to social intercourse within a generation or two after the war.

"After the war," was the reply, "the English will have to do what we tell them, so far as commerce is concerned."

The vast crowds that congregate at cricket and football games in Great Britain could not be gathered in Germany. The people are not sufficiently interested in the first place, and secondly if they did become interested, the Government would soon stop it. There would be an edict issued in short order banning the game under severe penalties, and it would soon die a natural death. But the Germans regard all games of sport as a waste of time, and again most of the young men who might watch them are away engaged in soldiering.

East-End Tattooist's Confessions.

There is a boom in tattooing in the East-End of London, according to Mr. Edward Lovett, of the Folk Lore Society. The boom is not among soldiers and sailors, but among girls of the East-end, it being a rapidly-growing fashion, when a local belle walks out with a young man, to have his name tattooed on her arm. Mr. Lovett gives the following amusing description of a scene which he recently witnessed in the shop of a friend in the East-end, who, among other avocations, is a tattooing artist.

Two girls entered the shop. One of them took off her jacket, turned up her sleeve, at the same time sitting down near a table on which was a small electric apparatus. The artist then made some design on the arm with an electric needle. When the operation was finished, Mr. Lovett asked if he might see what the design was. He was allowed to inspect the arm, upon which near the elbow were the words, "I love Joe Smith." "Of course, it wasn't 'Joe Smith,'" says Mr. Lovett, "but that is a detail."

Naturally Mr. Lovett wanted to know what happened should the girl wish to get rid of this somewhat plain statement. "That is quite easy," replied the tattooist. "Should the girl change her mind, and find that she loves Bill Scroggins instead of Joe Smith, I touch up the old name and convert it into a new design, usually a bunch of flowers. It is a bit difficult at times, especially with a long name, though I generally manage it somehow.

England's Campaign for Economy.

The campaign for economy in living as a vital necessity for financing the war which is costing Great Britain nearly $25,000,000 a day continues to be pressed. Imports are exceeding exports by nearly $5,000,000 a day and consequently depreciating foreign exchange so that England really pays about five per cent. more than the nominal prices for commodities bought in America. Restriction of imports is urged as one of the most obvious practical methods of economy.

That Government expenses must be decreased and the gap between exports and imports narrowed, is agreed upon by all. Various and often conflicting remedies are proposed. A revival of the party of protection is a noticeable symptom. Some protectionist papers demand a high tariff on imports and one so framed that the colonies will have preference, diverting business from the United States to them. Thus the British empire might live on its own resources so far as foodstuffs are concerned, and spend its money with its own people, as Germany is doing.

Sobering Up England.

Lloyd George's liquor suppressing bureau in connection with his munitions department has been so effective that it has controlled the traffic in drink far outside the zone of munitions. Drunkenness is on the decrease all through the kingdom. Although it was aimed at munition centres it has affected all localities. Only confirmed inebriates have escaped its way. Prosecutions for intoxication have fallen off 40 per cent. Labor conditions have greatly improved as the result of the work of Lloyd George's bureau which was organized only last May to limit hours of sale of intoxicants, to forbid treating, restrict the amount of "pailed" liquid and make other restrictions.

GOT HIS OWN BACK.

Britt Tells a Good One on Referee Eugene Corri.

"I," says Mr. Eugene Corri, king of boxing referees, in "Thirty Years a Boxing Referee," "who tell so many stories about boxers and boxing, cannot complain if an occasional story is told about me and against me. That incorrigible wag, Jimmy Britt, the immaculately-dressed and dapper little ex-light-weight champion, got his own back by relating the following to some of my friends, who retailed it to me with delight. This is how Britt tells the story. I give it in his own words:

"'When I came over to England this last time I met Mr. Corri in the Strand. He looked very hard at me. "Now, Britt, you have made a lot of money boxing, haven't you?" I said "Yes." Mr. Corri said, "Why don't you quit? You're beginning to show signs of what you are—a pugilist on the down grade, looking very old."

"'Anyhow, Mr. Corri would insist on my lunching with him at the Savoy, [illegible] sat down at a table, and a little later two ladies and a man'—such was Britt's expression—'came in and sat at the next table and kept looking over at us continually.

"'At last I heard one of the ladies say, "Who is that at the next table?" The man answered, "He's a pugilist."

"'The lady said, "What a brutal face he has!"

"'A little later on I heard the other lady ask, "Is he married?"

"'The man replied, "Yes, that gentlemanly, clean-shaven little fellow with him is his son."'"

More Boys Born in War.

Despite the argument that there is no basis in science for the belief that more boy babies than girls are born in war time, the statistics of thirty-six large towns in England and Wales break all records in that country for boy babies.

From January to March for every 1,000 girl babies there were thirty-two more boys. For April and June there were forty-three, and for July and September fifty-five more. The marriage rate for England and Wales in the last three months was the highest ever recorded, being 21.5 in every 1,000 population.

More Scraps of Paper.

"Scraps of Paper" are looked upon by certain officials of an Egyptian bank as worthless things, and so far they are in accord with the German Chancellor. The cause of their agreement with the enemy is that bank notes to the value of five thousand Egyptian pounds were extracted from a letter sent by the Cairo office of the Anglo-Egyptian Bank to its Zagazig branch. When the letter was opened at Zagazig it was found to contain only "scraps of paper."

AN ENGLISH CHAPLAIN AND SOLDIER YARNS

A Clergyman Sees Both Sides of Life at the Front and a Few Stories Here Are Appended

A camp chaplain holds "services," and, if he be the right sort of chaplain, he lets it be known that he will gladly perform any other service for Tommy Atkins that is possible. Some of these other services are quite possible, but very peculiar; others are peculiarly impossible. I admit that quite a little thrill was mine when a burly Tommy sought me out, saluted, and said, "Should be much obliged, sir, if you could do me a little kind mess."

"Anything," I replied, enthusiastically, but imprudently. "Would you lend me a couple of bob, then, sir?" The thrill petered out, but I parted.

An hour later there came another Tommy, with shining eyes. "Please, sir, I've come for my two shillings." I had to request information. And I got it. "Friend of mine said, sir, that an old lady had given you a lot of two-shilling pieces to give away." Oh, Tommy Atkins! Gently I disillusioned the newcomer, and the shine went out of his eyes. "I'll break his bloomin' jaw!" he said, adding, "Beg pardon, sir." I advised him to leave his friend's jaw alone, and gave him a shilling to put the shine back in his blue eyes.

And I'm glad now that I did, because—because he was worth it. His eyes are closed for ever now. Hill 60.

"Don't Ley It on Too Thick"

"Got a gathering in my finger, sir," said another Tommy. "Would it be troubling you to write to the missus for me?" "Not a bit! What shall I say?" I asked. "Oh, anything you like. Only don't lay it on too thick, else I'll have her down 'ere to see what I'm up to."

"'My dearest wife'?" I suggested, for a start.

"No! I never puts anything to begin with. You don't know my missus, I can see. She's a good 'un, mark you, one of the best, but she won't 'ave any flummery! You tell 'er I 'ope this'll find 'er quite well as it leaves me at present, an' put this in—a money order—an' say there ain't no hope round 'ere so she's to get 'erself something for 'er birthday, an' I ain't killed yet an' don't mean to be, an' tell 'er to kiss the kids for me—an' like that, you know."

His eyes blinked a bit, and I went on writing. "Anything else?" I asked.

"Ask Her to Excuse Mistakes"

"Let's see. Oh, tell 'er she can pray reg'lar for me, like she says, but she needn't get 'ousemaid's knee doin' it. Yes, an' put 'Your affectionate husband'—no, not 'Your lovin' husband'—she'd know that wasn't me—an' put a P.S. to tell 'er you wrote it an' to excuse mistakes."

I looked up, but Tommy wasn't smiling.

He's safe, so far, thank God.

Here's one of the "impossible" requests. A Tommy came and showed me a marriage certificate. "You keep them things?" he asked. I said I did. "How much are they?" Thinking he meant a copy, I told him.

"Well," he said, "me an' a friend want a couple."

I couldn't oblige, not even when Tommy offered me "ten bob," and not a word to nobody about it." Marriages produce marriage certificates and not otherwise. Tommy and his friend had partners, but they had omitted the marriage ceremony. It's all right now, but I am sure Tommy thought I was making a fuss about nothing, for the excellent reason that he told me so. I'll help our Tommies all I can, but I draw the line at forgery

Baby Afflicted With Eczema
Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured

The Family Doctor Tried in Vain to Heal the Sores---Another Tribute to This Great Healing Ointment

It may be interesting to note that Dr. Chase's Ointment was originally compounded to cure a case of eczema on a child. The disease had spread almost over the entire body and defied all the regular treatments for such troubles. The doctor was perplexed, but finally on the formula of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and, as many say, "it worked like a charm," healing up the nasty sores and leaving the skin soft and smooth.

That was a good many years ago, and since then many thousands of cases of eczema, both in children and adults, have been cured, until to-day Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognized as the standard cure for itching skin diseases.

Mrs. Geo. McNair, River Charles, N.B., writes as follows: "We use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home, and would not wish for anything better for cuts, burns and bruises. A few years ago a friend of mine, whose baby was terribly afflicted with eczema, had her child treated by their own family physician, but the little one got no better. They tried several remedies, but they all proved useless in this case. Upon the advice of a neighbour, they got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and before the first box was used the child was completely cured.

"I can also recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to suffering friends, who I know will be glad to learn of something to relieve their nervous trouble. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

So soothing and healing is Dr. Chase's Ointment that relief from itching and burning comes almost as soon as the ointment is applied. The sores are cleaned by the action of this treatment, and the process of healing is soon begun. By persistent use of the ointment cure is affected. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

As thoughts of Easter wind it is such frocks as the one pictured that are most considered for this first costume of early spring. This dress has the overblouse effect, which is now considered so very desirable. Yet there is but one waist, and the impression is derived merely from the clever handling of the materials used.

The waist is open in front and has bands of trimming on each side of the fronts. These are attached on the inside of the edges and look much like a little vest. Below the waist line, where there is a soft, draped girdle, the blouse material shows as two small, mannish vest points, and similar points are shown in the back. The blouse above them is altogether plain.

The sleeves form very deep puffs ending just a trifle below the elbow, where they are joined by a deep cuff. These sleeves are made of the trimming material, with cuffs to match the blouse.

The upper part of the skirt has three gores, which are of the sleeve material, and below these is a wide, circular flounce, which is of the blouse material.

Of course, these combinations may be much varied, and frequently two materials of one color are employed, as, for instance, silk or satin with serge. The style will be handsome in batiste, with heavy lace in combination.

The dress pattern, No. 7,596, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3½ yards of 36 inch striped material and ¾ yards of 36 inch plain goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

BREAKING IN MOTHER-IN-LAW

THE deputy-assistant Society Editor leaned her tired little golden head against the window sash and stared across at Levis, where a church spire caught the last sun on its cross-tip. She was so done out she couldn't remember her own name except in patches. But she was triumphant past all telling, for she was pulling off the stunt of her career!

"Miss Nevinson," she could hear the City Editor saying, "I wish to heaven you'd had more experience, but I've nobody else I can spare. Jacqueminot's going to Quebec on her honeymoon and you gotta follow her. They're good for a column or two to begin with. Don't wire or they'll get on to you. We'll keep faking till your first stuff comes through.

"Yep, to-night. Eleven-thirty from the Central Station. Here's your ticket and some expense money. Your room's reserved by wire."

The deputy-assistant caught her breath as she remembered it.

Jacqueminot! The thrice or more wedded stage beauty whom she'd seen a miraculous once across the footlights, in the movies times without number, and via the Sunday Supplement pretty nearly every week, had just capped her successful divorce by annexing Dickie Updike, whose mother lived on Mishigan Boulevard whenever she deigned to come home and run social Chicago.

Jacqueminot's little toes had kicked holes in many a money bag before now, but not even the dancer's heaviest backers would have thought her capable of roasting Mrs. Updike's fair gizzards.

The deputy-assistant—whose name was Lucelle Larsen on the staff and Mary Imogen at home—packed her suitcase with more grins and grosses than gauds and gowns. How she was to remain a week at the Chateau Frontenac with one navy blue serge suit, half a dozen bonnets and a black evening gown she didn't know, but the City Ed. was inexorable and besides, twenty-two—and blonde—is nervy anyhow.

The train—a parlicus glimpses into the Updike private car—a long, thrilliferous, fakeasome story reeled off in the lower berth between twelve and two and posted by an obliging porter—the Canadian boundary—Montreal and a spanking drive across town in a gorgeously befurred sleigh—train again—and at last the sunshine of Quebec and the quick cries of "Voiture, voiture, M'selle!" which reminded her that she and her prey had reached a foreign-speaking and most picturesquely different land.

There was a room reserved for her as near the Updikes as possible and they actually went up in the same elevator, so close that Mary leaned out and touched the beauty's silver fox furs, just so's she could say she'd done it. Jacqueminot was even prettier in reality than she was in the supplements. Incidentally Mary saw her looking at her new husband under her long lashes in a way that suggested the thought—but it wasn't probable, surely!—that the nimble-toed lady had a heart under her radium-lace blouse. Anyhow the glance would make stunning good copy.

Just as they got out of the elevator—Mary last as befitted blue serge—a man passed through the corridor. He was tall—over six feet. Or at least he had been. Now he was bent a bit and he leaned on another man's arm. Both were in khaki, but the tall man's shoulder strap bore a crown and his face—oh, it was a drawn, white parchment, scribbled with ghastly tales of bombs and wet trenches, wire entanglements and the green mist of deadly gas.

"Poor chap!" said Jacqueminot aloud, "back from the front and all torn up!"

The man raised his eyes by instead of looking at the dancer his gaze somehow leaped straight for Mary. What happened next was hard to understand for not one suspect, but at the time it had seemed quite natural. Their eyes had held each other for a full minute, then hers had filled suddenly with big hot rebellious tears and she had run into the shelter of the door that the astonished bell boy held open for her.

The day's work was to follow the Updikes and the deputy-assistant did it thoroughly. They got a sleigh with a coon-human furred up like Uma Major—they drove ten miles out into the sparkling champagne-aired morning and across the three foot ice of the St. Lawrence.

(N.B.—They held hands—at least Dickie did, to judge by his face.)

They lunched in their room. They tobogganed in the brisk fashion of afternoon Quebec. Mrs. Updike appeared in the latest of sports costumes which Mary described from the coon-skin scarlet cap to the bottom other room!

She didn't go to dinner. Her head ached. Her heart pounded. That night she dreamed fitfully. The City Ed. was on one side of her in his shirtsleeves, his pipe gripped in a menacing mouth. On the other side stood Mrs. Updike, Senior, with a nook that would glaciate a volcano

"Miss Nevinson?" he breathed. "Just a word with you, if you don't mind. Let me show you the view from the west window here in the writing room."

Mary didn't need the card he passed under her startled eyes in fact she didn't even read the name and address, though she took in subconsciously that it said Chicago. The one word standing out like a nightmare was that menacing horror, "Detective!"

"Now," he said evenly, when he had led her to the farthest window, "no one will disturb us here. You are covering the Updike honeymoon. Not to waste time, I have the honor to represent Mrs. Updike, Senior. You will return to Chicago by this morning's train.

Mary opened her mouth and shut it again. She could fairly hear the click of handcuffs.

"If you go without making any trouble no one need know," he went on, "if not——"

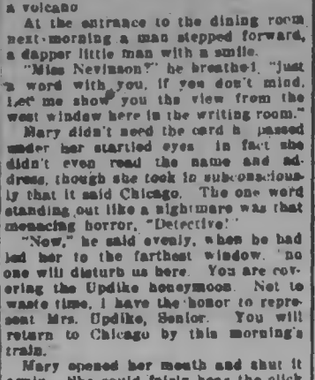
"Pardon me," said a voice at his elbow. It was so cold, so incisive and withal so unexpected that the little man jumped as much as Mary did.

"Pardon me," the Major repeated, "but I fear you are annoying my cousin. If you have any business to discuss you can do it with me. She leaves everything of the sort in my hands."

The man looked at the Major. The Major looked back. It was the sort of look that went with the D. S. O. that he had won and the newcomer knew it. There would be no tremores simultaneous in this war

Mary looked at them both and her number brain fell into action with a click. He couldn't prove anything since all her stuff had been posted not wired. But if she could only play up to this heaven-sent Major——

"Come, Mary," said the latter imperterbably, "if this — or — gentleman wishes to speak to me he can do it later."



Pardon me. I fear you are annoying my cousin.

"You'll breakfast with me, Miss Nevinson?" he said, as soon as they were out of earshot. "It's absolutely necessary. And in the meantime for heaven's sake give me your arm. This is the first walk I've had alone since Festubert!"

"Lie?" he queried later, over the toasted crumpets, "but I don't honestly believe it is. Wasn't your mother Selma Norton and didn't she come from Dublin? Then we are cousins—oh very distant ones I assure you, but still cousins. I recognized the family resemblance to my mother's people as soon as I saw you."

* * * * *

When it come near dinner time Mary had an impulsive phone call from Jacqueminot.

"My dear!" gurgled that irrepressible, "our darling Major's so hard hit that he had to tell me all about it! And I think you're positively the cleverest thing that ever happened. I've had reams of press notices but never such a scream as yours. I could eat every word of it! And he says you've done a column every day!

"Say, dearie, he told me—oh pshaw, you know—about that darn fool who gave you such a scare and how you said you'd no doubt it was cause you had no clothes. Well, I've got six trunks—or I guess eight. And the duchiest things too, straight from Paris. Come on up and take your choice. Dickie's a dear, you know, but—gee, I needed somebody to help me break in my mother-in-law!"

SALONICA

Salonica was under rule of the Turks for six centuries before it came into the possession of the Greeks again, but it never became a Turkish city, although it contains more than forty mosques. More than half of the population consists of Jews, who practically control all trade and commerce. The Jews immigrated from Spain during the sixteenth century and they are still called "Spanicls." At the beginning of the seventeenth century the city and thirty six Jewish congregations and its High School for Rabbis was famous throughout the East. Samual Usque, a Jewish poet of that time, called the city "a mother of the Jews, a paradise the like of which can be found nowhere in the wide world."

The historian Hadschi Khalfa reports that the rugs and carpets produced by the Jewish weavers of Salonica were more famous during the seventeenth century than those of Smyrna and Persia. The Jewish merchants of the city supplied Occidental countries with the products of the Orient and sent their ships to Venice, Genoa, Marseilles, Spain, and even England and the German Hansa ports. Formerly the 65,000 Jews of Salonica lived in a ghutto, but more than 2,000 of their houses were destroyed by fire in September, 1890, and they are now scattered all over the city. They form about fifty-five per cent. of the population. The rest of the inhabitants consists of twenty-five per cent. Greeks, fifteen per cent. Turks and five per cent. Bulgars, Serbians and Italians. The Jews still speak a corrupt Spanish, but most of them also understand Greek, Bulgarian, Serbian, Italian or Turkish. In the past three centuries they have given to Turkey some of her greatest statesmen.

LEMBERG

Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, is the fourth city in Austria in size, ranking after Vienna, Prague, and Trieste.

It is situated in a narrow basin among the hills about fifty miles from the Russian frontier, 370 miles north east of Vienna, and just under 300 from Budapest.

Founded in 1359, Lemberg was an important Polish city from 1340. It fell to Austria at the first partition of Poland.

At one time the city was fortified, but over a century ago the fortifications were converted into pleasure grounds.

From a railway standpoint, Lemberg is a centre of considerable importance. Lines from Vienna, Budapest, Stanislau, Czernovits, and also from Roumania meet just outside the city, while a main west and east line connects Lemberg with Cracow and Przemysl, this line continuing across the AustroRussian frontier.

Lemberg has a population of about 200,000, 50 per cent. of which are Poles, many of whom are Jews. The population is mainly of the commercial and middle class.

From a religious standpoint Lemberg is particularly interesting, being the seat of a Roman Catholic, an Armenian, and a Greek Catholic Archbishop.

In the seventeenth century and earlier it was called "the town of the monks," and to-day has nearly thirty churches and several monasteries.

The University, founded in 1784 and recognized in 1817, has more than 900 students.

Its library contains 56,000 volumes and 470 manuscripts. Here is also the library of the National Institute, which contains 21,000 volumes and 3,000 manuscripts, chiefly of Polish literature, and large collections of coins, paintings, etc.

Germans Trying To Smash A New Route Into Verdun

Teutons, After Taking the Village of Forges, Have Captured Hill No. 265, Storming the Position in the Face of Terrific Artillery Fire and With No Regard for Losses --Fresh Assaults Are Expected in This Quarter.

FIERCE FIGHTING NOW ON A NEW FRONT

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 7.—Continuing their smash against Verdun from the northwest the Germans have captured Hill 265, near Regneville, the War Office admitted this afternoon.

The hill was stormed and taken by the right wing of the German force that yesterday occupied the village of Forges on the west bank of the Meuse eight miles northwest of Verdun.

The Germans are bombarding the French positions on Goose Hill a mile south of the newly won ground preparatory to renewed infantry assaults.

The Germans are attacking with the greatest violence, but the French still hold the summit of Goose Hill, the village of Bellancourt, and the wooded regions in the eastern part of Corbeaux forest(and also Comieres wood, it was officially announced.

East of the Meuse on the northern front of Verdun lively artillery fighting occurred in the region of Bras near Haudremont, in the Woevre region around Fresnes, and elsewhere near the villages of the Meuse and the foothills east and southetst of Verdun.

Crown Prince Tries in Northwest Now

Examiner Special:

LONDON, March 7.—Checked again in the northern drive on Verdun the Crown Prince is now attempting to break through the Citadel's defenses by an attack from the northwest.

Having captured the village of Forges, eight milest northwest of Verdun, the Germans are battering away at the French positions on Goose Hill with a heavy roll of artillery fire. Latest despatches from Paris report the French batteries replying energetically to this attack.

Further advance by the Germans will bring them within easy range of the northwestern forts of Verdun.

Impression is now growing here that the severe checks administered the Crown Prince on the northern front of Verdun may be a forerunner of a collapse of the Verdun offensive.

The Crown Prince's failure to make more rapid progress is arousing feelings of impatience, if not of uneasiness in Berlin, according to reports from Dutch sources to-day. The Berlin newspapers are publishing avidently inspired articles, urging the public to be more patient.

"The movements before Verdun seem too slow to people who like to dash through world history in an express train," said the Berlin Vossiche Zeitung.

German Dreadnoughts Have Left Kiel

Special to The Examiner.

The foregoing despatch was held up by the British censor for two days.

LONDON, March 7.—A Melbourne despatch says the Austrilian siege brigade was fighting at Verdun. This is the first intimation that British troops were co-operating with the French there. It had been reported that British artillery moved to Verdun had done great execution, but it was thought that the transferred guns were manned by French gunners.

BERLIN, March 7.—The German troops have captured the town of Fresnes, 12 miles southeast of Verdun, it was officially announced this afternoon, takind 300 prisoners.

First Vote Favours President Wilson

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, March 7.—President Wilson to-day awaited the completion by the House of Congress of the verdict on the armed merchantmen question.

Meeting at 11 o'clock, the House was prepared to vote before adjournment on the Administration's request to table Representative McLemore's resolution to warn Americans off armed ships. A day of cyclonic debate, seldom equalled except when the nation has been on the verge of war, was expected.

The final vote to-day was not due until nightfall. With all other business swept aside, the House prepared to write its history in a tumultous all-day session. A change in the votes of a dozen members, it is admitted, even by administration forces, would swing the pendulum for or against the President. Both sides say the McLemore resolution will be given its death blow by an overwhelming majority.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The House to-day in tumultous session, went on record in the armed merchantmen issue with the President. The first test vote in the House resulted 256 to 140 in favour of the Administration. By this vote the House refused to permit the amendment of McLemore's warning resolution.

Representative Fitzgerald said: "I do not believe we should jeopardize the nation because a few fool-hardy persons take passage on armed ships."

Representative Farr, Pennsylvania, Republican, said he would vote to table the resolution.

"This will prevent war with Germany," he said.

COUNCIL MEETING

"Are we sitting here as a council or as a committee of the whole?" This was the question that was asked last evening of City Clerk Armstrong during the course of the regular monthly meeting of the City Council. Like a modern day Moses, the city clerk led the members out of the wilderness of indecision that had encompassed them for upwards of half an hour while the handful of spectators in the gallery awaited the result of the council's deliberations with sickening anxiety. It all happened during the passage of a by-law concerning an application that is to be made to the Legislative Assembly for fixed assessment on the property of the Campbell Milling Company and perhaps the Grand Opera House. The former practically concedes to the present company the unexpired portion of the exemption that was granted to the original company. In the later case provision is made for a fixed assessment for the Grand Opera House of twenty-thousand dollars a year for a period of five years. Twenty minutes before this measure came up, the council had decided to refer the recommendation relating to the matter back to a committee of the whole council upon the grounds that the audit of the books of the Grand Opera House was made by Mr. W. R. Morris, chartered accountant instead of the city's auditor as requested by the council. It was stated that the services of the city auditors were not available at the time. The books were audited by mutual consent so that the Council would have some information relative to the earning capacity of the amusement house, and which might be used as a basis for assessment. This did not meet with the approval of the majority of the Council who decided that the recommendation would have to go back to a committee of the whole council.

Twenty minutes later when the by-law confirming the city's intention to make formal application for the necessary legislation came up, the Council went into a committee of the whole on the second reading. It was here that some of the aldermen decided to deal with the recommendation referred to whereas it was pointed out that the aldermen could only deal with that matter as it related to the by-law then before the members. One amendment followed another until the city clerk was completely and effectively innundated. Both Ald. Langford and Ald. McIntyre challenged the Aldermen to settle the question by a straight vote rather than leave it over for another meeting. This did not appeal to the majority who appeared to

The Dickson Business Sold

The established dry goods business of the late A. G. Dickson, which has been carried on for the past quarter of a century at No. 386 George street has been purchased by Messrs. T. H. Adams and F. J. McFadden and will be continued in the same premises as formerly.

Mr. Harry Adams is well known to Peterborough citizens as having conducted business for himself in ladies' ready-to-wear for over ten years, next to the Dickson store; and Mr. McFadden will be remembered as a principal salesman with the late Mr. Dickson and knows the trade of the store well.

The new proprietors will follow closely the same business methods which proved so successful with the former proprietor—carrying a similar superior class of dry goods, staples and household goods at equally attractive values as heretofore.

The favour of a continuance of the liberal patronage of the public is respectfully solicited. The store will continue to be known as Dickson's.

93rd BATTALION MAY CAMP NEAR CITY IN SPRING

Possibilities Are That County Battalions May Camp at Their Headquarters for Some Time Although Nothing Definite Has Been Announced --- To-day's Orders and General Military News.

There is a possibility that when the time for outdoor training commences, instead of going to Barriefield Camp, the 93rd Battalion may go into camp near the city. The situation briefly is that the arrival of the spring training season will find 15,000 troops in this division. As Camp Barriefield at Kingston cannot provide for more than 4,000 or 5,000 other accommodation will have to be found, and it is altogether probable that unless a huge camp is opened at Valcartier that the County Battalion may train at their own headquarters until ready to go overseas. In this connection a camp at Nassau where the 3rd Dragoons once held their summer training, or else at the rifle ranges is mentioned. Several places in this division are asking to have a summer camp established and Cobourg has already had its claims before the authorities.

The band of the 93rd Battalion made a ten-strike in the securing of Bandsman Fred Barnes of the band of the 57th Regiment, who joined the 93rd Band to-day. Bandsman Barnes has been for seven or eight years solo clarionetist of the 57th Band and has filled a similar position in the Grand Opera House Orchestra. His reputation as a master soloist is widely known and he will be a tower of strength to Bandmaster Hughes' organization, which is further strengthened by the arrival home of Armourer Sergt. Grange, whose services are available for band purposes when not on other duties. There are fifteen former members of the 57th Band in the band of the 93rd.

ELECTRIC SHOCK CAUSED DEATH OF GORDON HEWSON

Coroner's Jury Decided That Accident Was Due to the Negligence of the Deceased in Not Wearing His Rubber Gloves Which He Had Been Cautioned to Use.

RECEIVED 2,200 VOLTS

A coroner's jury found last night that the late Gordon H. Hewson died from an electric shock received at the corner of Aylmer and Murray Streets, on Tuesday, February 29th, 1916, and that his death was due to his own negligence in not wearing his rubber gloves as he was required to do while at work on the pole. The jury also recommended that every precaution be taken to protect electric workmen, and that employers should more rigidly enforce the rules in this regard.

The report was signed by George Stenton, foreman, Robert Reid, C. O'Hara, C. H. McGee, F. Morrow, W. J. Routley, Robert Robson, Jas. Fanning, Allen Killenbeck, Jas. Middleton, J. O'Toole, Fred Hurley.

The evidence regarding the cause of death appeared conclusive.

Harry Beatty, foreman of the linemen, said he had sent Hewson and Smith out to put on a 'jumper' from a duplicate line to one above. It meant a contact with a main line wire carrying 2,200 volts.

Is it customary to make connections of that kind with the current on? Dr Greer asked.

Yes, it is done every day in the year.

With perfect safety?

Yes.

How can you do it with perfect safety?

We have rubber gloves to protect us.

Mr. Beatty said that the wire insulation was no protection because the current may leak through. On a voltage of 2,200 leather gloves would be of no use

Would Disrupt Industry.

To shut off the power on a line for work of this kind would mean that all factories in the west and south ends of the city would come to a standstill, the light in East City and power for St. Joseph's Hospital, and so on.

To Mr Hall witness said that at noon on the day of the accident the deceased had asked if he should take his rubber gloves along. The men were leaving their office at the corner of Bethune and Sherbrooke Streets.

Beatty replied— "Yes, take them and see that you use them." Hewson then went back and got them.

Was there any difference in the work for that day that specially required them for safety?

No; none at all.

Beatty said that the day after the accident he made the connection at the Murray Street corner. He wore his rubber gloves. He found no

COMMISSIONERS REDUCE POLICE DEPT. ESTIMATES

"Was It Worth While Making the Change?" Asked His Worship The Mayor When the Matter Had Been Decided—"I Don't Think it Was" Replied Judge Huycke

MEETING YESTERDAY

At a meeting of the Police Commissioners yesterday afternoon, in consideration of the request of the deputation from the City Council, to lower the estimates for the year, the amount of $14,104.32, as fixed at their annual meeting, was lowered by $275.

There were present His Honour Judge Huycke, in the chair, Mayor Duffus, Magistrate Dumble and Chief of Police Thompson.

Chief Thompson, with the secretary, City Clerk Armstrong, having gone into the matter carefully, reported reductions in the estimates as follows:

Telephone from $100 to $70.

Clothing and equipment from $1,000 to $800.

Light from $90 to $75.

Incidentals from $350 to $250.

Judge Huycke objected to the last item, stating that the amount set aside for incidentals was not too high and he believes it would be a mistake to change it.

Chief Thompson was willing at the suggestion of Mr. Dumble that the one hundred dollars for his expenses in connection with the annual convention of Chief's of Police at Kenora should be reduced to seventy. No change was made in the estimate for incidental expenses.

On motion of Mr. Dumble, seconded by Judge Huycke reductions were made in the amounts for telephones, clothing and equipment, light and the chief's trip, to the extent of $275.

"Was it worth while, making the reductions at all?" asked Mayor Duffus of the chairman.

"I don't think it was," replied His Honour.

FOR FURTHER ECONOMY

His Worship the Mayor was for further economy, and believed that such could be obtained by reducing the force to eleven men, making a motion to that effect. However it found no seconder. Mayor Duffus didn't think the Board was endeavoring to economize as they should at this time.

"Don't you think there is such a thing as fake economy?" asked His Honour.

"There is, but not in this case," replied the Mayor.

"I would be more in favor of adding three men to the force, at this time" said Judge Huycke. "We don't want a nest of traitors here." Surely we can pay taxes to fight the enemy in our midst, as well as paying them to send our men overseas to fight him.

Chief Thompson stated that since the war had started, his work had doubled, by reason of looking after aliens, at the request of the Dominion police.

"Do you get anything extra for it?" asked the Mayor.

"Of course he doesn't" quickly replied the chairman. "This work must be done in the interest of local affairs. The police should be the servants of the Dominion.

Magistrate Dumble pointed out that it was not the desire of the Board to be extravagant. Because the estimates were a certain figure, did not necessarily imply that the full amount would be expended. It was always the endeavour to economize as much as possible, consistent with good service.

ACCOUNT PASSED.

An account of Blewett and Middleton for $2.50 was passed and ordered to be paid.

THE WAITING GAME.

At this distance we can hardly appreciate the conditions in the inferno of big guns and bloodshed on the battle lines of the west in Europe It seems, however, that the position illustrates the wisdom of the allied commanders in permitting the Germans to wear themselves out in attacks that involve immense waste of munitions and terrific loss of human life, and all to little end. It seems that if the Kaiser is determined to knock his head against a stone wall, he will be allowed to do so but that Joffre will not follow his example. The tactics of the French at Verdun—acting on the defensive—have been justified. The French are holding their own steadily, while the Germans are not only not gaining any ground of strategic or decisive value, but are suffering immense losses in men, and weakening themselves in a way that does not promise greater success for future offensives. The temptation is to resort to proverbial philosophy—"Brag is a good dog, but Holdfast a better"—"Give the Kaiser enough rope and he will hang himself." The struggle is a hard one, but we are holding our own splendidly, and we are showing the wisdom and courage of waiting—or, rather, lying in wait ready to strike when the right time comes—the time that seems to be drawing near.

CONSERVATISM.

Conservation is talked of a good deal now-a-days; and it may be regarded by many who do not consider it enough to grasp its immense importance, to be a dry, abstract, unpractical subject. But it is of vital and practical moment. It touches every human interest and human enterprise. We are to-day engaged in a terrific struggle for the conservation of human liberty and opportunity for human happiness. There are other forms of conservation, each it would seem of equally large importance. We have the conservation of health a practical subject in our activities; we have especially at this time of general stress appealing to us the conservation of our liquid financial resources, national and individual.

Among other forms of conservation, the most immanent of necessity, the most far-reaching, the most comprehensive, the biggest, we have, forest conservation, which has a direct and indirect influence upon our daily life, upon our industrial interests and upon our climate and crops.

The Conservation Commission of Canada has just issued a report upon "Forest Protection in Canada," comprising an excellently compiled and illustrated volume of nearly 300 pages Especial prominence is given the subject of forest fire protection, and it is made plain that "if Canada is to continue as a wood producing country, she must conserve her forest wealth. The way of most immediate effect is the prevention of forest fires, which yearly destroy far more than the cut of all the lumbermen put together.

But the most locally interesting section of the report is that dealing with the Trent Watershed. There is pointed out the necessity of the preservation of existing forest growth in this watershed, the land surface of which comprises some 2,000 square miles, or a million and a quarter acres. Of this area about one-third or 725 square miles, remains in the ownership of the provincial government; and of this, 400 miles still remain under license, and 275 square, or 176,00 acres, have reverted to the Crown, after having been stripped of their timber. These Crown lands are practically non-agricultural and fit only for forestry purposes.

The report further points out what we all know, however, "the serious consequences of the agricultural settlement of old Ontario, which for the most part is essentialy non-agricultural in character"—

"The soil having been quickly impoverished from cultivation, the people who remained on the poorer lands are living under undesirable economic (and, it is is asserted, social,) conditions. The merchantable timber has been largely removed, and protection from fire on such lands having ceased to be worth the while of the limit holders, has practically, therefore, not been given. Neither has such protection been considered practicable or worth while on the part of the Provincial government itself. The result is that repeated fires have destroyed a young growth of timber having a potential stumpage value of millions of dollars, besides impoverishing the soil, facilitating erosion (or washing away of the soil) and so changing the composition of the forest that its possible future value is greatly decreased."

We have wasted by reckless cutting and by forest fires so much of the forest wealth of the Trent watershed that we should be alive to the necessity of preventing further destruction. It is to this forest growth that the Trent Valley must look for its water supply for navigation and power-producing purposes. Dense forest cover of the soil acts like a sponge and retains the water from rains and melted snows to be given out gradually and regularly instead of rushing off in floods and freshets and leaving a scant summer water supply. It is obvious that steps should be taken to prevent forest destruction by fires. The importance of this is shown by the fact as stated in the report, "Even during the past summer fires burned over not less than 190,000 acres (in the Trent watershed), largely covered with young growth and causing an enormous present and prospective loss."

We must protect what forest we have left; for forest growth is slow; and we cannot understand the apathy and indifference of the government or governments to reforesting. Any expense of planting forest trees is an investment that will yield wealth for a coming generation millions of times greater than the initial cost of planting.

There is no little difficulty in understanding the apathy, not to say stupidity, of civic authorities in the matter of planting trees that will in time be thousands of times worth the first cost, and will be a delight to coming generations. We are fighting in this war for the benefit not only of ourselves but of generations yet unborn. We take prompt measures to do our share in this regard. Then why should not our governments get together and get active in promoting the greatest material good a country can get by energetic forest conservation and reproduction.

BLUE OUTLOOK FOR HON. BOB

We do not wonder that Bob Rogers is getting desperate. With further disclosures pending in Manitoba bye-elections going against the Conservatives in Ontario, and the Conservative Government in British Columbia—the only one left in the west—tottering to its fall, the outlook for Borden's Minister of Elections is indeed blue.—Regina Leader.

BRITISH COLUMBIA SITUATION

In the defeat of his new minister of finance, in Saturday's bye-election Premier Bowser, of British Columbia, has sustained another severe blow. Victoria, the seat of the government, has followed the lead set by Vancouver, and has expressed in the most emphatic manner its disapproval of the present British Columbia administration. Whatever the result of the next appeal, the days of the government are certainly numbered.—Ottawa Free Press.

The defeat at the polls within a week of two Cabinet Ministers of the British Columbia Government is ample evidence of the strength of the revolt in the Pacific Province against the party which has squandered the resources of the province in a prolonged orgy of extravagance and patronage. Sir Hibbert Tupper, himself a Conservative, was one of the forces working for a Liberal victory, for in language burning with shame and indignation he appealed to the people to drive from power the Conservative Government, which he declared was nothing more than a disgraceful, corrupt combination."—Montreal Herald.

An Oddity in the Flowering Line

An oddity in the flowering line is on exhibition in the window of Jordan Bros.' flower store. It is what is known as a snake lily, known as Amorphophalus Rivieri, and is a flower seldom seen in cultivation. Its proportions are somewhat greater than ordinary lilies, and an unusual feature about it is that when it blooms the flower comes before any foliage and its one immense umbrella like leaf follows later. The stem and flower stand about two feet high.

PROGRESS IS BEING MADE

Mayor Duffus this afternoon received the following wire from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P.:

"The Minister of Railways and Canals has just told me that the work of adjusting maters re surplus water and power for Eastern Ontario is proceeding rapidly and as asked for by deputation."

J. H. BURNHAM.

The Progress and Promise of Good Roads in Canada

When the history of Canada's material building up is written—how the arteries for her commerce were made by a grim but successful partnership of nature and man—a long, interesting chapter will be given to the development of her highways; from the portages of the earliest of days to the automobile roads of the present day. Between the two periods, each of epoch making significance, it will be found that every kind of experiment and test have been made to get results, and not always of the right kind. It is only within quite recent years that the interest of serious men began to centre on the road as a factor in our communal life. The farmer, who had previously never seemed to care if his team was held up for a few hours through a washed-out road, now made strong objection if his automobile was even splashed by the muddy road. The coming of the automobile had made him think. He rightly figured that transportation of his produce was costing him more from his farm to the railroad depot or elevator, than from depot to destination, which might be some spot in far away Europe. He demanded better roads, but soon stopped shouting when he found that he had to pay for them. Real taxation and communal responsibility were something new. He had not yet come to the knowledge that a good road in front of his holding was just as much a capital investment as the crops on his land. But gradually, with the advice of such men as McLean of Ontario, and Michaud of Quebec, and the aid of the Provincial Governments, and the splendid work of the Good Roads Associations, he came to his better self and now some 40,000 miles of really good highways have been laid in the rural parts of Canada. And this is only a good start.

The potentiality of the building of roads is immeasurable, both in the material and social life of this Dominion. While the vast railroad and waterway systems—each the greatest in the world—must of necessity and choice always be her main arteries of transportation, much sustenance is required for their maintenance, and the more perfect the highways and roads, the easier it will be to feed them—with reciprocal results. As with our national transportation system, so it is with the provincial and district systems, only more so, for the better the local transportation facilities the better and sweeter the coal life. The day is rapidly passing when men and women will exile themselves to the life of loneliness which the great pioneers of this country had to bear as their hardest lot. The study of nature is a great lesson, but the study of humanity is infinitely greater and broader, and the spending of a dollar in the building of a road to make that study easier for our fellow citizens in the rural parts of Canada, is surely helping in the consummation of the Canada of our best thoughts.—Canadian Municipal Journal.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice in to-night's (Monday) notes you refer to the estimates of $200 each for tree pruning and weed cutting. I think the Council ought to give the whole matter of making ours a city beautiful their careful consideration. It has often been suggested that this was really the work which the Horticultural Society could handle skillfully, but I differ on this point, because there is not enough interest taken in this society by our citizens generally. At its annual meeting, it is usually represented by the same faithful bunch of directors, which includes most of the local florists who usually have a busy time looking after their own trade, and the other directors naturally being horticultural enthusiasts, can't spare too much time away from their own gardens to look after our city's interests. The society has an application before the Council for the usual grant of $900. This is where the Council ought to do a bit of thinking. It appears to be their intention to do a good lot of paring down, but this is where they would shine by increasing rather than paring down, because the more attractive our city is made the more chance we have of getting newcomers, and then you take the boys who come back from the war. If they should come back in the summer time they would feel as if it were good to be back home. Let us have everything neat and tidy and cheerful. We have some grand new paved streets which could be made even more grand by filling the nice curbed boulevards with flowers. That portion from Park street out Charlotte (west) and George street (north) would make real beauty spots. People would soon learn to respect and help to guard them. Now I think the Council ought to pool the $400 and $900, and if necessary add a little more to engage the services of a man qualified to do all this work, who could engage the men he would require for help during the few summer months. I mean a man who will get right down to work himself and be responsible to the Council. Other cities in Canada can do it, why not here? After all outside work was done the Council could find this man some kind of work for the winter months. Some cities run a greenhouse and cold frames which keep their men busy in the winter getting stock ready for the ensuing year, and which are open on certain days to the public. I believe our Council could save money by adopting some kind of system such as this. Thanking you, I remain.

Yours truly,
W. H. Young.

A Bull's Eye.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

DON'T LET YOUR SOLDIER LACK ZAM-BUK

Scores of men at the front have written home to friends and relations asking for Zam-Buk. They need it to apply to chapped hands, cold cracks, frost bites, chilblains, cold sores, stiff joints, and other similar ailments incidental to trench life. These ailments, although not serious enough to unfit a man for duty, cause him endless pain, and the soldier who is supplied with Zam-Buk will be saved much unnecessary suffering. Nothing stops pain like Zam-Buk; nothing draws out the corruption and heals so quickly.

For hands, sore and blistered after trench digging, Zam-Buk is splendid, and applications of Zam-Buk to the feet before long marches will prevent chafing and becoming sore and blistered. The letters below illustrate the soldier's need and appreciation of Zam-Buk.

Private J. B. Smith of the "Princess Pats" writes: "Tell my friends, if they want to help me, to send Zam-Buk."

Sapper G. T. Webster, 3rd Field Co., Canadian Engineers, writes: "You can have no idea how much we appreciate Zam-Buk out here. It is splendid for sores, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc."

Gunner Smith Mellwraith, of the 2nd Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, writes from France: "I have used Zam-Buk for 14 years in the British Army in South Africa, India and France, and have never found its equal. There is no fear of blood-poisoning from cuts or scratches if Zam-Buk is applied. The trouble is that Zam-Buk is too scarce out here—our friends should send us more of it."

This applies to you, so be sure to include a few boxes of Zam-Buk in your next parcel to the front! All druggists 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, or direct from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

The Importance of Riga

Riga, the capital of Livonia, one of the three Baltic provinces of Russia, is, after Petrograd and Odessa, the third seaport of Russia. It lies on the River Dwina, which at that point is crossed by a bridge of boats, and a railway bridge. The town is 350 miles from Petrograd, and still retains many mediaeval houses and stores, for Riga was founded as far back as 1201 by a Livonian bishop. It has been Russian for the last two centuries, and was blockaded by us in 1854. Nearly one-half the population are Germans, with German-speaking Jews, one-fourth being Russians, and one-fourth Letts.

Iodine Invaluable in War

Iodine is the best germ killer in existence. Only a few years ago doctors used to wash wounds with soap and water before dressing them. Now they use iodine. During this war, indeed, the marvellous fluid has been used in enormous quantities, and has practically done away with the horrors of lockjaw, gangrene, and other diseases caused by dirt in wounds. French soldiers are supplied with small phials—containing just enough liquid for a first dressing. The first thing a French soldier does when he is wounded is to cover his wound with iodine.

Under a new government decree Danish millers must extract 64 per cent. of the contents of the grain when handling rye and 68 per cent when handling wheat.

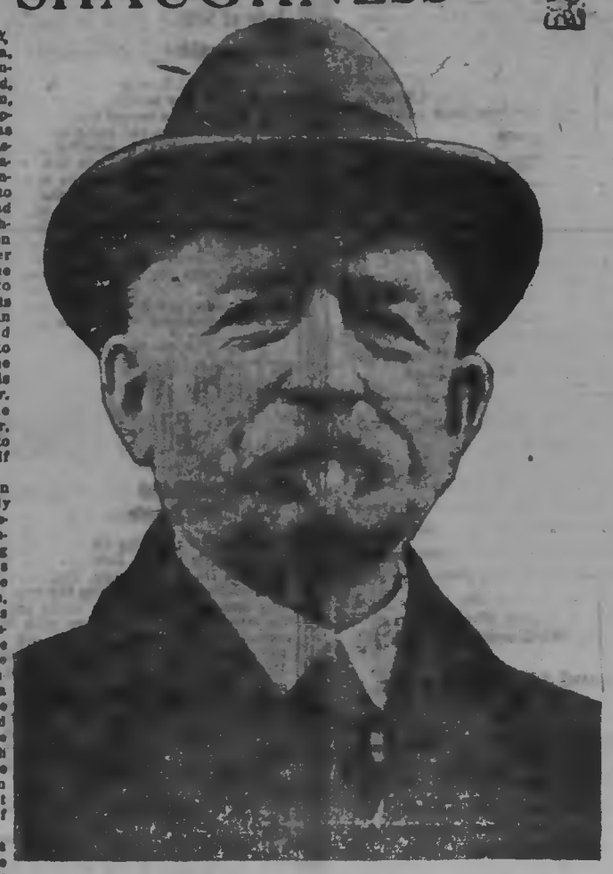
LORD SHAUGHNESSY



LORD SHAUGHNESSY, of Montreal, Canada, and of Ashford, County Limerick, Ireland, or as he was then, to give him his baptismal name, Thomas George (better known to his associates by the brief designation of "T. G."), came to Canada twenty-eight years ago to play the railroad game. He had chosen that career in the neighboring republic, and was then getting a foothold on the ladder of industrial fame. Van Horne had but shortly come over to Canada to give the benefit of his railroad skill to the Canadian Pacific, then in its infancy, and required men of experience to aid him in carrying out the policy to which he had set his hand. It was in 1882, and Mr. Shaughnessy was then in the full flush of youthful vigor, keen and alert, and anxious to make a reputation for himself in the new country.

How well the choice of Van Horne was justified; how truly "T. G." lived up to the trust reposed in him; and how fortunate Canada was in securing the services of a man who has contributed so materially to the upbuilding of the Dominion, constitute a story which has few if any parallels in the history of this young nation. Like most of the men who have carved out a career for themselves, Lord Shaughnessy is a hard worker. He has no use for idlers. His salary as head of a wealthy and appreciative corporation, combined with successful investments, have assured his future comforts in this world, but he does not work for the mere sake of earning money.

He works with a purpose in view, and that purpose is the prosperity of Canada. He does not believe in riches. "I believe the day is coming," he is credited with saying, "when it will be considered vulgar for a man to have more than a million dollars. I do not believe in the aristocracy of dollars. If there must be an aristocracy, let it be of brain, refinement and work. Let it be above all else an aristocracy of well directed, useful, conscientious work."

He was born in Milwaukee in 1853, as the name implies, of Irish ancestry. At the age of sixteen, on graduating from a business college, he joined the staff of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, and got along so well in his work that in 1879 he was appointed general storekeeper. Van Horne wanted a good man in that department of the C. P. R., and in 1882 asked Mr. Shaughnessy to take the job of purchasing agent, which he did.

Promotion was rapid. There were no hoary traditions to keep the ardent young man down. Precedents could not be referred to; there were none. The last man in the world to tolerate red tape was Mr. Van Horne, and Mr. Shaughnessy soon became the latter's right hand in the new system. Assistant to the manager, assistant manager, manager, vice-president, general manager, president and head of the system which became vast in the course of a single generation—this is the official record.

A great work of extension and consolidation had been done by Sir William Van Horne, but when Shaughnessy came into complete control, the company was just beginning, as one might say, to reap the fruit of its persistent campaign in Europe. The West made an impression at last. It got upon the slow mind of Europe that there was a new world, in which all the dispossessed might find independence. The Canadian Pacific Railway had said that in all European languages, for years, and Europe did not heed. But there is a Biblical authority for the statement that if you cast your bread on the waters it will come back to you after many days. The West began to fill up, the cultivated acreage was being extended. As Sir William Van Horne often said: "We have built the hopper, but we want the spout." And at the psych logical moment Shaughnessy bought a big Atlantic fleet (fifteen vessels in all)—bought it and set it going in connection with the land service—an auxiliary or complimentary arm to feed the railways with traffic from overseas.

Then followed the policy of anticipating the settler by putting down the steel in advance of his coming; the policy of the ready-made farm; the policy of double-tracking, of easier gradients in the mountains, of reclamation in the West, by which some 3,000,000 acres are to be redeemed to usefulness and dividends, the policy of building hotels of high standard to attract the rich tourists of Europe and the United States.

In the business life of Canada there is no one so ably equipped for estimating the trend of events as Lord Shaughnessy. His optimism about the great development which must come in the future is the optimism of certainty, for it is men possessed of his dynamic energy that create prosperity. In large part, the history of the progress made in the past three decades by this Dominion of ours is synonymous with the growth of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the development of which has been the barometer of our material well being. During that time the president has been directly responsible for the expenditure of at least $600,000,000 in extensions and improvements, which have been the means of opening up the country, encouraging immigration, increasing trade facilities, expanding and inaugurating industries and promoting agriculture to an extent that was undreamt of not long ago. In 1913, when business was on the crest of a tidal wave of prosperity the Canadian Pacific offered its stockholders a fresh issue of 500,000 shares at $175 a share, and immediately the stock soared to above $250. Thereupon some short-sighted people cavilled and said the stock ought to have been sold so that Canadian farmers might get the benefit, but in what way the critics did not explain. There were others who asserted that Canadian Pacific should have got its $105,000,000 of new money by selling four per cent bonds at par or at a premium. Other critics asserted that Canadian Pacific had even then $100,000,000 in its treasury and they thought that Canadian Pacific should hold off its financing until its treasury was exhausted.

But that has never been Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's way of doing business. He was planning gigantic extensions and improvements, and he calculated that he had to have fully $200,000,000 to place his company supreme among the great enterprises of the world. He saw ominous clouds floating on the financial horizon, his agents in the Western Canadian prairies and the lumbering district of British Columbia reported to him that Greek and Serbian and Bulgarian settlers were throwing up their employments in Canada to go back to Europe for military service. He found that the dogs of war were about to be let loose, and that that war might involve all the great nations of Europe.

Quick as lightning he tapped the world's money markets for $105,000,000. He took advantage of the charter which allows a new stock issue to retire bonds. The bonds were not due for two years, but he anticipated that and got the money and paid off the bonds, bringing the C. P. R. an additional $70,000,000.

In 1901 he was created a Knight Bachelor. But a greater honor was in store for him at the hands of the late King, who, in 1907, created him a Knight Commander of the Victorian Order. Greatest honor of all, he has been created a Peer of the United Empire. Lady Shaughnessy, who has been a worthy helpmate of her distinguished husband during the years of his phenomenal uplift from a railway clerkship to the presidency of a great corporation, of comparative obscurity to one of great commercial and social prominence, came to Montreal with her husband from Milwaukee, where they were married a couple of years prior to his appointment to his first position on the railway in the history of which he has played such a prominent part.

VAUX MAYOR SEES TOWNS BLOWN TO BITS

Paul Gabriel Says German Guns Blasted Whole Forest to Splinters in Battle Around Verdun

PARIS, March 6.—Nothing at all remains of what a fortnight ago were the finest farms in France and the hamlets of Brabank, Ornes and Beranvaux. They stretched north and east from Verdun and have been the scene of some of the bloodiest fighting in the history of warfare.

Here and there are parts of stone walls and piles of brick, but that is all that remains of what was once the thriving village of Vaux.

The soil is cleaned bare. Houses and buildings of every other description have been razed. Whole forests have been blasted to splinters by the big shells and mines.

Fortress Is Shattered.

The fortress which made the little village of Vaux so beautiful has been shot into a million splinters by the German shells. There is scarcely a square inch of ground that has not been churned up and ridged up by the projectiles.

With my family and a hundred and fifty villagers I saw the opening of the battle of Verdun on February 21.

The Germans hurled against our lines a fearful cyclone of fire, sweeping the French rear with a curtain of drum fire through which nothing could pass. Communication with the front was cut off, and the advanced troops were completely cut off by the German guns. About 4,000 shells of all calibres were fired daily.

Spectators Time Missiles.

Watching the battle from Vaux, we were able to time some of the missiles. A heavy shell would burst within a few moments after we first sighted it, and soon we were able to tell exactly where a projectile would drop.

We got 180 villagers back to the rear, but some of us remained at Vaux until Wednesday. With me were my wife and children.

The hurricane of German gunfire continued ceaselessly. Houses, church towers and walls were levelled to dust. A shell would strike a house, and when the debris, which had shot hundreds of feet into the air, fell back to earth, nothing would remain of the building.

An important French army telephone was severed. A section of engineers went forward to repair the break, but not one ever returned. Nothing could live in that storm of fire. No trace could be found of the bodies even. The men were literally blown to atoms.

Saw Attack on Ornes.

With field glasses I watched the first German attack on Ornes. Three times in a single day the Germans charged in dense formation, each time moving up to the very muzzles of the French "seventy-fives" and machine guns.

Those gray clad masses were wiped out completely by the devastating fire. Although they were our enemies the sight was too sickening to look at. In the ravine winding around the farm lands northwest of Vaux, the ground was covered with German corpses for miles. The charging soldiers stamped upon the bodies of the fallen. Language cannot picture the scene of carnage.

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little into your hand and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips. By morning most, if not all, of this awful scurf will have disappeared. Two or three applications will destroy every bit of dandruff; stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Socialist Leader Says Food Riots Are Kept Secret

Also Charges in a Speech in the Prussian Diet That Krupp Guns Kill Germans

LONDON, March 7.—A speech made before the Prussian Diet by Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader, is quoted in a despatch from Reuter's correspondent at Amsterdam.

During the debate on the budget Dr. Liebknecht is reported to have said it had become an established practice to prohibit mention of the trials resulting from food riots and peace demonstrations, with the result that the people had no idea of the widespread increase of these agitations.

Dr. Liebknech called for statistics of persons who supply war materials to enemies of Germany, asserting that the capitalistic classes, particularly armament manufacturers, were disregarding the prohibition of such sales. He is quoted further as follows:

"One member of the Liebeck Senate is in prison for having placed his copper mines at the disposal of the Russians. You all know how capitalists are internationally related, especially as regards the armament industry. German soldiers have been killed by guns supplied by the Krupps."

Dr. Liebknecht went on to say, according to this despatch, that a new department had been set up at Berlin Police Headquarters to deal with peace propagandists. He particularly criticised the great number of condemnations before military tribunals, asserting that one person had been sentenced to death for a poem and that one of his Austrian colleagues had been condemned to death for a speech made in December of 1914.

The correspondent says there was great disorder during the speech, which was finally cut off peremptorily, the budget being passed.

Raider Moewe Will Put To Sea Again

BERLIN, March 7.—Under the same officers and crew who already have played thrilling roles in the Moewe's remarkable exploits, the German commerce raider will again put to sea within a few weeks, it was stated here to-day.

The return of the Moewe overshadowed the Verdun offensive as a news feature in the Berlin papers today. The name of the port she entered will remain a deep secret, but first hand stories of her daring deeds are expected to reach Berlin within a short time.

The naval general staff states that the Moewe, commander Captain Burgrave Count von Dohna-Schlodien after a successful cruise lasting several months, arrived yesterday at some home port with four British officers, 29 British marines and sailors, 166 men of crews of enemy steamers, among them 103 Indians, as prisoners and 1,000,000 marks in gold bars.

TURKISH WOMEN TRY TO STOP TROOP TRAINS

ODESSA, March 7.—It is reported from Constantinople that Turkish women broke into railway yards whence troop trains were about to leave, shouting protests against sending the men "to go to their death." They threw themselves on the rails in front of the trains, the authorities refrained from using force to remove them, these advices say, fearing a mutiny among the soldiers. The men were taken from the cars, but later were sent off secretly by night.

It is also reported that the Turkish General Staff declined to summon before a court martial Kiamile Pacha, commander of the Turks army in the Caucasus, on account of certain disclosures which might be made. Consequently the commander will receive an honorable discharge.

These reports say further that the people of Constantinople were led to believe that the German army had achieved a much greater victory at Verdun than was actually gained, and that when the facts were ascertained rioting occurred. It is stated German troops suppressed the rioting.

Forty persons are reported to have been killed in the wreck of a passenger train on the Berlin-Constantinople Railway near Nish, Serbia. Investigation showed that rails had been loosened, and many arrests have been made.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz"-bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead — all tired out — just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

Billy Sunday Has Chat With Cardinal Gibbons

BALTIMORE, March 7—Billy Sunday, accompanied by his wife and Dr. Howard Kelly, visited Cardinal Gibbons at the arch-episcopal residence Friday. They were received by the Cardinal and the Rev. Louis R. Stuckney, chancellor of the diocese.

Sunday's experiences as a baseball player were spoken of by the Cardinal, who is an ardent "fan."

"It was just a plain social call," said the Cardinal afterward. "I enjoyed meeting Mr. Sunday very much, and wished him God speed."

"I'd never met the Cardinal, but wanted to," declared Sunday.

She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Fenirs, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Let the Market Tolls By Tender

Farmers Will Not Be Granted Privilege of Selling Meat in Smaller Quantities Than Quarters

The Council has decided to let the market tolls by tender. Ald. Duncan and Ald. Dobbin moved that the farmers be allowed to cut meat up on the market and sell it in smaller quantities than quarters. Both Ald. Weir and Ald. Edgar were of the opinion that this would be unfair to the retail butchers, who were not only taxpayers but paid a license. Ald. Duncan asserted that his suggestion if adopted, would help the poor man who might like to buy a piece of meat on the market. The motion was defeated with the result that the present market regulations will remain as they are.

REFUSED TO GRANT INCREASE

Salary of the Medical Officer of Health Will Remain as it is

Last night the City Council declined to accede to Ald. Duncan's request to grant Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health for the city the sum of one hundred dollars for extra services rendered in connection with his duties. The discussion arose out of the request that was made by the Board of Health of which Ald. Duncan is chairman, for an increase in salary, claiming that the present sum of eight hundred dollars paid the Medical Health Officer, was inadequate for the services rendered. The following letter received from Dr. Amys, is self explanatory:

To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—I wish to take this opportunity to set myself right with you and the public, re the recommendation of the Board of Health for an increase of $200 in my salary.

I did not, as stated in the press, ask for an increase, but it came as a recommendation from the Board of Health, a body who know what my duties are.

On Thursday last I appeared before you at your request to state my case, and what I said then, I wish to make perfectly clear now, namely, that I can give you $800 or $1800 worth of services, and I leave it you to decide how much and which you want.

Again reminding you, as Dr. Hastings of Toronto, has said, "A municipality may have as much health as they are willing to pay for."

Thanking you, gentlemen I am,

Yours truly,

Dr. Amys.

CONDUCTORS WILL BE TRIED

Special to The Examiner:

Great importance is attached in railway circles to the case coming on at Ottawa on Thursday in which several conductors and three alleged conspirators undergo their preliminary trial for defrauding the C.P.R. by duplicate sale of tickets. The men were remanded last week by Judge Green under heavy bail amounting to $1,000 each, with an additional $1,000 as security.

SPILLED MILK

Mr. Norman Moncrief, the milk vendor, had a bad upset this morning when coming into the city with his milk waggon. In attempting to cross the road in the heavy snow his milk van turned turtle with the milk cans upside down. About 100 quarts of milk was lost, which made rather a bad day's business. Mr. Moncrief saw there was no use "crying over spilt milk," and at once telephoned into Juby Bros. for a supply and was thus enabled to serve his regular customers.

THE RESPONSE WAS GENEROUS

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Peterborough Branch of the Labrador Medical Mission begs to thank all who generously responded to the appeal of the Ministerial Association for funds with which to carry on the work. Appeals for patriotic and other purposes are so numerous that the splendid response is all the more gratifying. The total sum collected is $166.75.

Any additional contributions of money or warm clothing for the use of the mission may be sent to Mrs. James Wood, Box 990, Peterborough.

CALLS YSER DEADLIER.

British Writer Says Germans Are Less Reckless at Verdun.

LONDON, March 7. — The Paris correspondent of the Times, telegraphing under Friday's date, says:

"Now that the rush and turmoil of the first days of the great attack have vanished, it is becoming clear that great though were the enemy's preparations for victory, and though the expenditure of shells was enormous, the slaughter has not been so great as in the battles on the Yser.

"The enemy has not by any means lost courage, but in this fighting he no longer swarmed across shell-swept zones in complete disdain of death. The attacks, once launched, were carried through with great dash, but they were always well contained and definite in outline, and did not resemble a vast, interminable outpouring of men seeking to crush by sheer weight. Therefore their losses have been considerably smaller than in any of the great battles of the French front hitherto."

A MURDER AT NIAGARA FALLS

THAW'S DIVORCE FIGHT BEGINS

PITTSBURG, March 7.—Harry K. Thaw's fight for a divorce from Evelyn Nesbit Thaw opened Saturday before Attorney John W. Thomas appointed master to hear the testimony. The hearing, which is private was held in the offices of Attorney Stephen B. Stone, counsel for Thaw. Evelyn Thaw, now in vaudeville, was not present or represented by counsel. She is quoted as saying she would be "glad to be rid of him."

IN FLANDERS FIELDS.

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky,
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead; short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

JOHN McRAE.

This extraordinarily beautiful and appealing poem, which appeared anonymously in London Punch recently, was written by Dr. John McRae, formerly of the Royal Victoria Hospital, and now with No. 1 Canadian General Hospital in France.

A new dishpan is rectangular to fit firmly in a kitchen sink and has rubber feet to hold it steady.

For striking a soldier and telling him that as an Irishman he should be ashamed to fight for England, a farmer named Bernard Crilly was sentenced to a month's imprisonment, with hard labor, at Gorey (Wexford) Petty Sessions.

The death has occurred at Gosport, Eng., of Captain Starkey, aged ninety-six, a former yacht skipper, who captained the racing schooner Bildegarde for King Edward when he was Prince of Wales.

Battle Cruiser Through Speed and Prowess Now The British Navy's Pride

Vessels Which Were Not Popular Before the War Have By Success in Fight Become the First Line of Defence in the North Sea Fleet, Replacing the More Powerful But Slower Dreadnought.

LONDON, March 7.—Speed, with sufficient gun power to cause the necessary destruction, is now the cardinal principle of British naval strategy, and battle cruisers, an unknown quantity at the beginning of the war, have proved this principle to the satisfaction of every man aboard the battle cruiser fleet, which was inspected this week in the North Sea by a correspondent of the Associated Press.

New battle cruisers before the war were not exactly objects of pride to their officers and crews. On account of the voracity with which they consumed coal service on them was not popular and a government harassed with demands for a reduction in naval expenditure had no reason to favour these refinements of the super dreadnought school.

To prove the battle cruiser has redeemed its unfortunate early reputation it is necessary only to refer to the activities of this type of fighting craft since the war began. Battle cruisers brought Von Spee's career to a full stop and they were the only big ships that succeeded in getting into the North Sea engagements.

So it is not surprising that these monsters, the biggest fighting machines afloat, are idolised by the officers and men who fight them. A squadron at the opening of the war the battle cruisers now form the nucleus of Great Britain's first line fleet of naval offence. There are many new ships among the light cruisers attached to this squadron, but virtually every battle cruiser in it has been "blooded," to use the navy's equivalent for the army's baptism of fire, and the sailors manning them show the pride and poise of veterans.

Hundred Ships Await Germans.

When the mist lifted for a few minutes as the correspondent stood on the control bridge of one of the battle cruisers, the fastest fleet capable of actual offensive operations ever gathered together under one flag appeared in view. There were more than one hundred war vessels in the fleet, arranged in squadrons, with battle cruisers, surrounded by their screen of faithful destroyers, occupying the place of honour, but with every section, down to the humble rusty, but vitally necessary colliers, on the mark for a flying start if the eagerly awaited coming out of the German fleet is signalled.

"One lone dreadnought, powerful enough to meet almost any foe, but painfully slow in comparison with the other units of the fleet, swung at anchor. The officers on the bridge jokingly explained that she formed the third line to come on and pick up the pieces, or, if necessary, to be sent out as bait for the wary German fleet.

The mobility of this fleet has thrown on it much of the patrol work in the North Sea and it is accepted as a matter of course that should the German war ships come out it will be the first unit of the British navy to feel the shock of battle, as it will, on account of its speed, be able to get into action before the superdreadnought battleships reach the scene. Hence its assertion that it is the first line of offense, with the superdreadnoughts second and the old battle ships of the predreadnought period forming a powerful third-line reserve. No land force ever has been so well protected against unforseen disaster as the British navy.

No Fear of Big German Guns.

Increase in the size of the big guns does not worry the officers of the battle cruisers, who say that since their 13.5-inch guns can sink a battle ship as far as the range can be found, any bigger guns would add to the weight of the ship and reduce the available space for turrets, without sufficient corresponding advantage. These officers talked about the much heralded German 17-in gun in a speculative way, but even admitting the possibility of mounting it on board a war ship, they did not show any great concern.

This feeling of confidence in their ships is not a matter of theory, for the battle cruisers are the veterans of this war in destructive power they have done only what was expected of them, but in their powers of resistance they have more than surprised their officers.

The battle cruiser Lion, which fought the great part of the Dogger Bank action as Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty's flagship, is the most noteworthy example of this unexpected power of resistance. High explosive shells rained on this ship from stem to stern, and, although they ranged in size from the Blucher's 8-inch to the Derrflinger's 12, only one of them reached a spot vital enough to interfere with the ship's fighting power. This shell struck the engine room and by letting salt water into the steam pipes of the port turbine reduced the Lion's speed from twenty-seven to eighteen knots, but did not make her less powerful in defence, as only one of her big guns was out of action at any time during the fight.

This gun, one of the forward turret pair, was jammed for a time in its casement by an 8 inch shell which struck the top of the turret's armour and beat it down against the gun.

Eager for Foe to Come Out.

An officer of the Lion who went through the Dogger Bank battle, said he feared the bursting of big shells on board and about his ship would be an awesome sight, but he did not find it so. The Lion's roar was so great from her own guns that even 12-inch shells exploded on her with out attracting any attention. This officer also declared the casualty list of the Lion was remarkably small, in contrast with the material havoc, because few of the shells reached any part of the vessel where the fighting men are stationed during an action. With the exception of the forward one of the turrets were hit.

The officers and crews of the fleet look surprisingly unworn, and if they are bored by the monotony of the long wait between actions they do not show it. Leave is infrequent, and, as a darkened London does not appeal to them, the officers spend most of their leisure in playing golf or shooting. The sailors receive shore leave whenever they can be spared and football is their chief diversion.

One reason for the lack of boredom is explained by the fact that navigation, which in peace times is a matter of routine, has become in the dark a fascinating sport. One navigator said he dreaded a return to ship and shore lights, and he was convinced that even in peace times many of the lights ordinarily used could be dispensed with, with advantage to the proficiency of the navy. Not much hope was expressed that the German navy would come out, but raids are not only expected but looked forward to with eagerness as providing another opportunity to demonstrate the capability of the battle cruiser.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, then irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hansbarger, 30 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

BOARD OF WORKS WILL CONSIDER PROPOSAL TO CONSTRUCT A WAGON BRIDGE

Communication Addressed to the City Council Brings Up Question That Was Dealt With Some Time Ago Regarding the London Street Dam---Orangemen Receive the Usual Grant of $200---A Big Fair Promised.

At last night's meeting of the City Council a communication was received from the Quaker Oats Company, acknowledging receipt of letter from the city asking the Company to take such action as they might see fit, to discourage the practice among their employees, of walking on the railway tracks. The Company pointed out that the request brought up the question of the London street dam which is crossed by the Grand Trunk Railway, and is also used as a foot bridge. The Company renewed an offer they made some time ago, which in effect, was to give the city permission to construct a waggon bridge above their dam using the piers of an old bridge that was dismantled some years ago. In return the Company asked to have Murray street closed at the Company's property line, and also Mill street.

Alderman Dobbin reminded the Council that Mill street was used to some considerable extent by pedestrians. The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

Street Car Service.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon forwarded a letter to the Council regarding the question of street cars stopping at the near side of the crossings, and also relating to the location of stopping places along Charlotte street. It is not the intention of the Company to stop their street cars on the near side of the crossing on streets that are not paved. This would necessitate pasengers walking in the mud to get to the rear end of the pay-as-you-enter cars. The matter was referred to the Committee on Railways.

A deputation representing the Orangemen of the city and district waited upon the Council with the request for the usual grant of two hundred dollars with which to help defray the expenses of the celebration that will be held in this city on July 12th. It is estimated that between five and six thousand people will visit the city on that date. The request was granted on motion of Alderman Edgar and Alderman Saunders.

The matter of making the usual grant of $300 to the 57th Regimental Band, and $225 to the Temple Band, for band concerts to be given during the coming year, was referred to the Finance Committee of the City Council. A similar request made by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., on behalf of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was referred to the Finance Committee. The grant in this case amounts to $600. Mr. Gillespie promised the Council one of the best exhibitions ever held in Peterborough.

A by-law providing for the raising of the sum of $7,706 with which to defray the cost of collecting and removing the garbage throughout the city, was adopted. This amounts to seven-tenths of a mill on the dollar.

The request of the Separate School Board for the sum of $11,453 as school taxes, to be paid in monthly installments was referred to the Finance Committee.

WHAT THE Y. M. C. A. IS DOING FOR THE BOYS AT THE FRONT

"Practically the best thing done by the Canadian Y. M. C. A. is the issue of hot soup to men in the trenches. This is made during the evening in huge 'dicksies' and carried up to the fire trenches at midnight."

Thus writes "W.H.S.", a Canadian newspaper correspondent, in a letter from "Northern France." He tells of the infancy of the organization in France last year as he came to know it, and goes on: "It has grown to be such a power in the field that one wonders where and when the Canadian Y.M.C.A. will reach its maximum output."

Huge lorries are now required to handle the useful articles distributed by the Y.M.C.A. headquarters to the fourteen tents or huts within reach of the German guns, he writes.

"The record was established last month when 800,000 sheets of note paper and a like quantity of envelopes were given free to all troops." Games of all kinds are provided, concerts and sing-songs held regularly; ten pianos provide music and ten moving-picture machines and eighteen gramophones, entertainment; books and magazines are sent up in huge quantities.

He concludes: "That a great work is being done can readily be seen by readers at home, but it is these tired boys of ours, just out of the zone where death stalks day and night, where the hiss of bullets, the scream, moan and crash of shells is heard, that can really appreciate this splendid work."

in this great struggle now going on, on the battlefields of France, in which there is at stake all those principles of liberty and freedom which our two great races love so well.

"I know that in every heart in this battalion to-day there is only one anxiety and that is that the time shall be short until you shall cross the sea to the firing line on the western front, shoulder to shoulder with your comrades now fighting there, to do your little bit in this great cause.

"Years ago on many fields in every clime our two races met and fought against each other. The blood of our noble forefathers freely flowed in a stream of enmity, but now the sons of these fathers stand side by side defending the same principles of freedom, the same cause of religious liberty and the same two flags.

Races Stand Together.

"To-day their blood flows in a stream of unity so that, by means of this sacrifice, the two noble races of men and women shall go on through time, linked together in bonds of love and comradeship which would never have been forged had it not been for this war.

"You have every reason to be proud. First, of your Canadian citizenship, for in all the world where can you find any people who have more distinguished themselves in this or in any war than the Canadians have done?

"Second, you are commanded by our good Col. Dansereau, who was one of the first in Canada to enlist when the war broke out and was one of the first to meet the Germans on the field of Langemarck, receiving on the twenty-fourth day of April, wounds that caused him to be brought back to Canada. Having in his veins the blood of old France Col. Dansereau is not daunted by his wounds and goes back again, followed by his splendid battalion of men and I am satisfied that by the twenty-fourth of April next, he shall have had the opportunity of meeting again the Huns and obtaining satisfaction for many wounds, the scars of which he now bears upon his body.

Waste Necessary in Food.

Because our ancestors ate coarser waste with their food they developed a long bowel, mostly a muscular tube. This muscle was not intended for digestion purposes but to carry off waste. We have inherited this muscular tube. Waste-containing food is as essential to its proper function as light is to the eye. Because modern foods have little waste the human bowel muscles have weakened from lack of exercise. Constipation and indigestion have resulted. Dr. Jackson, who practised for years as an intestinal specialist, has devised Roman Meal, a food which has plenty of waste to exercise the bowel muscles and is also highly nourishing. It prevents indigestion and constipation. Most grocers sell it.

NATIONAL ANTHEM IS NOW SUNG BY 69TH IN ENGLISH

French-Canadians Ready to Join Voices With Those of English Brothers

COMPLIMENTED UNIT

Lt.-Cols. Guthrie and Beer Declare They Never Saw More Soldierly Men.

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 7. — The French-Canadians of the 69th Montreal Battalion have added another to their list of accomplishments. They now can sing "God Save the King" in English. Catholic members of the battalion, who include practically all the French-speaking men, have been attending mass at the Church of St. John the Baptist within a block of their barracks in the armoury. It has been the custom to sing the National Anthem at the close of the service, but in the past it always has been the French version which has been used.

A short time ago, Lieut.-Col. Dansereau, the officer commanding, and the Rev. F. J. Paquin S. J., chaplain of the battalion decided that the men should know the English version, so that they could join in occasions when the French words might lead to confusion. The request was made to the men and they have applied themselves to the task with such success that the first public trial was thoroughly satisfactory.

An Impressive Occasion.

It was an impressive occasion as the hundreds of loyal French-Canadians, wearing the khaki, which is the pledge of their loyalty, stood in the sacred edifice and sang with heart and soul the words which bind together an Empire.

Many of the men are unable to speak English and it is an interesting tribute to the trend of modern times and the changes which the war has wrought that the first words of English which they learn should be a prayer for the safety of the ruler of the British Empire.

The inspiration of the occasion was deepened by the fact that it was in a church built by the descendants of United Empire Loyalists that these men, descendants of the French pioneers, whose fathers once fought to keep the British out of Canada, should assemble on their way to fight for the same British Empire, and should sing with such evident sincerity the words of the Empire's Anthem in the tongue of the Motherland.

Tributed By Veterans.

Warm tributes were paid to the 69th, and their commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. Dansereau, when they passed their inspection by Brigadier-General McLean with flying colours on Tuesday. With the inspecting officer were: Lieut.-Col. P. A. Guthrie, recruiting officer for the Maritime Provinces, and Lieut.-Col. J. H. Beer, commanding the 140th, both of whom have seen service at the front and were invalided home. After the inspection these officers addressed the battalion.

In his address Lieut.-Col. Guthrie said:

"I can assure you that it is one of the greatest pleasures of my life to stand before you to-day and have the opportunity of addressing a few remarks to this battalion. I may say that I shall always feel indebted to Gen. McLean for having placed me in a position to inspect this regiment, and I feel it is a very great honour. I have, on many occasions since the war began and for the last year and a half, inspected overseas units, and I want to say, in all frankness, that I have never looked on a sturdier or more soldierly looking battalion of men than that which I had the honour of inspecting this afternoon.

marks on the wires nor on the pole. It was new wire and new insulation. There were no marks on the insulation. "We're working on the main lines nearly every day in the year."

Must Have Touched Two Wires.

Mr. Hall—"If he touched only one wire would he have received a shock?"

Beattie—No, unless he touched an other wire or was grounded—had his feet on the ground.

In his report of the post-mortem examination performed with Dr. Eastwood, Dr. Amys said that in his opinion and considering other circumstances of the case, death was caused by electric shock. There was a burn on the first finger of the left hand and another on the second finger of the right hand. All the organs were normal except the appendix.

Dr. Eastwood said that the deceased had chronic appendicitis. There was no active inflammatory condition, but it must have caused the deceased some pain, even on the day of the accident.

Wm. Smith said he was working with Hewson that day.

"I considered him a careful man. He was not wearing his rubber gloves at the time. Neither was I. Beattie told him to take the gloves with him. My gloves were at the house. I forgot them that day. I knew there was real hot stuff in the wires, but I went up the pole without my rubber gloves. I don't know of any neglect on the part of any person that might have caused the accident.

To Dr. Greer, witness said he did not see how the accident occurred. The first thing he did see was a flash at Hewson's left hand. He must have had hold of the other wire for there was no ground on the post.

"He said only one word "cut." I immediately cut the wire. This broke the circuit and the body leaned backward. He was on the west side of the pole and I was on the east side, just opposite him. He must have touched the other wire by accident. There was no occasion for him to touch it. We hadn't begun the work we were sent to do. We were just getting into position.

James Johnston, lineman; Gilbert Packenham, operator at the Power House; Chief Howard, Detective Meagher, and Mr. H. O. Fiske were also called.

It was shown that one burn coincided with a hole in the leather mit for that hand, and in the other glove there was a hole in the finger almost in the same position as the burn on that hand.

"Innocent," Says Slayer in Chair

OSSINING, N.Y., March 7.—Protesting he was innocent of the murder of his wife, Walter Watson, of Brooklyn, was put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison.

"I am innocent! God help us, I am innocent!" were Watson's last words as the death mask was being clamped down on his head. While he was chanting the prayer after the Rev. Father William E. Cashin, the first of three shocks was given to him upon signal from Dr. C. W. Farr, prison surgeon. Warden Kirchwey was not present. Fred Dorner, principal keeper, supervised the ceremony.

Watson left a flower, taken from a wreath on his wife's coffin, in an envelope addressed to Father Cashin which he requested not to be opened until he was dead. On the envelope was written: "This envelope contains a flower from my dear wife's grave. Please bury it with me and let it be on my breast. It is a token of remembrance of my wife, whom I always loved. May our souls rest in peace."

Watson, who was the chum of Hans Schmidt in the death house stabbed his wife to death in a quarrel.

Capt. C. M. M'Cuaig From the Battle Line

Arrives in New York—Married Montreal Girl While in London

NEW YORK, March 6.—Capt. C. M. McCuaig, one of the three 'fighting McCuaigs," arrived here on the Rotterdam, bringing with him a wound and a bride.

Captain McCuaig and his two brothers left Montreal in October, 1914 with the Thirteenth Royal Highlanders of Canada, and have served at the front since the arrival of the first Canadian contingent.

Major D. R. McCuaig, one of the brothers, was captured by the Germans in the second battle of Ypres. He and his command fought for two days after they had been surrounded by Germans. Major McCuaig was captured after he was unconscious and wounded.

Major G. E. McCuaig was also wounded in this battle. The younger brother, who arrived here was stricken with appendicitis. While recuperating in London from the operation, he met his fiancee, Miss Evelyn Woods of Montreal, who had gone there to see her brother in the same regiment. They were married immediately.

ILLUMINATED BOXES

A representative of a Toronto firm waited upon the Council with a view of securing the Council's permission to place a number of illuminated boxes on the street, which would be used for gathering waste paper and other refuse and incidentally for advertising purposes. For this concession the company was willing to pay a reasonable sum. Ald. Duncan voiced his disapproval of the scheme. He pointed out that the Council has for a number of years, been trying to remove the poles and other unsightly objects from the city's streets. "We have street cleaners and a by-law prohibiting people from depositing paper or other refuse on the streets. I don't think we have a right to place these boxes on the streets for the benefit of a company wishing to advertise various wares.

Ald. Stratton drew a glowing mental picture of the tired workingman seeking the refuge of one of the city parks only to find staring him in the face, an illuminated garbage can.

Ald McIntyre was in favour of having a few boxes put in on trial at the company's expense.

On motion of Ald Weir and Edgar, ten of the boxes will be put in on approbation.

"Put one in front of each of the Aldermen's doors" suggested Ald Stratton.

Forger Arrested When he Posed as Detective in Police Office.

John Sawey, the only man who ever forged the signature of Woodrow Wilson to a cheque, can blame his system of thoroughness for having to face a charge of forgery at Passaic, N.J.

Sawey arrived in Passaic and after cashing a $80 cheque at the National Bank entered the police headquarters a few doors away. There he informed B. F. Turner, Captain of Detectives, that he was Detective Titus of Paterson and had been sent to get information about a forger.

Turner believed his caller's face familiar and was certain he was not a Paterson detective, as he knows all of them. Captain Turner stepped from the room, quickly ran over the pictures in his Rogue's Gallery and picked out that of Sawey, whom he had sent to prison in 1901 for forgery.

"Here's the man you are looking for," said Captain Turner, handing to Sawey a picture of himself, "and I'm right glad you called, because the Paterson police have been seeking a man who forged and cashed at least a dozen of cheques there."

"Well, I thought I could get away with it," Turner quoted him as saying. "I wanted to find out how the land lay here and how the police operated before I did any extensive work."

THINKS THAT GERMANY IS NEARING THE END OF HER TETHER

LONDON, March 6.—The Times has received a special despatch from Lord Northcliffe who has been at Verdun since Friday morning.

After giving a general description of the fighting Lord Northcliffe said:

"I lunched at the simple headquarters with General Petain, who drank tea with his brief meal. He discussed the battle as though only an interested spectator. He looks like Lord Roberts, though larger built. He spoke with great interest of the Canadians and Australians and the growth of the British army. Both he and his staff are remarkable by the complete lack of excitement.

"After another gathering of officers the talk touched on the question whether the British should attack now to relieve the Verdun pressure. The opinion was mostly adverse, but the French evidently feel that our army has reached the point of being able to bear Britain's full share in the future operations. French officers agree that Verdun's value is chiefly moral and that they are confident the line would hold if the fortress fell.

PUNY GERMAN SOLDIERS

"But if the neutrals could see the poor quality of the Teuton soldiers they would be more impressed than by the fall of Verdun. What a pity your Highlanders can't meet them in a fair fight; it would end the war in a month," said a French Captain as we passed a group of wretched, puny prisoners. Germany must be near the end of her tether when five-foot-four, narrow-chested youths are members of the elite corps like the 3rd or 5th Berlin Army Corps."

"It is known that the Germans intend an attack later, but premature spring seemed to dry the ground sufficiently and accelerated their plans by six weeks. Deserters give more than usually valuable information, and the French were fully prepared. So far the Germans have been effectively checked, with losses hard to exaggerate, while the French losses are really trifling. In interrogating scores of prisoners belonging to every corps engaged, their accounts agree that everywhere the losses are beyond anything known before.

FOE CORPS "USED UP."

"The German 3rd and 18th Corps were entirely used up, the 7th Reserve lost one-half, and the 16th three-quarters of their strength. The 113th Division and the 5th Reserve Corps and the Bavarian Ersta Division were all 'used up', while later reinforcements suffered equally. The most conservative total estimate surpasses one-third of the forces engaged, or over one hundred thousand of Germany's picked troops.

"The sudden change in the weather damaged the German plans. Never did the wounded suffer so terribly. Imagine the French horror when their lookouts trying to save the living amongst the German masses covering the plateau and slopes found that all had been frozen stiff by the icy wind. As I approached the battle two things struck me: First, the huge quantity of all kinds of supply wagons, and second, the terrific thunder of the cannonade, far surpassing anything I heard in other battles. I looked across the city which the enemy was making a second Ypres, towards Douaumont, that gunless fort so magnified by the Germans, whose capture the French headquarters regard as 'a simple episode of give and take in war.'

"A BEAUTIFUL BATTLE"

"The day was fine, and despite the horrible carnage and the character of the ground, forces me to describe this as a beautiful battle. Despite the cannonade the birds were singing and the Red Cross ambulances and motor convoys would go through picturesque roads. We counted twenty convoys of one hundred wagons each on one road alone. It is not only the Germans who know how to utilise auto transports."

French Fully Prepared.

"The Germans made a good many of the faults the British made at Gallipoli. They announced that something large was pending by closing the Swiss frontier. The French were fully warned by their own astute intelligence department. Their aeroplanes were not idle, and if confirmation were needed it was given by deserters who, surmising the horrors to come, crept out of the trenches at night, and lay down by the edge of the Meuse until morning and gave themselves up together with information that has since proved accurate.

"Things went wrong with the Germans in other ways. A Zeppelin that was to have blown up important railway junctions on the French line of communication was brought down at Revigny. Then the gigantic effort on February 21 was frustrated by the coolness and tenacity of the French soldiers and the deadly curtain of fire of their gunners.

NO MILITARY NECESSITL

"It cannot be pretended that the German attack has in it anything of a military necessity. It was urged forward at a time of the year when weather conditions might prove a serious handicap in moving big guns and in the observation by aeroplane. Change in temperature are somewhat more frequent here than elsewhere, and so sudden are these changes that not long ago there occurred the following incident—one of nature's romantic reminders of her power.

The opposing French and German trenches, their parapets hard frozen, were so close that they were actually within hearing of each other. Toward drawn a rapid thaw set in, and the parapets melted and subsided, and two lines of men stood up, naked as it were, before each other, face to face with only two possibilities—wholesale murder or a temporary unofficial peace for the making of fresh parapets. The situation was astounding—unique in the history of trench warfare.

"The French and German officers, without conferring, turned their backs so that they might not see officially so unwarlike a scene. And the men on each side rebuilt the parapets without the firing of a single shot. This serves to illustrate the precarious weather in which the Germans have undertaken an adventure in which the elements play such a part.

"That the attack would prove costly the German Staff must have known.

As one gets near the great arena on which the eyes of the whole world are turned to-day, proofs of French efficiency and thoroughness are countless. As one approaches the battle the volume of sound becomes louder—at times terrific.

"Arrived at the battlefield there are a dozen vantage points from which with glasses or even the naked eye one can take in much that has happened. Verdun lies in a great basin. The town is being made into a second Ypres by the Germans. Its people have all gone, save a few who lie below ground.

"Farther afield the famous fort of Douaumont is pointed out. The storming of this fort, gunless and unmanned, was a military stroke of little value. The Germans there are practically surrounded and are supplied with food by their comrades at night.

"The present attack on Verdun is by far the most violent incident of the whole western front, the French Commanding General said as he sat at luncheon, discussing the war as though he were a mere spectator. The superb calm of the French people, the efficiency of their organization and the equipment of their cheery soldiers convince one that the men in the German machine will never be able to compare with them, even if France had not the help of her allies.

3 GERMANS TO ONE FRENCH

"The true moral of the Verdun fighting is that the French, with a comparatively small loss of ground, have warded off the attack of armies outnumbering them originally three to one.

"There is no means of estimating how long the battle of Verdun may still rage. The French are confident that they have the measure of the enemy, both in men and material and that unless the bombardment is followed by infantry attacks of far greater vigor and persistence than any yet, executed by the enemy the defending force will have time to make its positions practically impregnable.

"Verdun is not likely to be taken."

Boy Shot Saving His Mother Father Ends His Own Life

NEW YORK, March 7.—Michael J. Pope was presiding at dinner in his home on the ground floor at No. 151 Hemlock street, Brooklyn when his father-in-law, John Marius, forty-eight years old, rang the bell. Marius and his family had been separated several years, and Mrs. Marius and her children, who lived with Pope, told him not to admit Marius.

But Marius put his big shoulders to the door and crushed it in. Racing through a hall he flung open the dining room door and there at the table sat his wife, Mrs. Anna Marius, their children, Miss Julia Marius, twenty-one; Louis, fifteen; Elsie, eleven; Mrs. Helen Pope, the married daughter, and Richard Coryell, a guest.

Marius halted and drew a revolver. As he did so there was a general scramble for cover. Most of them dropped to the floor and tried to get under the table. Marius opened fire and Louis the boy, was hit by a bullet aimed at his mother. He threw his arms around her and turned her so his back was to his father, and a bullet that penetrated his back may cause his death.

Coryell, in shielding Mrs. Pope and Miss Julia Marius, was shot in the right side. Another bullet grazed through the hair of Elsie. Others hit the walls. When he had fired all his cartridges and all those in the room were struggling to get further under the table Marius stood calmly in the doorway reloaded his weapon and said: "Well, this for me and damn all of you."

Then he raised the pistol to his head, sent a bullet into his brain and fell dead.

The shooting aroused the neighbourhood. Louis, the boy who had saved his mother, and Coryell were hurried to the Bradford Street Hospital. No others were wounded. It was said the boy might die. Coryell's wound also is serious.

The family said that Marius had quarrelled so much with his family that a separation was necessary. They saaid that for long periods he had failed to support his family and that when they went to live with his son-in-law, Pope, he tried also to make that his home. He called several times but always was put out. Last night he went there for the last time.

WAR IS DOING A GREAT DEAL TO HELP WOMEN

Interesting Address by Mrs. E. Pankhurst to Suffrage League

MONTREAL, March 6.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the celebrated English suffragist, was the guest of honour and the speaker at a tea given in the Ritz-Carlton by the Montreal Equal Suffrage League.

It is almost impossible to realize, when one looks at Mrs. Pankhurst and hears her beautiful voice, that this dainty, refined little woman has committed acts of violence, and has gone on hunger strikes, while serving terms in jail. But when one hears her energetic, forceful remarks on the subject of the war and what it means to women, one can understand that she is ready to suffer, and die, if need be, for her convictions, and whether one agrees or disagrees with the cause of suffrage, one is compelled to admire Mrs. Pankhurst's personality.

Yesterday, the suffrage leader began her talk with a brief discussion of the war, its causes and its abduct. She then went on to tell of the part women have played in war work in England. "There are thousands," she said, "of educated, capable women in England who have had no life-work, women who are able and enthusiastic and who longed for the chance to do their bit to help their country. Their brothers could go, enlist, and be trained free of charge. All they had to do was to give themselves to the Government, and every encouragement would be given them. But here were all these women who could play tennis, hockey and golf, who were straight and healthy and who had nothing to do. Here was an enormous reserve force which was not being utilized.

Training the Women.

"We went to the authorities and suggested that women should be trained alongside of their husbands or brothers, in shop office and factory, so that when it was time for the man to go to war, he could leave his work in the hands of his wife or sister, confident that it would be carried on, and that he could leave with a clear conscience. At first, the authorities smiled at the bare idea. So women began of their own accord to hold recruiting meetings, and it was soon discovered that women were excellent recruiting agents. Then the report came that 500,000 German women were engaged in making munitions, and that settled the question for English women. They threatened to become militant unless they were given the opportunity to be of service to the nation.

"To-day, women are performing the duties of men in almost every walk of life. To-day the Government is recruiting women for national service just as it recruited men for the front. An agricultural army composed of women is to go out into the fields this year to ensure our harvest, and because the women are strengthening the hands of the men, England's commercial supremacy and industrial efficiency will remain unimpaired. It is not many years since English women fought for the right to practice medicine. For the last two months an advertisement has appeared in all the British papers, signed by no less a person than the Prime Minister asking for money for the support of medical schools for women, because women are needed so badly in that profession.

War Benefits Women.

"The war is doing a great deal for women. The parasitic class has gone. Soon there will not be an idle person in England. Women who formerly existed solely for their own pleasure are to-day scrubbing floors and washing dishes in the military hospital, or they are taking week-end duty at the munition factories in order to release the tired workers for a day or two of rest; or they are acting as chauffeurs to wounded soldiers, or they are serving tea and coffee at the camp canteens, on the railway stations, or they are giving their talents in entertaining the men who have returned from the front.

"It depends upon woman whether we will learn our lesson for common humanity and make war a refining, ennobling influence for the regeneration of human beings. Never before have women taken such an active part in war, never before have women given their men so gladly and so freely. Never before, in England, have women believed in the cause of a war as they do in this war for the freedom of smaller nations, and for the integrity of the British Empire. If the unthinkable should happe nand we should lose, face the fate of becoming provinces of Germany then we would better all die fighting."

Mrs. Pankhurst then went on to speak of Serbia and its political importance to Britain. If Germany should retain possession of that country, she would have a highway through to our eastern Empire, and would have won the first step of her way to the destruction of the Empire. If the Empire looks after the Serbian women and children, the Serbian men are left free to fight. Broken as they are, the people without a country, there is not a word of criticism or complaint from them. They are sure that their powerful allies will see that justice is done, when the war is over.

"We must win this war. It is not often that we have the opportunity to save a nation? That opportunity is ours to-day," she said.

100 Quarts of Milk Spilt in Accident

Mr. S. Moncrief, milk vendor, lost one hundred quarts of milk, and had many bottles broken this morning in making a sharp turn at the corner of King and Park streets. The accident was reported to have been partly due, at least, to the snow piled at that point.

Contribution Acknowledged.

The Peterborough Progressive Club has received the following letter:

Dear Mrs. Cameron.—Very many thanks for the $25.00 from the Peterborough Progressive Club for the general Field Comforts Fund.

We have been very busy, but the great rush is over now, and we really feel very pleased at having got the Christmas presents out in such comparatively good time. A large shipment has arrived to-day, but we are very glad as our shelves were looking rather empty.

Yours faithfully,
JOAN L. ARNOLDI,
Lieut. Canadian Field Comforts Commissioner.

That the old system of $20 a month separation allowance, payable from Ottawa, has been restored, is evident from the following wire received by the Examiner from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P.:

Ottawa, Ont., Mar. 7, 1916.

All separation allowances from March 1st will be paid from headquarters, Ottawa, and not by the regimental paymasters. Separation allowance cards will consequently be returned to headquarters as in the year 1915. This measure does away with the payment of the 85c when the soldier is living at home or the 65c when he is living elsewhere. The regimental paymasters will continue to pay soldiers' pay, assigned pay and rations where the soldier is not in barracks and not living at home. Any separation payments that have been made not as above are to be stated so that they can be adjusted accordingly from head office.

All adjustments to March 1st will be made by regimental paymasters.

SCHOOL BOYS WILLING TO WORK ON FARMS

Among the older boys in the Peterborough school considerable interest has been aroused over the proposal to engage with farmers during the summer vacations to assist in relieving the scarcity of help caused by enlistment. From a number of reports from school sources the idea appears to appeal to the boys who may have this opportunity of doing their bit. If the proposal materialises it should be of considerable benefit to farmers, and in more than one respect should prove an education to and also a physical good for the boys.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE FINAL GAME TO-NIGHT

There is considerable local interest in the Trent Valley League final game at Brock street rink to-night, when Campbellford and Marmora will clash. The Campbellford team having played here three times this season are well known to local fans, while Marmora generally have a good team and will undoubtedly make things interesting for Tommy Moffatt's braves. Campbellford will run an excursion, while Marmora will have a big crowd of fans on hand. In addition, Havelock, Hastings, Stirling and other eastern towns will be well represented.

Berlin Union Jacks Are in the Finals

TORONTO, March 7.—Berlin Union Jacks earned the right to meet Aura Lee in the junior O.H.A. finals when they defeated Collingwood in the play-off here last night by the same identical score as they won in Berlin, namely, 3 to 1. The teams were tied at the end of the first period 1 to 1, but in the second session the Dutchmen secured their margin on loose work by the Collingwood defence, when they scored two goals by bringing the puck from behind their opponents' goal and batting it in. This period was in favour of Berlin, but the last, which was scoreless, was an even break.

Collingwood started out at a merry clip in the opening session, and had considerable on their opponents, but they lacked the weight and stamina and died away in the second period, only to come strong in the last. On the play there was little to choose between either aggregation, although individually Berlin were better, as they had four men who stood out above the Collingwood aggregation in Childs, Brown, Schnarr and Shirk. They also knew a little more about inside hockey, and their interference tactics on several occasions caught the Northerners cold, thus slowing them up considerably.

Despite the large ice surface the players were inclined to bunch too much, and not play their positions. Each checked hard, both backwards and forwards, while both defences used good judgment in breaking up rushes, either with the poke check or the body. Both teams should have had more goals than they secured, as they were within close enough range, but their shooting was generally wide or blocked by the goalkeeper. Collingwood one one occasion gave Childs six shots in a row to stop, but he turned them aside in a clever manner, although had the Northerners had anybody in centre ice that was able to rust in and grab the rebound they would have got several goals.

Berlin looked to have both age and weight on Collingwood, and were just as fast skaters, Brown showing quickness in breaking clear, and always a dangerous man on a rush. Schnarr, while lacking the speed of some of the others, was good, but was inclined to play a little too much grand stand in the last period. For Collingwood the Foulis boys and Noble showed up well, but the team as a whole lacked the hockey training of the winners. The teams:

Referee—Lieut. Lou E. Marsh.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Berlin, Krug, one minute.
2—Collingwood, Cook, 6 minutes.

Second Period.

3—Berlin, Shirk, 6 minutes.
4—Berlin, Shirk, 8 minutes.

Third Period.

No score.

Berlin Rover May Be Called Professional

TORONTO, March 7.—All sorts of threats and counter threats were hurled around the Arena last night regarding the Berlin—Riverside senior O. H. A. final. A Berlin supporter stated that the Riversides were going to protest Harry Boettger the rover of the Berlin team, as they claimed he tried out with the Toronto professionals this year. They betting not try it or else we will come right back at them," added another Berlin supporter.

Officers of the Riversides stated last night that they had no intention of protesting Boettger, as they knew nothing against his amateur standing.

It was thought at the time when the O.H.A. made the rule forbidding players to even practice with professionals that they were drawing the lines a little too fine. Many a boy thinks he is good enough for professional and wants to get a trial. If he makes good, why all right, if he doesn't he should be allowed to go back and play for his home team providing that he has received no remuneration for so doing. Whether he is an amateur or a professional with his home team is a question which only the governing body of the association in which he plays can decide.

It is true that Boettger turned out with the Toronto professionals for a week early in the season. The boy thought he was ripe for professional hockey, and wanted a chance. He was given an opportunity to make good, and perhaps if he hadn't had his thumb injured might have been a regular of the Torontos. This set him back, and he left for home and perhaps to-day is just as good an amateur as any in the O.H.A. He practiced with the Torontos under the name of Bell of Buckingham Quebec.

This is the first case of its kind that has come up since the edict went forth from O.H.A. headquarters.

An evening paper last night stated that it was learned that one of the Berlin players practiced with the Torontos this year. The Berlin supporters, who were present at the game last night immediately began to telegraph it around the Arena that it was Boettger. Evidently they were aware of the fact all along, or else they would not have picked out the right man so quick.

Willard Keeps Improving And is Working Hard

Champion Still Soft, But is Training Conscientiously For Moran Bout —Large Crowds Watch Him Work

NEW YORK, March 7.—Even the admirers of Frank Moran admit that Willard has become a cleverer boxer than his smaller rival, although they still maintain that the Pittsburger has a more killing punch than the big fellow. There is no foundation for that belief in the records of the two men, although it is a fact that Moran has the knack of throwing every ounce or his weight behind a right-hander highly developed. But where Moran has one or at the most two effective blows at his command, Willard can hit from every angle.

Moran's Strength.

Learned to Hit Short.

Willard always did have a powerful right uppercut, although it was more of an upward swing than a short jolt, and when it missed his fist threatened to smash the lights over the ring. He has learned to shorten that blow and now makes use of it at close quarters. That alone has increased his effectiveness by 50 per cent. for his opponents no longer are able to find safety in a clinch.

It was because Willard could not or would not fight at close quarters that made him look so bad in his bout with Carl Morris. The latter clinched as fast as the referee could tear the men apart, and though Morris was at fault in forcing the embraces, Willard came in for much censure because he remained passive instead of fighting him off.

Willard's performance with his trainers, Jack Hemple and Walter Monahan, was a good illustration of what a tremendous advantage he has over the average sized heavyweight. Hemple weighs 190 and Monahan 200 pounds, yet the champion handled them as though they were a pair of bantamweights.

Willard is far from being in shape. His muscles are hidden under a layer of soft flesh, and his wind is short. Both his sparring partners are in fighting trim, yet they were the first to tire. They were forced to fight at unnatural pace in order to overcome their disadvantage in reach. In order to land they had to step in a foot farther, and that food had to be accounted for by so much extra speed or Willard would beat them to the punch.

Waiting Game.

Moran will be handicapped in the same way. It is not alone that Willard's greater weight makes his blows more damaging but the fact that his opponent's blows must travel so much further to reach the mark. Extra speed is the only thing that can overcome that advantage, and the strain is bound to wear out the smaller man. In other words, Willard can lay back and make his opponents beat themselves.

Willard Favorite.

There has been hardly any betting on the bout as yet, but one layer gave his opinion that the odds were 2 to 1 on Willard at this time. Jones said that he would place at Considine's any sum up to $100,000 to be laid at those odds. He also said that he would bet $10,000 of his own gelt at the same odds.

Although it is Rickard's avowed intention to keep the tickets out of the speculators hands, considerable stuff has already found its way there. Dave Mandell, who for years sold the pasteboards in Hammerstein's lobby, has accumulated eighteen boxes, each box holding six persons. Dave's expenditure has been just $2,700, and he expects to obtain holdings that will make his stock cost $6,000. He explained that it was too early to get a good price yet.

Moran and Willard Train

Moran Was Thrown Off Iceboat, But Will Get Down to Real Business To-morrow.

NEW YORK, March 7.—It became known that an injury sustained by Frank Moran when ice-boating near Saratoga may postpone for a day or two his work-out programme at Dal Hawins, in preparation for his bout with Jess Willard on the 25th.

"Frank was thrown off his ice boat while trying to take a turn at a 90-mile per hour clip on Saratoga Lake," said Ike Dorgan, Moran's manager. "He shot along about thirty feet on the ice, and the friction seemed to have scorched his left leg slightly.

"Frank had figured on beginning his workouts to-day, but he won't get down to real business until to-morrow or Wednesday. He'll spend the afternoon doing a little gymnasium work and selecting his sparring partners. By Wednesday, at the latest, his leg ought to be all right. He may try out the leg during the afternoon in a two-round bout with one of the fellows out at Dal's place."

How They Work.

Frank Moran has followed the lead of Jess Willard in charging 25 cents to see the training stunts. It was not the need of the coin that decided Moran. Oh no! It was to keep the big crowd away so as not to interfere with the Pittsburgher's training.

Both the champion and the near champion were out on the road to-day.

Frank hiked a few miles over the country roads in the Bronx.

After their hikes both fighters had a good rubdown and then went through their gymnasium "bill of fare."

Boxers Added.

With the addition of more boxing partners, Willard gave this part of the training wide latitude to-day. Moran also added boxing to his training variation. The blonde fighter is down to weight, his stay at Saratoga Lake has hardened him and now he is out for speed. The first boxing was scheduled for this afternoon. It will be a daily feature in the Moran camp from now on.

"Matty" Displays Return to Form

MARLIN, Texas, March 7.—With the most perfect day for practice that the Giants probably ever had in Marlin John McGray put his players through their first day of training with his customary energy. The thermometer registered 80 degrees during the morning period and, inspired by the favourable conditions, the boys needed no urging to warm up to their work.

The sensation of the opening day of the training season was Christy Mathewson's promising showing. The veteran pitcher, whose noted arm failed him last season, came back with the most surprising transformation of form. Mathewson used plenty of speed and even pitched a few curves and also several of his fadeaways.

Morning and afternoon periods of routine practice were taken, and while most of the players "saved" their throwing arms there were several who showed they had done preparatory work before reporting. Kelly, Hunter, Babbington, Kocher, Sandberg, Cole and Jacobson were in the best form. The only player absent from practice was Sherman, who is troubled with a sore foot.

In infield practice the positions were filled as follows:—Hunter and Kelly at first base; Babbington, second base; Martin, short stop; Schepner, third base. This will doubtless be the infield that McGraw will present against the Dallas club in Dallas next Saturday and Sunday, although Doyle has requested McGraw to allow him to play in the games.

"Jim" Thorpe, who has always batted right handed, turned around Monday and batted left handed. McGray, in his effort to develop the Indian into a successful batter, advised the shift.

Howard Baker, the third baseman, who was to have reported for spring practice with the Giants at Marlin, has notified the New York club that he has retired from baseball and will go into business at Bridgeport, Conn.

CONSOLATION IN VICE SKIPS BONSPIEL HAS REACHED THE FINALS

Percy Fitzgerald and E. L. Bowes are the Consolation survivors in the vice-skips' bonspiel and will play off some night this week. Observe the "committee's" representatives bringing home the bacon. The semi-finals were played yesterday afternoon when E. G. Patterson, skipping for Geo. Boucher lost to Percy Fitzgerald, and Andy Webb skipping for Bowes defeated R. J. Soden by 12 to 11. A numerous gallery watched both games and showed their appreciation of the play, especially in the Webb-Soden affair on No. 3 ice.

Two Millbrook rinks are here this afternoon for a game and will see "The Birth of a Nation" to-night.

Five Toronto "Vics" rinks will be here to-night.

Whatever your opinion may be of the "committee," that is the most recent one, and you can't hold anything serious against them and you can't ignore them. They're here and there, an ultra-hickers' club at times, and at others the essence of harmony and lubrication. While there are faint suspicions circling about this committee the fact remains that they certainly can curl, judging by the 22 4 score they put over an "all-comers'" rink last night. They lined up thusly:

Committee	All Comers.
W. G. Read	L. A. Turner
A. W. Archibald	J. Metheral
H. R. Martin	J. J. Moore
Alex. Kay	J. H. Ferguson
Skip 22	Skip 4

Certainly the committee has filled in many dull spots and the vice-skips' bonspiel has been a real feature of the season.

EXPECT NINETY GAMES TO WIN THE AMERICAN PENNANT

DETROIT, March 7.—Manager Jennings of the Tigers, expects to win the 1916 american league pennant. He is going to stand pat on his 1915 line-up, which grabbed an even hundred victories for him, but succeeded in furnishing only second best. This line-up, he believes, will be stronger than it was a year ago.

The team that wins 90 games this year, Jennings says, will win the pennant. On the eve of his team's departure for Texarkatchie, Texas, the new training headquarters, Jennings let the Detroit fans in on some of his plans for the year. Most important of his announcement was the statement that he would again rely on his veterans.

Local baseball critics believe that the Tiger attack will be stronger this year than last, when it was one of the finest in baseball. Old Sam Crawford has only an average of .289 to beat, and he has had a great winter. Sam recently declared he would be only ten pounds overweight when he reports at Texarkatchie.

Cobb also had a good winter, and expects to repeat all his 1915 stuff and put over some new ones as well. Veach, who came into his own only last year, is expected to take place with the stars of the as a result of his work this season. These three men will plug up the outfield so tight that no rookie will have a ghost of a chance to break in, Jennings believes.

Veterans in Again.

Burns, Young, Bush and Vitt are all slated for another season as cogs of the infield machine. Last year Burns held down the first base job under the handicap of a then recent operation for appendicitis. He will start this season with that operation a year old, and is hoping to regain all his old speed.

From Young at second and Dennis Bush at short, Jennings doesn't ask anything more than these men showed last year, unless it is a little heavier stick work. Oscar Vitt, the third sacker, who flashed into stardom in 1914, has put on ten pounds, a valuable lot for him, and expects to make a big season.

Marty Kavanaugh, best pinch-hitter in the league last year, and Harry Heilman, 1915 sensation on the Pacific coast, will be the headliners in the infield reserve crew.

The catching staff will again have Oscar Stanage as the anchor man, with Moriarty and Baker as aides. There is a possibility too, that Archie Yelle, a recruit, will make the grade this year. He is brought back for a second trial after a summer of seasoning at Ottawa, where he helped win a pennant. If worst comes to worst, the veteran Billy Sullivan, best in the league in his younger days with the White Sox, may don the mask and wristpad. He caught an even hundred games for Minneapolis last year, showing as good form as any backstopper in the association.

Incidentally, the Tigers are relying a lot upon Sullivan this year. Billy has a reputation as being a wonder at developing pitchers, in fact, that's why President Navin gave him a contract.

The Pitching Staff.

The pitching staff is the Tigers' one big worry. Jennings says he could rely on Coveleskie and Dauss for consistent work, if he could develope a pace-maker to work with them. He doesn't know so much about Bill James, ex-member of the St. Louis Browns, who was purchased for $15,000 during the latter part of last season, but he will be given every chance to make good for the Tigers.

Oldham and Boland are yearlings who have much to learn. Jennings relied on these five men to carry him through last year and they failed him. They will be given another chance this year, but probably will have help.

Hopes for an improved hurling corps are pinned on Boehler, Laudermilk, Cunningham, Erickson, McTigue, Fagan, Smithson and Marshall all youngsters.

Boehler and Laudermilk are credited with having as much stuff as any pitcher in baseball and both are blessed with unusual speed. But Sullivan must teach them control or they will be worthless. Cunningham comes from Chattanooga, where he was one of the best in the Southern league; Erickson is a right-hander from Rochester, and McTigue a southpaw from Toronto. Fagan, who comes frm Oklahoma City, didn't lose a game last year. Smithson and Marshall are recruits from the South.

A few other rookies will be taken to Texarkatchie including brother of Fritz Maisel, but none of them is expected to break into the regular line-up this season.

KAISER'S ELATION TOO SOON.

PARIS, March 7—The Kaiser, telegraphing to Princess Elizabeth of Saxony, says: "With the help of God we have advanced. The Brandenburg troops took the powerful stronghold of Douaumont. Thus we have broken through the defence works which the allies thought impregnable. May God still further help our heroes. He is with us."

The Delights of An Evening With The "Birth of a Nation"

Fastidious Indeed Would the Creature Be Who Would Not Revel in the Superb Pictures and Entrancing Music of the "Birth of a Nation"

There is no place on earth that a soldier-lover would rather take his trusting sweetheart than to the unfolding of the struggles of a democracy to live up to its highest ideals. As they sit side by side and see the realistic encounters between the soldiers of the North and the South, the mind of the soldier wanders off to the scenes that may be enacted sometime later "Somewhere in France," while the palpitating heart of the maiden, as she hears the roar of the cannons, wells up in worship when she considers how brave her soldier boy must be.

To the lover of good pictures there is the satisfaction of knowing that they are the best yet; while the music is of a particularly high quality, so good, in fact, that it must be heard again.

To-morrow should see a vast crowd at the Grand as this will be its last appearance.

WHAT MANY CHILDREN LACK

A sad sight, indeed, it is to see so many children on our streets weak, peevish, delicate and ailing, with spindling little legs and arms and often so cross that parents can do nothing with them, all because they lack vitality. Our local druggists, McDermid & Jury, and E. L. Payne; ask the parents of every such child to try Vinol, their non-secret cod liver and iron remedy, to overcome such conditions. It contains no oil or grease, and is so delicious children love to take it.

WHAT IT FEELS LIKE BEING UNDER FIRE

What are the sensations of being under fire aboard a battleship?

This question is answered from first hand experience by Mr. Norman Wilkinson, R.I., the well known artist, in a recently published book.

Mr. Wilkinson was for some time an A. P. (assistant paymaster) in the cruiser Theseus, off Gallipoli and elsewhere. One day the Turks started to shell the ship.

"My own feelings were a strange mixture of a desire to get under some really effective cover and a wish to see the fall of our own shot on the enemy's position," he writes. But it is a very difficult matter to get men who have never been under fire to take cover adequately.

"The human being is a curious animal when he wants to see what is happening, and as a rule, it was not until a ship had been badly hit and men killed or wounded that the necessity to take cover seemed to be taken to heart."

On one occasion a Turkish shell burst so that a number of splinters fell aboard the ship, "scattering groups of men who were watching events, without injuring any of them.

"Their hurried flight caused much hilarity amongst the gun layers and others already in cover, but any sense of fear among those so dispersed rapidly gave place to a desire to collect souvenirs in the shape of shell splinters."

The supply of these "souvenirs" was not sufficient to go round, and therefore one or two ingenious belated searchers raided the blacksmith's forge, which every warship carries. From there collections of "likely looking" fragments were made, some of them being given away, others sold to guileless shipmates.

"These," remarks Mr. Wilkinson, "are now probably looked upon in sundry homes as the 'bit o' shell that nearly wiped out poor 'Bill.'" To the Turks, as adversaries, the artist-author pays a high tribute.

"No nation could possibly have conducted warfare in a more above-board and clean handed manner than the Turks. The fact that such qualities could be attributed to the Turk was a surprise to me, though naval officers generally have long regarded him as the gentleman of the Mediterranean." This is further borne out by his refusal to use poisonous gas when attacking.

"On the afternoon of the landing the Turks sent in an emissary to say that the Red Cross stations would be respected provided no stores were landed in the vicinity. In another case a surgeon told me that the enemy had actually sent to apologise to him for the accidental shooting of one of his stretcher bearers."

Prompt Action on Part of President Is Looked For

Prepared To-day to Proceed With Diplomatic Negotiations Over the Submarine Warfare

WASHINGTON, March 8.— President Wilson with hands unleashed by Congress, was prepared to-day to proceed with diplomatic negotiations over the submarine warfare.

Prompt action in the controversies with both England and Germany was forecasted. While seeking more definite assurance from Germany that her new Admiralty campaign against armed merchantmen will carry out pledges in the Lusitania and Arabic notes, the administration will investigate England's alleged secret orders to merchantmen to attack submarines.

German evidence on the latter point, arriving Monday, has been translated.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

Tax On Paid Admissions To Places of Amusement Announced By Government

Provincial Treasurer May Raise $700,000 by the New Levies---A Tax of From One to Twenty-five Cents

TORONTO, March 8.—A tax of from 1 to 25 cents on paid admissions to places of amusement was the most interesting announcement made by Hon. T. W. McGarry, in his Budget speech in the Legislature. The levy will be made at the entrances of all theatres, moving picture shows, ball games and all places of entertainment, excepting only church, charity and patriotic performances. Throughout the past year the Provincial Treasurer has made a careful study of the revenue that may be derived from this source. It is estimated that about 35,000,000 entrances to places of amusement are purchased in the Province in the course of a year, and that a tax of one cent will yield between $300,000 and $400,000.

The one cent tax will apply to "movies" and other less costly shows to which the multitude resorts. The levy upon admission to high-class performances in Massey Hall and the leading theatres will probably run about five cents per head, though Mr. McGarry is taking power to make it 25 cents. Altogether the Treasury should realize from $500,000 to $700,000 from this amusement tax. The method of collection is simple. Every one who buys a ticket of admission will have to purchase a second ticket covering the amount of the tax and deposit it in an appointed place. The onus of collection is placed upon the proprietors.

In its recent report the Ontario Commission on Unemployment suggested a tax on amusements to secure a fund for certain social work. Though the revenue from Mr. McGarry's impost is not ear-marked for this purpose, some of it will be devoted to the up-keep of the extended Labour branch of the Government, shortly to come into being in accordance with the recommendation of the Unemployment Commission.

A TAX ON VISITING ARTISTS.

The Provincial Treasurer is also considering, and may later impose, a tax on highly paid artists and theatrical companies giving performances in Ontario. While such artists and companies bring cultural benefits to the community, they also take away with them large sums of money contributed by the wealthier classes. Circuses are already heavily taxed on this principle.

Race meets now pay the Ontario Treasury $500 a day. This tax is raised to $1,000 to $1,250 a day.

The war tax of one mill on the dollar, which was imposed last year, through the agency of the municipalities, and which yielded about $2,000,000, is to continue in force. Mr. McGarry gave as his reason for not introducing a Provincial income tax the fact that the municipalities have the right to tax incomes and in some places already exercise that right "to the limit."

PROHIBITION WILL BRING NEW TAX.

Another of the Minister's statements that will attract widespread attention is that regarding the revenue from liquor licenses. Lastt year these licenses yielded the Provincial Treasury $862,000. The income from this source dropped this year to $800,000, and is estimated at $600,000 for the coming fiscal year. If all licenses are abolished under the coming referendum the $800,000 will have to be found elsewhere, but, as Mr. McGarry has said, the people will no doubt be willing to take on another tax.

The insurance companies, which were fighting the Provincial tax a year ago, have laid up two years' taxes in full. In this connection Mr. McGarry announces that there will be no change in the taxation upon insurance companies while the war continues, but after the return of peace he will hear what the companies have to plead regarding any alleged inequalities in the impost.

A Most Extraordinary Cure of Epileptic Fits

Mother Had Appealed to Three Doctors in Vain—Cured Four Months Ago By Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

This letter from Mrs. Noxel is endorsed by Mrs. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., as being true and correct. While it reports a most remarkable cure of epileptic fits by use of Dr Chase's Nerve Food, it only goes to corroborate similar cures reported by others.

Mrs. Hamilton M. Noxel, R.R. No. 1, Humberstone, Ont., writes: "I cannot help writing to you, as I want you to know what a blessing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills have been to my boy. He was taken with very violent fits, would twitch all over, his eyes would turn towards his nose, his jaws set and his lips turn almost purple. He would clench his fists tightly, become unconscious and then go into along sleep. After several hours he would wake up sighing and so weak he could not stand. I was afraid he would die and took him to the doctor, who pronounced his case epilepsy. As his medicine was not effective and the fits continued, I took him to another doctor at Fonthill, but his medicine seemed to make him worse.

"As the boy's nerves were in such a state he could not sit down or lie down, and the fits continued, I took him to a third doctor, who said that he would not undertake to cure epilepsy, as no doctor could cure it. That night I went home very much discouraged, and when I took my dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I gave my boy a dose, and that was the first night in weeks that he slept well. I kept on giving him the Nerve Food three times a day and occasionally a Kidney-Liver Pill to keep the kidneys and bowels active. I can, with a clear conscience, say that he has not had even one fit since beginning his treatment. I give him no other medicine. He looks and feels well, and as there have been no returns of the old trouble for four months, I believe he has been cured. I can never cease to be grateful to the manufacturers of these medicines, for I am sure I would have lost my boy if it had not been for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Mr. H. J. Mahaffy, druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., writes: "This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. Henrietta M. Noxel, and believe that the statement she has made in regard to Dr Chase's Nerve Food is true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

"JEALOUSY CAUSED ROW.

Welfare Worker Says Split Salary Charge Came from Envy.

CHICAGO, March 8—Jealousy was the cause of the split salary charge made by Mrs. Page Waller Eaton against her superior, Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe, head of the Social Welfare Bureau of Chicago, according to Mrs. Rowe's testimony before the civil service commission.

"Mrs. Eaton is jealous of me and of the good work done by the department," Mrs. Rowe testified. "She wanted my job in the first place. She flattered me and was overgracious."

An attempt by attorneys for Mrs. Eaton to learn whether Mrs. Rowe plays poker, in order to show what she meant when she told reporters "I'll stand pat," was frustrated by the objection of attorneys for Mrs. Rowe.

"CASCARETS" FOR A COLD, BAD BREATH OR SICK HEADACHE

Best For Liver and Bowels, For Biliousness, Sour Stomach and Constipation

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Colds, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing, and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a ten-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver, and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

THE NEWEST REMEDY FOR Backache, Rheumatism and Dropsy.

Kidney, Bladder and Uric Acid troubles bring misery to many. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, dizziness and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and loins, distressing bladder disorders and sometimes obstinate dropsy. The uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints, it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout or sciatica. This is the time to try "Anuric." Send 10c. for trial package.

During digestion uric acid is absorbed into the system from meat eaten, and even from some vegetables. The poor kidneys get tired and backache begins. This is a good time to take "Anuric," the new discovery of Dr. Pierce for Kidney trouble and Backache. Neglected kidney trouble is responsible for many deaths, and Insurance Company examining doctors always test the water of an applicant before a policy will be issued. Have you ever set aside a bottle of water for twenty-four hours? A heavy sediment or settling sometimes indicates kidney trouble. The true nature and character of diseases, especially those of the kidneys and urinary organs, can often be determined by a careful chemical analysis and microscopical examination—this is done by expert chemists of the Medical Staff of the Invalids' Hotel. If you wish to know your condition send a sample of your water to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and describe your symptoms. It will be examined without any expense to you, and Doctor Pierce or his Staff of Assisting Physicians will inform you truthfully.

OUR SERIAL STORY

BY LOUIS TRACY

"Dieu merci! You can talk, then?" said Mere Pitou tartly. "Were they coming to Point Aven? Are they known here?"

"No. Their name is Carmac. They have never been here, I believe. They are making for Lorient; but their yacht broke down and drove on the reef. Had it not been for Peridot we could not have saved a soul on board."

"Oh, he's a good sailor—I'll say that for him. His poor old mother was there on the quay screeching like an owl. She lost her man at sea, you know. I hate the sea. I'll skin Barbe if she ever so much as looks at a fisherman. Do you here that, Madeleine?"

"Wait till I catch one at it! He'll find a shark in his nets that day. Hurry now, you, and help Barbe to get those baths ready! I filled the kettle before I came out, and lifted the wheat off, and as I shoved in the damper of the oven the fowls shouldn't have taken much harm."

"Perdot will surely come soon," Madeleine ventured to say.

Mere Pitou, having made sufficient concession to her guests' feelings by [illegible] of the cuisine, was moved to withering sarcasm.

"Why do you think that matters to me?" she cried.

Madeline was silenced; so Madame answered her own question.

"No man with eyes like a tomcat could ever turn my head'" she snorted.

For once her gift of biting repartee served a good purpose. It effectually distracted attention from Ingersoll's half-demented state, while father and daughter were given a breathing space before plunging into an explanation that might affect the future in such wise that the stream of life would never again flow on the placid course it had followed during many happy and uneventful years.

Within the cottage, too, Mere Pitou's bustling ways interposed a further barrier. She drove the artist to his room, set Madeleine to help Yvonne undress, "and rub her till she's as red as a boiled lobster," prepared two steaming glasses of mulled wine, scolded each unwilling patient until the decoction was taken, and wanted to massage Ingersoll; an attention that he avoided only by declaring positively that he would not indulge in a hot bath at all unless she cleared out.

Luckily a wetting from salt water is seldom harmful if accompanied by exercise, and Ingersoll had never been really chilled; while Yvonne had not only kept comparatively dry, but had been shielded from the wind during the homeward voyage. When the two met in the studio, a large room that Ingersoll had built on the north side of the house, the frenzy and tumult of a tremendous discovery had died down, and each was ready to make due allowance for the other's suffering.

Yvonne wore her Breton dress, and her father had discarded his artist's clothes for a suit of blue serge. Seldom, perhaps not twice in a year, did he appear in evening dress. He shunned society, and disliked its livery. For that reason he had removed from the Hotel Julia soonafter arriving at Pont Aven with Yvonne, then an engaging mite hardly a year old. Ostensibly he wanted a spacious studio; in reality he sought seclusion.

As for Yvonne, she did not even possess a dinner gown; though she and her father were often welcome guests at the houses of the small artistic coterie that makes the village its abiding place. But pictures, not fashion plates, ruled the roost therein, and no grand dame whom chance brought to those friendly gatherings could plume herself that her "Paris model" frock eclipsed the quaint charm of Yvonne's peasant costume.

The girl had grown quite accustomed to the demand invariably put forward by Ingersoll before accepting an invitation that he should be told the names of any strangers who would be present. If she gave a passing thought to the matter, she fancied that her father had early in life quarreled with his relatives, and wished to avoid a haphazard meeting with certain members of his family. Singularly enough, Tollemache, her greatest friend among the men of Pont Aven, did not conceal the fact that he too was at loggerheads with his own people. Only that day had he been on the verge of some explanation of this unfortunate state of affairs. How little did she dream then that the carefully hidden secret which led her own father to bury his talents in a Brittany fishing village soon after she was born would be dragged into light before the sun went down!

When she entered the studio she found her father seated in a roomy wickerwork chair, and gazing disconsolately into the flames of a roaring log fire. He had aged within the hour; his already slight figure seemed to have shrunk; he did not even turn his head when the door opened.

Her heart went out to him in a wave of tenderness. She dropped on her knees by his side and put her arms round his neck.

"Dad dear," she murmured, "don't dwell on our troubles to-night, great as they are. Let us rather be thankful that we were able to render some service to our fellow creatures, and that our own lives were preserved in a time of real danger. God works in His own wonderful way, doesn't He, Dear? It was His will that we should have gone to Le Pouldu to-day. It was surely by providential contriving that we should happen to be near the reef when the Stella struck. Something more than idle chance brought us there."

"Yes," he said, gazing into her eyes with the sorrow-laden expression of a man who sees naught but misery before him. "It was not chance, Yvonne, but the operation of a law as certain as death. The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generations. I had almost forgotten that your mother lived. After eighteen years she was dead to me. So far as you are concerned she might as well have died in giving you birth. Then her memory would have been a blessing rather than a curse."

"Hush, Dear! She may be dying even now. No, no, Darling, you shall not say it!" and her soft lips stifled the terrible wish that his anguish might have voiced.

For a little while neither could speak. Yvonne's head bent over her father's knees, and he knew that she was crying. With a supreme effort he strove to lessen the tension.

"Come, come, Sweetheart!" he said, stroking the mass of brown hair beneath the lace coif. "You and I must face this difficulty together, or goodness only knows what may be the outcome! Tell me now, if you are able, how you learned that Mrs. Carmac was your mother."

"Oh, Dad, she recognized me at once!" sobbed the girl. "Poor thing, the warmth of the blankets and a teaspoonful of brandy I forced between her lips brought her round slowly."

"When?"

"After we crossed the bar."

"I feared as much," groaned Ingersoll.

Even in her distress Yvonne had the tact to avoid the thorny bypath opened up by her father's involuntary cry. "She sighed deeply a few times," she went on hurriedly, "and I could tell by her colour that she was about to revive. At last she opened her eyes, and looked at me in a dazed way.

"'Yvonne!' she whispered.

"I was so overjoyed to find that she was not actually at the point of death that I felt no surprise. 'Yes, Dear,' I said 'you are with friends, and that horrid wreck is a thing of the past.'

"But she continued to gaze at me as if I were a ghost. 'Yvonne Ingersoll!' she said again.

"Then it struck me as really remarkable that she should know my name. But I only asked her to drink a little more of the brandy and rest until we reached Pont Aven.

"'Rest!' she said in quite a clear voice. 'Why should I rest when Heaven snatches me from a dreadful death and permits me to see my own daughter after eighteen years? Or is this some other world? Why am I here? Where have you come from?'

"For the moment I was sure her mind was unbalanced, and thought it best to calm her by answering truthfully. 'My mother is dead Dear,' I said; 'but you and I are living. You hardly realize now that your yacht was wrecked on a reef near the mainland. By the mercy of Providence my father's boat was close at hand, and we rescued you.'

Was Troubled With BOILS ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Real Man

By MARTHA GOBB SANFORD.

Polly was to take part in an amateur play.

"It's such fun," she announced on the evening of the first rehearsal, "to act with real men! At school, you know—well, at school we didn't have any real men."

The "real men" laughed. There were three of them. Two were old friends and admirers of Polly. The third, Bradley Rogers, she approved the moment he was introduced to her.

"Well," asked Polly gayly, looking over the printed cast in her hand, "which of you is my lover?"

Solemnly, with hands on their hearts, all three bowed.

"You are all very silly," said Polly, blushing. "Now, please be serious. Which of you is to be 'Captain Wheeler, Claire's lover, absent on the field?'" she continued, reading from the play.

"I am cast for that unfortunate part," Bert Crawford answered.

"Unfortunate," Bert hastened to explain, "because 'absent on the field' for two whole acts, you notice, gives those other fellows too much chance to cut me out."

"Oh," smiled Polly graciously, "then Mr. Marshall and Mr. Rogers are rivals for my hand, too—Claire's hand, I mean."

"No; haven't the pleasure," sighed Jim Marshall. "I'm only your brother."

"Never mind, Jim," said Polly comfortingly. "I'll be a real sweet sister to you. And what are you, Mr. Rogers?"

"Your father," answered Rogers laconically.

Polly found the admission exceedingly amusing.

"But what possible chance do my father and brother have of cutting you out?" she asked Bert suddenly.

"Oh," explained Bert carelessly, "I meant they'll cut me out with the audience. No chance to win any bouquets and that sort of thing."

"But you'll win me. I mean—what's her name?—Claire."

"Oh, I'll come out strong in the finish," Bert returned confidently, at which Jim shot him a look that escaped Polly's notice. It did not escape Rogers' observation, however, and he smiled at the thought of the fun to come behind the scenes.

"Who's to be my 'girl chum, Natalie?" asked Polly, again consulting the printed cast.

"Mrs. Rogers," Bert answered. "And she'll be dandy in that part too. Where is she tonight, Brad?"

"Couldn't come. The baby had the croup or something or other."

Polly wheeled around suddenly on the piano stool and faced Rogers.

"Do you mean to say," she asked accusingly, "that you don't know what's the matter with the baby?"

Rogers, taken by surprise, looked very much embarrassed.

He began to stammer an explanation, but got no further than "Well, you see, Miss Noyes," when the "prompter" arrived and the reading over of parts and the studying out of stage business began in earnest.

As the rehearsals of the play progressed Polly found them absorbing beyond all her expectations. As it happened, Mrs. Rogers, owing to the baby's illness, had not been able to take the part of Natalie after all, and Elsie Williams, Polly's intimate girl friend, was prevailed upon to try it.

This change in the cast, simple as it seemed, was the cause of other changes far less simple.

For one thing, Bert Crawford, whom Polly had grown through force of habit to regard as one of her most effective satellites, suddenly wavered from his accustomed course and began to revolve at a very dangerous speed around Polly's friend Elsie.

Now, Polly ought not to have resented this, for she knew very well in her heart that she never intended Bert to develop, so far as she was concerned, into anything beyond an obsequious and ornamental attendant. However, since he was her lover in the play, it piqued her not a little to have him constantly missing his cue while making love to Elsie behind the scenes instead.

On one of these embarrassing occasions Jim Marshal came to the rescue with what seemed to him nothing sort of an inspiration.

"See here, Polly," he exclaimed jovially as Polly, alone in the center of the stage, impatiently waited the dramatic entry of Captain Wheeler after his "absence in the field," "I've got a simply corking idea. Bert and I will change parts. You see, off the stage he's Elsie's lover, and on the stage he's your's. Now, why not fix it as it really is and let me be your lover on the stage as well as off? Don't you think that would work out well? I'd be on hand for this scene, you can bet your life!"

But Polly received his suggestion with anything but enthusiasm.

"Don't be foolish, Jim, and please hunt Captain Wheeler," was all she answered.

Accordingly Bert, alias the missing captain, soon rushed in, and Polly ran to meet him, "falling into his arms with a cry of joy," as the stage directions called for.

"Oh, that will never do at all," complained the prompter. "You don't act as though you were really glad to see him, Miss Noyes. And you don't stay long enough in his arms. You just jump away as if you'd been shot."

Polly made up a comical little face and tried the scene over again.

"No," sighed the prompter. "That wasn't any better. Now, after you've rushed into Captain Wheeler's arms, Miss Noyes, just stay until you're comfortable."

There was a general laugh at this, and then Jim Marshall came forward, as usual, with an original suggestion.

"I don't believe it's all Polly's fault."

he said. "Just let me try the scene with her, and then Bert can see how it ought to be done."

But Polly scorned the offer.

"I'll try it with Mr. Rogers," she said archly. "You see, he's perfectly safe."

The shout that went up at Bradley's expense did not daunt him.

"Everything comes to him who—is modest," he paraphrased good naturedly.

So Polly tried the affectionate welcome home scene with Bradley—and a strange thing happened. In each of the many times she had rushed into Bert Crawford's arms she had felt embarrassed and conscious. Her one impulse was to tear herself away again. But when Bradley's arms closed about her she felt a strange thrill of happiness, and as she looked up into his face their glances met in the discovery of an unguessed secret.

"There," exclaimed the delighted prompter, "that's something like! Now try it again with Mr. Crawford, Miss Noyes."

But Polly wouldn't.

"I'm tired of the old scene," she said laughingly, determined that no one should guess how madly her heart was beating. "I'll do it all right the night of the performance truly. Now, come on, Mr. Rogers; you're my father again now, you know, and I've got to tease you into letting me marry Captain Wheeler. I'm going to be most irresistibly persuasive tonight—to make up for my failure in the last act," she added gayly.

And she was irresistible. Twice Rogers forgot his cue, so fascinated was he in watching her.

At length came a waiting space, and Polly and Rogers found themselves alone in the music room.

"What did you mean, Miss Noyes," inquired Bradley half jokingly, half seriously, "by saying I was 'perfectly safe?'"

"Why, that you're married, of course."

"Well?" queried Polly, doubting her senses.

"'All the world' has evidently become a stage with you, Miss Noyes," he answered, smiling at her amusedly. "Of course as your father in the play I am married, but as your—as Bradley Rogers I'm a single man, on honor."

"Then who are Mrs. Rogers and the baby?" demanded Polly, not yet convinced.

"My sister-in-law and child," Bradley announced. "Surely you didn't think"—

"But I did," broke in Polly. "I thought so all along from the night of the very first rehearsal. If I'd known"— She broke off suddenly in confusion.

"If you'd known?" repeated Bradley, looking straight into her eyes.

They heard the prompter calling them.

"Goodness," exclaimed Polly, "we're missing our cue. Come on, daddy," she added mischievously.

Polly entered with a flourish, turned toward Bradley, who followed with his hastily assumed old man manner, and held out her arms to him appealingly.

"You will let me marry the man I love, won't you, daddy? Do say yes," she pleaded.

"You dear!" she half sighed, half whispered.

The prompter and the rest of the cast applauded, unaware of the real love scene going on behind the curtain.

Thin Men and Women Can Put on Flesh by Getting 100% Efficiency from Their Food

Failure to absorb Flesh Making Materials in Daily Meals Keeps Weight Down. How to Make the Food Work and Stick.

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It seems all book to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Most thin people stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a pound "and stay there" pound. A great part of the fat-producing elements of their food just stay there in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. Whereas such people seemingly need is something that will so act upon these fatty food elements that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which was designed to aid in supplying the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This thought-to treatment is called Sargol and it aims through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight, the cheeks fill out, hollows about neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every large package.

Why not make the test. First weigh yourself. Then take Sargol—just one tablet at every meal and before you go to bed—for two weeks—then weigh again and note the difference. Let the scales tell the story.

The tablets are small, easily swallowed, produce no disagreeable effects, contain no habit drugs, and are not at all expensive as compared with benefits obtained.

BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhoea.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, when it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestine will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

BRITISH LEADER'S RISE

Merit is Recognized Despite Wrong Tradition to the Contrary

While the British army before the war had the reputation for being officered by aristocrats, this was not then entirely so and it becomes still less of a true statement every day. Indeed many of the Generals were once privates and worked their way up by sheer ability. There is, for instance, Brigadier-General J. T. R. Wilson, who went to the Dardanelles as Colonel of the Fifth Battalion of the Royal Scots, won his Distinguished Service Order "for initiative and fine powers of leadership," and was promoted to the command of a brigade. Twenty-one years previously he joined the High Constables' Company of the Queen's Edinburgh Rifles as a private and rose steadily until he commanded it.

STOICAL TOMMY

How Some Soldiers Bear up in Spite of Terrible Wounds

Perhaps Mr. Atkins is the greatest of all, the full and perfect hero, when tragedy comes. "Give my love to Patrick Street, Waterford," says an Irishman. "It's there the best girl on earth lives; and tell Ireland we are doing our duty."

"It's not much to look forward to," mutters the Englishman, after one of his legs had been amputated, "but my mother will be proud of me!"

"Is there anything I can do for you, old chap?" a Grenadier asked a cavalryman, who lay stricken unto death. "Yes," he answered, "you might light my fag for me. You will find matches and all in my inside pocket."

"What gets over me," said a soldier who had been shot in the feet, "is how it ain't done more damage to my boot."

How John Ruskin's heart would have warmed to the Lancashire Fusilier who, with two ghastly wounds in his breast, was calmly reading "The Crown of Wild Olive."

A man of adventurous spirit had several "close shaves," and at last was shot clean through the body. His comrades ran to him, raised him up, and wanted to go back, but he answered, "No; let me be; the beggars have done me this time. Get these chaps away, because they will be good for something again," he added about two other wounded men. "As for me, hoist me up quick; give me my rifle, and I'll give them Boches another round." So he did, and so he died, and a more heroic death it would be hard to match.—The London Fortnightly Review.

London's Colossal Exhibition

What will probably be the greatest Trade Exhibition ever held is the British Empire Fair, now being organized for 1917. The building is to be erected at Willesden Green, London N., will cover an area of 610,000 square feet—three and a half times the size of Olympia—and will cost a million dollars. Something like 3,000 exhibitors, representing seventy distinct trades will be represented.

For Rough, Wrinkled, Freckled, Pimpled Skin

As March winds, flying dust and dirt are apt to injure any complexion, this information will be of special value right now. If you have any cutaneous blemish, don't use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, moth patches, sallowness, red or yellow blotches or any surface eruption. The affected cuticle is absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple, harmless treatment, report astonishing results.

If bothered with wrinkles or furrows, a wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel will prove wonderfully effective.

Many Tons of Prisoners' Mail

GERMANS HINDERED IN HANDLING IT BY FAULTY ADDRESSES

About 12,000,000 letters and postal cards a month are being handled in Germany for prisoners of war, according to a bulletin of the American Association of Commerce and Trade, Berlin, that has been received recently.

The bulletin states that there are more than 150 camps for these prisoners in Germany, each accommodating on the average, 10,000 men. These prisoners are given certain privileges in regard to the use of the mails, such privileges corresponding to those granted to German soldiers held as prisoners of war by the other belligerents.

The difficulties that arise in handling quantities of mail matter addressed to the prisoners of war in Germany are not due only to the amount of it, but to the fact that this matter, coming from almost all quarters of the globe usually bears addresses in foreign languages. These addresses often are misspelled and badly written.

"Owing to the fact that during wartime direct communication between belligerent countries is eliminated," the bulletin goes on, "the mail for prisoners of war in Germany is forwarded by the postal departments of the neutral ones. In the case of prisoners of war in Germany the mail from France, French colonies and territories, and from Serbia and Montenegro is forwarded by the postal department of Switzerland. The mail from Great Britain, her dominions and her territories is forwarded by the Dutch government, while Sweden attends to the mail from Russia. The same postal departments forward the mail in the opposite direction—that is, the mail from prisoners of war in Germany to their respective countries.

"It goes without saying that every letter or other mail matter addressed to a prisoner of war in Germany, in order to reach its destination as quickly as possible should bear the name of the camp where the prisoner of war is detained. This primary rule, however, is often overlooked, and the volume of such mail matter bearing insufficient address is increased, furthermore by the fact that France does not issue nor publish any official casualty lists.

"What is the result of the latter fact, deplorable as it is? The French soldier, who has not been heard from by his family, either is assumed to be dead or taken prisoner or missing. His relatives eager to get word from him, and to relieve their anxiety, resort to the mails and address their son or brother as a prisoner of war in Germany. Such letters frequently bear even the number of a detention camp because the sender happens to know somebody in his home town who has a relative in this particular camp. He reasons that there is more than one camp in Germany where Englishmen or Frenchmen are held. The German postal department cannot know before hand that any such message is a dead letter in the truest sense of the word.

"On the other hand, the great number of detention camps in Germany forbids at the outset sending insufficiently addressed messages from one camp to the other until the right addressee has been found.

"In order to cope with the mail that cannot readily be delivered for lack of sufficient address or for some other reason the German postal department has established a central office in Berlin where such mail matter is sorted and corrected in regard to address, whence the mail is speedily directed to its proper address.

"A card index numbering 1,200,000 names has been installed at the above mentioned central office. These cards bear the names of 900,000 Russians and 300,000 French, Belgians and white and coloured British subjects. Each card contains the name of the detention camp or the hospital, as the case may be, the full name of the prisoner, his military charge, his troop, regiment, company and country. The cards are filled out in the camps by the prisoners of war of the respective countries.

"It is a curious fact that the mail from Russia is addressed more carefully than from any other of the belligerent countries, although some 5,000 letters per diem bear incomplete addresses. Postal cards form the majority of all mail matter received. Some 30,000 letters and postal cards are received daily at the central office in Berlin addressed in Russian. Some 12,000 parcels are received in Berlin from Russia every month."

The German postal records for December show that Russian prisoners of war sent and received 5,460,000 letters and postal cards in that month. The French and Belgian letters and cards for December totalled 700,000, while the white and coloured British prisoners of war received and sent about 1,200,000.

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives.'

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Prohibition Discussed By The Dominion Parliament

Earnest All-Day Debate for First Time on Practical Proposal, Sponsored by H. H. Stevens and Hon. Chas. Marcil—Majority of House Apparently Favourable

OTTAWA, March 7.—It looks as if Parliament will pass some strongly prohibitive measure at its present session. That seemed to be the feeling at midnight when the House rose after an all-day debate on the resolution of Mr. H. H. Stevens and Hon. Charles Marcil calling for the Dominion-wide total prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of all intoxicating beverages until the end of the war. The temper of the huge majority of the members was made manifest time and again. Backed by strong sentiment from all the Provinces, the Parliament benches—back benches and front benches—have the bit in their mough and appear to-night determined to carry through the proposal in its entirety.

The Cabinet, like the membership, is evidently divided. Sir George Foster frequently led the applause which time and again greeted the pleadings of Messrs. Stevens and Marcil in their telling speeches. Equally pronounced was the manner in which Hon T. W. Crothers, repeatedly encouraged and applauded Mr. W. G. Weichel, who stingingly attacked the proposal. But the vast majority of the membership on both sides left room for no doubt as to its position. The cheers which greeted advocacy of war-time prohibition overwhelmed the moderate applause which was accorded its opponent.

Parliament adjourned at midnight, on the understanding secured by Chief Liberal Whip Pardee that the debate should be resumed and brought to a vote on a day to be fixed, probably next Monday.

AN AMENDMENT PROBABLE

In the meantime, The Globe learns it is probable that Mr. R. B. Bennett will submit an amendment embodying the view of the majority of the Cabinet. This amendment, it is understood will have Government backing, and make a bid for support to those members who to-night seem strongly inclined to support the full text of the sweeping Stevens-Marcil measure. It will provide that where any Province has adopted prohibitional power and asks that it be supplemented by the Federal authority, the Dominion shall take such steps as are necessary to make that prohibition absolute. In other words, the Dominion will, in such case, prohibit the importation into and possibly the manufacture of liquor in the Province.

Its Support Problematical

Whether the Government will be able to muster sufficient support to carry this amendment, is to-night problematical. Nevertheless, although the issue is not a party one, party lines are tightly drawn, and the party whip is very effective. Considerable opposition was expressed during the day by men on both sides to the idea of avoiding the issue by referring it to the Provinces, on the ground that they would be handicapped in enforcement while the manufacture and importation was permitted, and objection will probably be taken to the proposed amendment on the ground that it will leave open the importation from Province to Province, and also possibly the whole question of manufacture.

WAR MEASURE.—VOTE LATER

Both Mr. Stevens and Hon. Mr. Marcil in submitting their proposals asked the enactment as a war measure. Hon. Mr. Marcil urged its passing for three years, contemplating the conclusion of the war and the early readjustment period immediately following. To meet the argument that the citizens at the front should be consulted, as to the project, both sponsors stated their readiness to include a proviso under which a vote must be taken at the end of the period specified to insure the permanence of the prohibitory enactment.

It was a feature of the debate that keenest earnestness, and in some cases acrimony, was indicated. For the first time Parliament is considering prohibition not as an academic theory, but as the practical solution of many problems.

There were few preliminaries. The resolution which was submitted by Mr. H. H. Stevens, Vancouver, and Hon. Charles Marcil, Bonaventure—thus having its sponsors from both sides of the House—called for the complete prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors during the war, on the ground of "materially aiding the conservation of the wealth and resources of the Dominion and the promotion of the efficiency of our nation at this time when the Empire is at war."

INFORMATION FRO MALLIANCE

Premier Borden rose to say that representatives of the Dominion Alliance had recently waited upon the Government and undertaken to furnish information as to the laws in the various Provinces, the number of licenses in existence and other important information. Some of this was being printed.

WIDER POWERS TO PROVINCES

Mr. Speaker Sevigny stated that Mr. J. J. Hughes, King's P.E.I., had submitted another resolution which it was desired to discuss in the same connection. This was a resolution to empower the Provincial Legislatures, should they so desire, to deal with the question of importation and manufacture as it affected their respective Provinces.

Premier Borden pointed out that it might be well to have the discussion of so general a character that both resolutions could be covered and members could determined as to their dealing with each.

ONE RESOLUTION SUBMITTED

Hon. Charles Marcil, seconder of the Dominion-wide prohibition resolution, protested against the Hughes resolution, leaving the matter to the Provinces, being considered at the same time "It is not possible to take the two resolutions together," said he. "The resolution now before the House must first be put by the Chair, and it must be understood that this resolution is the one under consideration."

Mr. Speaker Sevigny took the view that Hon. Mr. Marcil was right, and consequently submitted only the one resolution to the consideration of the House.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washings the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin out the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

PROSPEROUS RAILWAYS

The necessity of fair treatment for the railways is urged in an open letter just addressed to the railroad commissions by Dr. J. M. Head. The refusal of a commission to allow a railway a fair return for the work it accomplishes in moving the produce of the country is an act which tends to cripple the whole prosperity of the community, says the writer, and he speaks from the point of view of the man who actually pays the freight charge

The recent trial of the railroads of the state of Texas for the offense of wanting an increase in freight rates sufficient to permit them to live and prosper has been concluded after the very exhaustive taking of evidence pro and con; and the very verbose arguments of the prosecuting attorneys and those for the defense have all been made and put in the record," writes Dr. Head in this letter, which is published in the "Railway Age Gazette."

"I find one very important factor left out and not heard from, and that is the man who actually pays the freight. In the taking of evidence in this case, the commercial bodies from every large city in the state had so-called experts to represent them, and were perfectly willing for the roads to have an increase in rates, so long as it did not interfere with the business of their members or reduce their natural and unnatural territory by so doing. I say unnatural territory for the reason that every city in the country is trying to expand its trade territory and maintain competition at the expense of the roads. Every manufacturer, jobber and shipper of any consequence in the state had representatives to protest against an increase of rates on the stuff he made or handled, but was quite willing for you to grant the increase on everything else. By the time they were all heard and all protests were in there wasn't anything left except the products direct from the farm to grant an increase on, and I am glad to note that the Farmers' Union representatives had the good sense to petition you for the increase.

"Now, as a matter of fact, neither the farmer, stockman, wool grower, manufacturer, wholesaler, jobber, distributor nor retailer pays the freight; it is the ultimate consumer who pays every cent of cost there is in anything he uses. When I bought the suit of clothes I am wearing I paid the cost of production—including the wool grower, the cotton planter, the broker, the manufacturer, the jobber or wholesaler, the retail merchant who sold it to me, and the freight, and when we build a house we pay for every expense attached to it, and the freight on all the material used; and not the saw-mill man, the iron manufacturer or the local retailer who sold the material. We have to charge to the renter a sufficient rent to earn the proper interest on the investment, and it seems to me that I am the man to 'kick' on increased freight rates, if they are so burdensome.

"I figured out about what my freight bill was each year on everything my family and myself use, and it amounted to about eleven dollars a year, and to grant the railroads an increase of 10 per cent on present rates would not cost me over 50 cents a year, or the price of four good cigars or four bottles of beer, which the average man would buy for his friends and never think of. Nor would the solicitous politician who is trying to shield the dear public from the extortions of railroads and big corporations or alleged trusts. I take the position that I can far better afford to pay this increase of 10 per cent. or 15 per cent, with the attendant prosperity it would bring to the country, and the very great interest in my business and income, and I can pay the present rates under present conditions.

"It is my belief that if the railroads were in a prosperous condition we would have more business than ever before in the history of the country and it also occurs to me that as the above mentioned protestors would do so much more business, with the same overhead charges, they should welcome an increase in freight rates.

"I am perfectly willing for the rail roads to earn as much money on their investment as the banks of the country are doing. Why permit the banks to make from 20 to 40 per cent. a year on their capital invested and restrict the railroads to 6 or 8 per cent.—and then not let them earn that? The patrons of the banks are paying those earnings, just the same as the patrons of the railroads are.

"The public pays the earnings on all capital, whether invested in banks or trust companies, industrial corporations or mining; so why restrict the roads to starvation returns? They are certainly of far greater value to the country than the banks; they have more money invested, employ more people, and are the largest purchasers of material of any business in the world. They are more necessary to the very life of business than any other thing or agency, for they occupy the same relation to business and commerce as our arteries and veins do to our bodies—they carry out the life-sustaining forces from one part to the other; and who would think of trying to cut off the circulation from any part of his body or impair its circulation in any way? If anything got the matter with it, we would go to the best doctor we could find to have it remedied at any cost

"Just so much as you restrict the proper operation of the railroads, just so much as you interfere with the prosperity of the people. Give the people something to do, to earn something, and they won't object to paying a little more freight. If they haven't any business or work to do, they cannot afford to pay any amount.

"It is bad business to get capital from anywhere to invest in stocks or bonds that are represented to be safe and profitable, and rob the investors by not permitting them, through adverse legislation and regulation, to earn enough money to keep the property invested in out of the hands of a receiver.

"I believe I voice the sentiment of the great majority of the people of the country, who have to pay the freight, and the hospital bill for all the sick railroads which have been forced into the financial hospitals through a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy. I want to go on record and stand ready and willing to pay my part, and, if I am permitted to pay it, I am certain I will have more to pay it with than I have now to pay the present rates."

JOIN THE 93rd BATTALION--NOW IS THE TIME

THE SITUATION ON THE VERDUN FRONT IS UNCHANGED SAYS FRENCH REPORT

Heavy Artillery Fighting Continued Throughout Last Night on Both Banks of the Meuse---Germans Believed to Be Preparing For an Attempt to Capture Goose Hill and Other Important Positions.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 8.—Heavy artillery fight- continued through last night on both banks of the Meuse, the War Office reported this afternoon.

The situation on the Verdun northern front remains unchanged.

The cannonade was especially violent northwest of Verdun on the west bank of the Meuse, where the Germans are believed to be preparing for an attempt to capture Goose Hill and Dead Man Hill.

Infantry fighting on the front northwest of Verdun came to a halt last night while the Germans poured heavy shell fire in upon the French positions.

"North of Verdun," the official statement said, "the situation remained unchanged last night. West of the Meuse, northwest of Verdun, the enemy bombarded our positions throughout the night, but there were no infantry actions. East of the Meuse there was intermittent artillery firing to which our batteries responded energetically. In the Champagne, east of Maison de Champagne, we have recaptured the trenches taken by the enemy on March 6. We also took 85 prisoners."

The Germans attacked in the vicinity of Fresnes, along the railway and the road from Manheulles, but their assaults broke down under artillery fire.

PARIS, March 8.—The Bulgarians have ceased the work they had begun on the entrenchments in the neutral zone along the Greco-Bulgarian frontier, as a result of a protest from the Greek Government.

Many Explosions in Niagara Fire

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., March 8.—Shortly after 9 this morning a series of eight explosions again rocked the plant of the Niagara Alkali Co., and developed a new fire which is eating its way toward the storage house. If it reaches this tremendous explosions will result which will wreck the entire plant and perhaps seriously damage all adjoining portions of the city.

Real Struggle Has Yet To Commence

Examiner Special:

PARIS, March 8.—France awaits anxiously but contentedly the issue of to-day's battle. The Germans thus far at the cost of large losses, have obtained command of approaches to the main French positions beyond the west bank of the Meuse. The real struggle will begin when the German masses hurl themselves on the four-mile line of heights extending from Bethincourt to Cumieres.

Yesterday's attacks left the battle undecided. Corbeaux wood in which the Germans succeeded in establishing themselves, is within a hollow, between Dead Man and Goose Hills, and as neither position is endangered, the German success is of little strategic import.

GERMANS AND AUSTRIANS BOTH CLAIM GAINS

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, March 8.—West of Regneuville, on the west bank of the Meuse, the Germans stormed the French front below Bethincourt on a front of about three and one-half miles, for a depth of nearly two miles.

BERLIN, March 8.—The War Office claims the capture of Regneuville village seven miles northwest of Verdun, and Forges, also the capture of French positions on Rabenaud Heights. The French lost 700 prisoners while holding the remaining houses in Fresnes.

The Austrian War Office reports the capture of one thousand yards of trenches from the Russians northwest of Tarnopol.

LONDON, March 8.—Broken pieces of a Zeppelin propeller was picked up in the County of Kent to-day. It is believed here that one of the dirigibles that bombarded Kent and other counties Sunday night, was struck and damaged by shell from an anti-aircraft gun.

BERLIN, Ont., March 8.—In the case of Sergt-Major Blood and Private Schoefer, of the 118th Battalion, who admitted responsibility for leading the assault on Rev. Mr. Tappert, sentence was to-day suspended and will not likely be ever imposed. They are at liberty.

SOLDIERS ATTACKED PROCESSION

Tore Down Banners in Dry Parade —Many Spectators Were Injured

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, March 8. — A serious disturbance broke out when the giant prohibition parade reached the armouries this afternoon en route to the Parliament Buildings. The soldiers snowballed the paraders and tore down the banners. Several were destroyed. Many spectators were injured when the police attempted to quell the disturbance by riding into the soldiers.

Prejudice renders a man's virtues habit and not a series of unconnected acts. Through just prejudice his duty becomes part of his nature. -Burke.

PLEA FOR MORE WORKERS.

The regular meeting of the local Red Cross Society was held in the teachers' room of the Public Library on Monday evening. The attendance was smaller than usual owing to the stormy night. Both Nurses and Surgeons Deliberately Shot by Enemy

PARIS, March 8.—Charges of deliberate shelling by German artillery of convoys of wounded and Red Cross ambulances during the weeks of fighting for the possession of Fort Douaumont and the village at that place are made by Frenhc wounded.

"The cannon of the Bocies bombarded without intermission our rear on the road to Verdun," a wounded Zouave told me. "They fired on our convoys of wounded, so that it became impossible to get to the rear by the most accessible road. We had to resort to devious foot paths, which made the way longer. Each wounded man helped a more seriously hurt comrade. For instance, on a tortuous path I passed one man whose arm was shot away helping a fellow-soldier whose leg had been shattered.

"Whenever the Germans sighted such a group making its way to the rear they fired upon them. More of our men were killed in that way than were actually killed on the battle front.

"It was the same with the ambulances of the Red Cross. In the course of ordinary events they would have been forced to run their chances of being struck by shells or bullets, but at Douaumont they were deliberately singled out by the German gunners whenever they caught sight of one. Any number of Red Cross nurses and a good many surgeons were killed by the German shells fired at the ambulances.

"Finally the shell fire from the enemy became so infernal that no ambulance dared to venture out in the direction of the front. It was not until the remnants of the wounded convoy of which I was one had gone seven kilometres from Douaumont village that we were safe."

A PETERBORO' COUNTY BOY IS FIGHTING IN EAST AFRICAN BUSH

Lance-Corp. Chas. Perrie, Formerly of Lakefield, in an Interesting Letter to the Examiner Tells of the Conditions There--Canadian Engineers Are Recruiting Here--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The Examiner has received the following most interesting letter from Lance Corp. C. Perrie, formerly of Lakefield, Ont., and now with the British forces in East Africa:

British East Africa.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—No doubt a few lines from an ex-Peterborough County fellow, trying to do his bit with the Imperial forces in a hot corner of the globe, will prove very interesting to yourself and readers. It is now nine months since our regiment left old England's shores for active service, and after a 24 days' sea trip of delightful weather, calling at Gibraltar, Malta, Port Said, Suez and Aden, en route, we arrived at Kilindike, the deep-water port of British East Africa, and proceeded up country into the highlands of this country, just at the close of the year's heavy rain season. We were situated in a big game and Masai (a native tribe) reserve, where big game abounded on every side, lions, cheetahs, wild beest, heartibeest, giraffes, gazelle, zebra, jaokal, and hyena, a few elephants, rhinoceros, also ostriche, vultures, parrots, etc, and it was a common thing to have these fellows prowling around at night; but we soon got used to them, for the only thing which attacks are rhinoceros buffalo and old lions. There was very little doing here with the Germans, for the Masai were all the time keeping a sharp look-out for us even over the border. It was during this time that a detachment of us went to Bukoba, a German post on the western shores of Lake Victoria, Nyanza, where we had a good two days' baptism of fire and achieved what was described by the General a brilliant victory. This was in June, shortly after we came down into the bush where fever and even sleeping sickness are in ambush for you, and it is down here where the greatest activity is shown on both sides.

There is a far call between bows and arrows and aeroplanes and native porters and motor lorries; yet in this country all these things are to be found in use to-day. Our native scouts use a bow and arrow, whilst aeroplanes hover over forts and in places (most places) where it is only possible to travel through the bush in single file, when only too small to do so in comfort, for every tree, no matter how small, seems to try to rival a gooseberry bush in both quantity and quality of thorns. There we find the native carriers bringing our rations, water, ammunition, etc., where the lorry, with its powerful engine, would be useless, and sometimes the A. S. C. work is done by ox teams, driven by natives, for roads are almost as scarce as houses.

Up to now, things have been about even, taking everything into account, but we hope to finish the enemy off as soon as we get the South Africans up here to strengthen us. The native soldiers, our own, the King's African Rifles and the enemy's, are very fine bushmen and all right to fight one another, but they are not so good when put up against white men, and we owe our skins from several occasions to this fact and are very thankful for it. Of course there is no trench fighting here; it is done in the open, and one can find plenty of cover behind the bushes for of course thorns do not count when bullets come flying around.

The natives are as a rule, a poor set of boys; a good many of them practically uncivilized; many keep up the cannibal practice of filing their teeth, and it is a matter of great curiosity to most of them when a soldier takes out his false teeth to them; but occasionally they run away, possibly afraid of evil spirits; they can only carry 45 lbs. of trekk, and everything they carry has to go on their head, from a piece of paper to a load, even a stretcher. One old settler told me that the first time he introduced a wheelbarrow on his farm, he showed the boy how to wheel it and afterwards discovered the boy taking it to use not on the wheel, but on his head.

Now I am afraid the space will be exceeded many times, but hoping it will prove interesting to many.

Yours truly,

L.C. Charles L. Perrie,

Street Car Accident May Prove Fatal

Mrs. Michael Burke, 841 Water Street, Ran in Front of a Moving Car and Was Seriously Injured —Is Not Expected to Recover.

ON WAY TO MASS

An accident that may have fatal results occurred this morning in the north end of the city when Mrs. Michael Burke, 841 Water Street, was knocked down by a street car. Mrs. Burke, who is upwards of seventy years of age, was on her way to early morning mass. She resides on the west side of Water Street, and in order to take a south-bound car, was obliged to get on the east side of the street. She passed directly in front of a moving car and was thrown to the ground, sustaining severe injuries to the head and body. Dr. F. P. McNulty was summoned and the woman removed to her home. Her condition is very precarious.

The officials of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company declined to discuss the accident beyond a statement to the effect that a complete report of the affair would be made to Mr. W. G. Ferguson, Manager of the Company, upon his return to the city. According to those who were on the scene at the time, the accident was unavoidable.

20,000 PEOPLE IN MONSTER DRY PARADE TO-DAY

Toronto the Scene of One of the Greatest Features in the History of Temperance Reform—One Banner Half a Mile Long

20 BANDS IN LINE

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, March 8. — One of the greatest features in the history of temperance reform was the huge parade held this afternoon in this city, which conveyed giant petitions for prohibition to the Ontario Parliament Buildings. Representatives from all parts of the province constituted half of the parade, which numbered about twenty thousand. With one thousand autom biles, with 20 bands and banners galore, 700 of them flying in the breeze, the parade presented a wonderful spectacle of the determination of the voters to uncat King Alcohol. One banner half a mile long required 200 men to carry it, while many other "no booze" pennants and water wagon driven by Old Man Ontario were symbolic of Ontario's determination. The procession was headed by chairmen of county organizations carrying the petition. A big motor lorry carried the roll, representing the size of the petition.

TORONTO, March 8. — Premier Hearst's reply to the prohibition appeal pointed out that the government was already framing a bill for temperance reform as outlined in the speech from the throne. The petitions presented would, he promised, receive the fullest consideration of the government.

Niagara Falls Plant Wrecked

One Man is Dead and Others May Be in the Ruins—A Million Dollar Loss

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., March 8. Six or eight explosions, following closely upon one another about 10.20 o'clock last night wrecked the main plant of the Niagara Electro-Chemical Company, located on the river bank, at Twenty-sixth street. Police and fire men who investigated the explosions say they were accidental and not the work of enemies of the firm. They were explosions of chemicals used at the plant.

Local police say that one man, a Pole, is known to be dead and several others slightly injured. Others may be dead, for there were several foreigners at work when the explosion occurred. These workmen may have escaped, however, and may be safe. The monetary loss is about one million dollars. To-night's explosions are not in any way connected with the damage to the Castner Alkali Company's plant some three weeks ago. Police say the latter was the work of strikers.

The noise of the explosions was heard on the Canadian side and guards were rushed to the various bridges and other points to forestall any possible pro-German demonstration, the rumor having spread that the plant was blown up by pro-German agents.

LIGHT PUNISHMENT.

It may seem pretty hard to sentence a man, found guilty of bombing a factory building at Sandwich, Ont., and attempting to blow up the Windsor Armouries, to a life term in the penitentiary. But it is lighter punishment than he could expect. He had no thought or compunction of conscience at the idea of ending the "life term" of some innocent person by his outrage. At this time and under the circumstances, we live in, we are quite justified in imposing exemplary punishment, and if need be, in "fighting the devil with fire."

AN OUTRAGE.

It is hard to bring our city authorities to an interest in the beautifying of the city, especially when the difficulty is complicated by some of our aldermen seeming willing to take actions that will not only destroy the beauty of our parks and public places, but bring our sense of aesthetic appreciation into measureless contempt. The proposal to plant in our parks, garbage tins, to be deformed with advertisements, is the last straw, the uttermost prostitution of our beauty spots. Some of our aldermen showed a proper spirit of contempt for the proposal, but the hopeless part of the matter is that a majority of the aldermen decided to permit of the installation of ten of these monstrosities "on approbation." Alderman Duncan did well to call attention to the efforts we were making to have unsightly objects removed from our streets, and to show the inconsistency of adding a new deformity. If the aldermen had only a spark of sense of respect for the beauty of our parks they could have done no less than have referred the matter to the Horticultural Society, which has charge of our parks. But there seems to be no such sense; a proposal of some faking advertising enthusiast is sensed like a sweet morsel and adopted out of hand; while not a thought is apparently given to adding to the beauty of the boulevards on our paved streets by considering the splendid proposal of that floral enthusiast and expert in the reproduction of the beautiful, Mr. W. H. Young whose letter on the subject appeared in last night's issue. The money the city is to receive from the placing of what one alderman calls "illuminated garbage cans" in our parks is the price of blood, as far as the beauty and aesthetic quality of our parks are concerned.

A GREAT INSURANCE CORPORATION.

The annual meeting of the Sun Life Assurance Company demonstrates the prominence, not to say, pre-eminence, it occupies among such institutions. The report presented at the meeting showed, as will be seen by reference to the summary of the report, page 4, this issue, it to be the largest of our Canadian Life Companies, the assurance in force having reached the impressive total of 287 million dollars. Of this total there was added, during the year, the large sum of 34 millions constituting a record of new business among Canadian companies and an increase of $1,700,000 for the year. Another important item of increase was the advance in assets during the year of ten million dollars, bringing the total of assets to nearly 75 millions. Add to this, as further illustration of the stability of the company, the existence of a contingent fund of securities of a par value of over 13 million, and a net surplus, over all liabilities, of $7,500,000. Last year's payment to policy-holders of $7,129,679 was nearly a million in excess of the payments of the previous year. Since the organization of the Sun Life, its policy holders have received in payments the great total of $62,670,000. The large earning power of the Company is illustrated by the fact that holders of five year dividend and reserve dividend policies will receive in 1916 even larger dividends than were received in 1914. The record and standing of the Sun Life Company is a matter of pride to the country, of credits to the Company, and of satisfaction to policy-holders and shareholders. The local representatives of this aggressive and substantial insurance corporation are Messrs. Hill and Weddell, Hunter and Water streets.

RAILWAY RATES AND SERVICE.

On page four of this issue will be found an interesting article, dealing with the relation of railway passenger and freight rates to the efficiency of the public service given. The writer shows pretty conclusively that the proposed increase of rates dealt with, is not made at the expense of the farmer or the stockman or the dealer in merchandise, but that the ultimate consumer pays the freight, and that in his case, which is the type of the total population, the increase is so infinitesimal that it does not count, in comparison with the personal and public advantages derived from increase of rates or rates sufficient to give effective service. Capacity on the part of railways to give good service is no doubt a measure of general prosperity and business activity. If we have rates so low as to cripple the services railways can give, we have a corresponding decrease of railway business; and as a result less prosperity at large. In every other business we must have prices—rates—sufficient to keep such business in a solvent if not flourishing condition. The same applies to railways; they must like other business have a sufficient income from rates to enable them to give good service. That is in the public interest and is a sine qua non of communal and national prosperity. Not only that but the railways must have sufficient rates earnings to enable them to give a living wage to their employees which in the aggregate constitutes a large proportion of our population. A demand for increased wages is justified if their increased demand is needed to enable employees to meet the demands of increased cost of living. It would not be unfair, it would be simple justice on the part of railways to demand increased rates to meet such increased demand upon their income whose sufficiency is an absolutely necessary condition of giving efficient service; and that in turn an absolutely necessary condition of general agricultural, commercial and industrial prosperity.

FARM WORK.

One of the conditions that will enable the farmers of the country to meet the demand for increased production is more available workers on the farm — they are the grand lack. They must have more farm help than seems to be now in sight. Some demand that the retired farmers of the country, now taking their ease in comparative, if well earned, idleness, in our villages towns and cities, should take off their coats. These gentlemen many of whom are fit, would doubtless dislike to have the pleasant routine of their life disturbed. But the routine of life for all of us, has been disturbed; shaken to the foundations; dislocated; turned topsy-turvy. We are all called upon to confront extraordinary conditions, with extraordinary efforts. We have all been compelled to turn our activities in new directions; all have been called upon to make sacrifices, and it is claimed that a retired farmer, physically fit, has a place in the grand army that is fighting to keep the integrity of our country and our empire intact.

There is another proposal—to send the larger boys of our collegiate institutes and high schools to the farms. From what has been learned, the idea appeals to the spirit of adventure, if not the patriotism, of our school boys; and the proposal to utilize their services might with proper organization, be made a great success. But it seems indispensable that there should be organization. If the government undertakes the matter, the force of juvenile workers should, one would think, be mobilized and sent out under some disciplined condition, with a sense of responsibility on the part of both the boys and the government and also the employing farmer, understood and felt. Such a condition would prevent a boy dropping his tools and leaving his work at a critical time, of his own caprice, and likewise prevent his employer from dispensing suddenly with his services from similar motive. It has been suggested that the government strike a commemotative medal to be given to all boys who have battled for the empire in the harvest fields of Canada. It would seem that with proper and prompt organization —the indispensable conditions — of the field forces of boy workers of Ontario, a considerable help would be given to the solution of the problem of increased farm production, as one of the forms of our contribution to successfully waging this war.

Hew to the Line, Wherever Resulting Chips May Fall

If there has been political wrong-doing in the Province of Saskatchewan under the Liberal Administration, as has been charged in the Legislature at Regina, there is one thing, one worthy and patriotic thing, for Premier Scott and the Liberals to do and to do at once; Clean up!

To be sure, charges presented are not charges proved. A certain class of politicians can exhibit an amazing front of insinuation and allegation and apparent accusation, that vanishes into empty verbosity when brought to the touchstone of proof. For this reason, on the one side as on the other, the proof or disproof will count.

The charges have been made. It is the business of the Government to afford adequate opportunity for the investigation of those charges. If the charges are false vindictive malevolent they will react on those who make them. But if any accused Liberal is guilty his condemnation and repudiation is the first duty of all in Saskatchewan who care for the good name of Liberalism and who honourably seek to build up the Canadian nation. Hon. J. A. Calder was right in his speech, when, for himself, for the Government, and for the Liberal party, he declared the resolute purpose: "Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they will."

Whether there is truth in the charges, or only the venom of the defeated liquor interests and the malignity of reckless political opponents, is a question thorough investigation would discover. What is required, and what Liberals everywhere have the right to demand, is that at this early stage in the history of Saskatchewan the very appearance of political evil should be shunned, and the first beginnings of government by grafters and liquor heelers exposed and crushed. In Saskatchewan, as in every other Province at any time, government of the people is a very human institution, subject to human imperfections and exposed to human temptations. This means not that allowance should be made for parasites and plunderers, but that every precaution be taken against them and the swiftest retribution made to haunt their steps.

Liberal journals and Liberal leaders in Ontario have learned from experience, and have claimed the right to speak out plainly to Premier Scott and his colleagues in Saskatchewan. In this Province that liberty had to be paid for tempestuously with the liquor traffic and giving the hangnails a chance. The Liberals paid in full, and have made a new start. The Conservatives, in their turn, refusing to learn from the experience of their predecessors, have now to carry a Government bearing all the marks of moral bankruptcy, bled white by the barnacles, and leagued up for years with the degenerate liquor exploiters. Ontario's hard-earned advice to Saskatchewan is, Clean up!

Next door, in Manitoba, the same lesson is taught. Surely the stench from Winnipeg is a poisone warning to Regina. If conscienceless and crafty political gamesters, entrenched in Manitoba for years, found in the end only shame and incurable ruin, Saskatchewan cannot hope to win except by sterling integrity of political character and the highest public devotion in political service. Manitoba says, Clean up!

And British Columbia, still ashamed and sunken by the lawlessness and libertinism of a decade of political debauchery, is itself a warning that Nemesis, slow-footed but sure, is on the trail of any Government that is not sleepless in its vigilance against the Achan in its own camp, and that, for the sake of power, truckles to the whiskey trade.

Saskatchewan! Clean up!—The Globe.

THE SAP IS WAITING.

Untimely blizzards and belated storms do not obscure the fact that long days of sunshine and nights of frost will soon start the sap in the maple trees. Memory of a time when the principles of evaporation were not so well or widely known as at present, when the sap was boiled in small kettles, sometimes with a piece of pork suspended to make a film and prevent boiling over, still lingers, and some will lament the change in the flavour of syrup and sugar. But their lament will be compared to that of the sailors who complained, when given the beef intended for the cabin passengers, that there was "no chaw to it."

The Inland Revenue Department has issued a comforting bulletin telling that out of 248 samples of maple syrup examined by analysts 192 were found genuine, four met legal requirements, and one was doubtful. This is in itself a high record, and it would be still higher if the total did not include samples falling under condemnation through deceptive labeling. Some manufacturers and dealers sought to evade rather than break the law, and to adopt labels which would lead customers to deceive themselves without being technically deceived. But the law is explicit in covering such practices. The word "maple" cannot be used, either alone or in combination with other words or letters, in any label, illustration, or other device, on any package containing any article of food not genuine maple syrup or sugar. Under this law, if a Mr. Maple were to take advantage of his name and engage in the syrup and sugar business he would have to be extremely careful about his labels. Maple syrup time is at hand and, thanks to departmental activity, the genuine articles is assured, even if it does lack the tang of early boiling days.—The Globe.

"I DID NOT RAISE MY BOY TO BE A SOLDIER, BUT—

I did not raise my boy to be a coward,
To be with blood unstirred whate'er befalls,
To skulk, or shirk, or flinch in times untoward,
To stop his ears when need or honor calls.
I did not raise my boy to bide in pleasure
When duty summons him to suffer pain,
To count mere easeful plenty, good—to measure
All by paltry rule of private gain.
I would not have him cringe when proud ambition
Fares forth full-armed to work its lawless will,
To use his own upon some base condition,
Or look on weakened outraged and be still.
Better, far better, that my son were lying,
Fordone and shattered on the stricken field;
Better, far better, that my boy were dying,
Where freemen, soon forgotten, scorn to yield.
I love him not? Ah, me! Too well I love him.
To have him live at ease, full-fed and whole,
A recreant to the righteous God above him,
A traitor to his birthright and his soul.

—Jean Fewers in London Spectator.

FOOLING THE BLACKS

Choicest German Lies Manufactured For African Consumption

The Colonial Office issued the following translation of a letter from Count Falkenstein, the officer commanding the German forces on the Nyassaland frontier, addressed to a certain Mwalimu Isa, a leading Mohammedan who exercised a great influence over the large Moslem population living on both sides of the British-Portuguese border near Lake Nyasa: "The holy war now is throughout the whole world. In Egypt holy war, Morocco, Tunis, Algiers, Tripoli, Afghanistan, Baluchistan, and Persia, half of the country of India, Soudan, the Nubians' country; in fact, everywhere there is holy war. The enemy everywhere is defeated. The Turks have sunk many English and French men-of-war. In Morocco the French are completely cleared out. In Persia our Russian enemies and the English have been driven out. In Afghanistan and Baluchistan the English have run away. The askari of holy war are in the Punjab and in India. The Germans and Austrians have everywhere defeated the French, Russians, and English. French and Russians are practically fallen and the English not quite yet, but many of their soldiers are killed outright, very many of their battleships are sunk. And now all Mohammedans are knowing when they die. Furthermore, they are dying for God. He has seen their flag of holy war with His own eyes. (Signed) Falkenstein, Captain."

Baby Named Dardanelles

The name "Dardanelles" which was bestowed on the infant daughter of one of the British soldiers fighting the Turks, is more musical than some geographical names with which children are burdened. Mrs. Andrew Lang tells of a family where the babies were named after the places where the father happened to be when he heard of their births. He being a courier, there was a St. Petersburg and a Naples; Kattegat and Skagerrak were the twins; while the only daughter was named Vienna.

A Bull's Eye.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

CAMPBELLFORD BEAT MARMORA FOR THE TRENT VALLEY TITLE

Tommy Moffatts Braves Beat Green and White Team 6 to 2 in Hard Fought Game at Brock Street Rink Last Night --Were Always in Front.

The Campbellford team won the championship of the Trent Valley League last night at Brock St. Rink, when they won a hard-fought, but clearly contested battle from Marmora by 6 goals to 2. Tommy Moffatt's braves were in front all the way, leading by 3 to 1 at the end of the first period, and 3 to 2 at the close of the second. The score hardly does justice to the hard fight the Marmora team put up, as the green and white team, although not in the best of condition, battled every inch of the way. In fact only a fine exhibition in the nets by Betts, the Campbellford goaler, kept the score from being a good deal closer. Betts was especially brilliant in the first few minutes of the first, and third periods when Marmora came strong and hurled shot after shot at the Campbellford citadel.

It was a good exhibition of hockey all the way with both teams giving all they had and with no signs of ill feeling shown at any stage. Both showed some clever combination at times, and there were many pretty individual rushes to arouse enthusiasm. There were rooters on hand from each of the rival towns, and as usual khaki uniforms were much in evidence, the Marmora detachment of the 155th, and the Campbellford quota of the 109th, being well represented.

Campbellford probably had the edge in speed and combined nicely as well as several of their goals being the result of pretty passing. Marmora, however, showed good stickhandling ability.

Betts in goal was good all the way, and Shannon did some fine checking. On the forward line Clements and Lott were probably the pick.

For Marmora, Wells on the defence, and Shannon and Jones on the forward line, were the stars.

Sergt. Montgomery of the 93rd Battalion gave every satisfaction as referee.

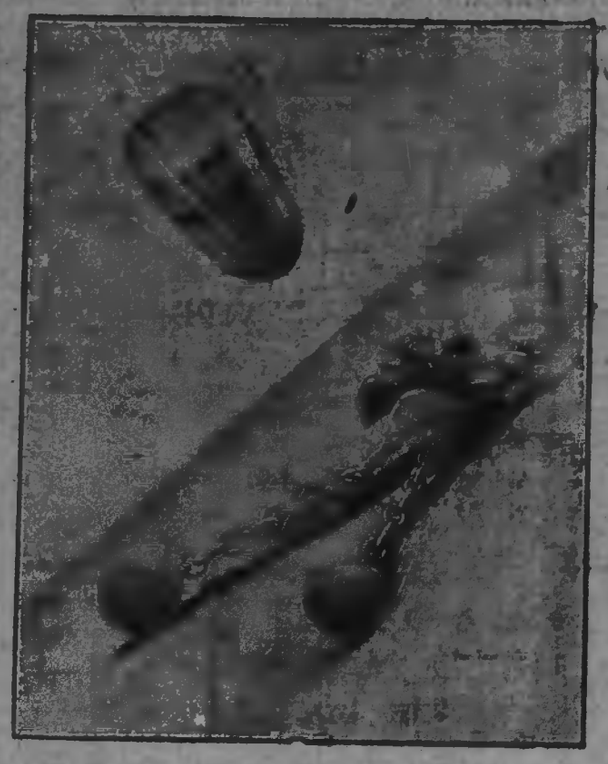
The teams lined up as follows:

Marmora.		Campbellford
	Goal
Inkster		Betts
	Defence
Wells		Shannon
Jones		Holmes
	Rover
Shannon		Clements
	Centre
J. Jones		Kerr
	Right Wing
Roats		Lott
	Left Wing
McWilliams		Christensen

Marmora were the aggressors for the first ten minutes. Their stickhandling carried them in for shots time after time, but Betts was unbeatable, making some sensational stops of hard drives. It was Campbellford who scored first, Christensen finding the nets on a combination rush. He came back alone a few moments after, and shammed another past Inkster, putting Campbellford two to the good. Marmora fought them back, however, and after Betts had made several stops at close quarters, Roats banged one in from a scrimmage.

Both teams scored once in the second period, Campbellford getting theirs first when Lott brought the puck from behind Marmora's nets and swept it past Inkster. Marmora evened up when McWilliams took a pass and scored on a side shot. That left it 3 to 2 at the end of the second period.

Marmora seemed to weaken in the last period, after the first five minutes. At the opening of the period they gave Betts some busy moments, but they could not beat him. Then Campbellford came on and took command of the game. Christensen made it 4 to 2 on a combination rush, and Clements hung up another shortly after. Kerr got the last from a scrimmage, just before time was called.



"THAT 16-INCH SHELL SENSATION."

Trophy Will Go to Toronto

Capon-Waddell Trophy Will Pass into the Hands of the "Victorias" of Toronto—The Scores

The Capon-Waddell Trophy, which is contested for annually between the Victorias of Toronto and the Peterborough Club, goes to Toronto for a spell. Five rinks usually enter the arena, but this year only four arrived from the Queen City. In view of Toronto's ice softening up it was decided to consider last night's game as final, instead of a try-out at each end. The result was Toronto 37, Peterborough 34.

The following are the scores:

Toronto.	Peterborough
W. D. Sloan	A. H. Webb
Rev. Pedley	H. F. Foote
L. G. Amsden	W. J. Thompson
W. Mollroy	R. M. Hamilton
Skip—13	Skip—14
Geo. Gouinlock	J. W. Brightman
W. D. E. Strickland	W. H. Nicoll

Skip—14	Skip—18
W. Hystop	G. H. Logie
R. Southam	A. C. Kay
J. Breckenrige	W. M. Laug
Jas. McFadden	D. Davidson
Skip—13	Skip—14
H. W. Wright	R. Dobie
H. H. Macdonald	W. H. Taylor
G. H. Mantz	R. H. Hicks
G. Lyon	W. H. Denham
Skip—17	Skip— 8

Last year's contest was called off owing to Toronto's ice not being in shape.

One of the Toronto Skips was Mr W. Mollroy, formerly C.P.R. ticket agent, here, whom the Peterborough boys were glad to welcome back to the old town.

Millbrook	Peterborough
Steele, 8.	Martin, 9.
Edmonds, 8.	Greer, 12
Sales, 11.	Stubbs, 12.

The weather being favourable, three rinks will take a trip to Keene next Friday. It is to be hoped Jack Frost will be keen.

Four rinks went to Cobourg this morning for a friendly game with the "Waverley's," the skips being R. Neill, W. G. Morrow, T. Brightman and D. Davidson.

Two rinks slipped up to Lakefield yesterday in care of Conductor Jobbitt, and fraternized with the twirlers of blue-blood town. They were royally entertained and given a nice "tuck-in" after the game, which, no doubt, resulted as follows:

Peterborough	Lakefield
J. Sherwood
R. B. Bogue
Geo. Boucher
F. M. Dela Foster	Redpath
Skip 13	Skip 4
J. Comstock
J. W. Brightman
P. D. Fitzgerald
R. P. Best	O. A. Langley
Skip .. 15	Skip 2

The local fans who claim Ireland as their ancestral home are filing up their wits, while the lusty sons of Scotland are polishing off their "burrs" in preparation for the contest to-night between the Irish and the Scotch.

Soldier Teams To Clash on Friday

109th Battalion Team of Lindsay Will Meet the 93rd Batt. Team

There will be a lively game of hockey at Brock street rink on Friday night when the hockey team of the 109th Battalion, Lindsay, will clash with the 93rd Battalion. The two soldier teams should put up one of the best arguments of the season. The 109th will have Sandercock, Carew, Mills and other well known Lindsay O.H.A. men on their line-up, while the 93rd will use their O.H.A. line-up. In addition they have several dark horses among the new officers recently attached to the battalion. Fans can look forward to a real battle all the way between the two soldier teams, and undoubtedly there will be a big crowd of fans on hand for this game, which may be the wind up of the hockey season.

DUKE'S BROTHER KILLED.

Heir to Title of Leinster Met With Accidental Death.

PARIS, March 8.—Major Lord Desmond Fitzgerald, first battalion Irish Guards, and brother of the Duke of Leinster, and heir-presumptive to that title, was accidentally killed, says a Calais despatch to the Matin. He was experimenting in his tent with a new kind of bomb when it exploded and a fragment struck him in the head. He died an hour later. Lord Desmond was wounded early in the war and was mentioned in despatches for distinguished service. He was born in 1888.

Munition Wages Are Doubled

New Yorker, in England, Thinks High Pay Hampers Recruiting.

The tremendous growth of the munition industry in England and the difficulty experienced in obtaining machinery for it owing to the overwhelming demand for this equipment are described in a letter received here from a former resident of New York, who is now managing a large munitions factory over there. After explaining that girls are better than men for the making of fuse, such as is used for high explosive shells, he tells of his difficulties in obtaining machinery.

"The main trouble for me just now," he says, "is that it is almost impossible to buy anything which will be delivered on anything like time. The demand for tools and what not is so enormous that, although everybody is working night and day, supplies cannot be kept up.

"To see the buildings and factories that have gone up as a result of the war is extraordinary—a revelation. It looks as though the country were going to be at war forever; for these factories are put up to stay. Around here and in the —— district, where they make especially small arms ammunition, hundreds of acres of what were green fields a year ago are now covered with factories, running night and day, and employing tens of thousands of hands.

"The wages have increased about 100 per cent. Workmen are in many cases making $35 to $50 a week, all the year round, and girls of 16 and 17 are making in some instances, $30 a week, without any previous experience of their present line of work, whereas before the war they would make about $6.

"About 6 P.M. passing through a busy part of the outskirts of the city, I noticed all th esmall factories working overtime, with a glare of light at every window. He, (the manager,) said, 'See this? It's the jewelery part of the town.' So I asked what the jewelers were working overtime for, and he replied, 'Why? Don't you know the wages they are paying around here?

"And that's the worst of it. The men and women are making twice as much as they ever did before, and it is doing them harm. As you know, the English workman is not particularly patriotic—there's too darned much Socialism around. And he is out for the money, and is going to get all he can, because he had a deep-rooted distrust of the employers and believes that they are making enormous profits of which he ought to have a share. He is not, in the main, a self-sacrificing individual, to say the least. And when he has at last to go to the front, he puts up with all kinds of hardships and privations cheerfully, for 25 cents a day."

Two Fighter aeroplanes for the Royal Flying Corps have been presented to the British Government, one of the members of the Trinidad Chamber of Commerce, incorporated, and the other—the most recent gift of the kin from overseas—from Jamaica. Dominica was the first colony to send an aeroplane to Great Britain.

SHOE REPAIRER

It's the soles of the people we keep in view,
For we are the doctor of the boot and shoe;
And we serve the living and not the dead,
With the best of leather, wax and thread.
We can sew on a sole, or nail it fast,
And do a good job and make it last;
There is nothing snide about what we do;
Doubt not our statement, for work proves it true.
We can sew you a lift, too, during your life.
Not only you, but your family and wife.
A good many patients come to our door,
Worn out and run down, besides feeling sore.
Tho' we don't use poultice, plaster or pill,
We cure all sick shoes no matter how ill;
Our prices are lowest, our work is the best,
No equal in town, just give us a test.

BELLEVILLE HAS A NINE GOAL LEAD OVER SARNIA IN THE FINALS

BELLEVILLE, Ont. March 7—The first of the final games between Sarnia and Belleville intermediate O.H.A. teams was played here to-night, and created much interest, Belleville winning by a score of 14 to 5. A record crowd was in attendance.

The game from the start was fast both teams playing hockey from the ring of the bell. In the first period the first goal was secured by Finch, of Sarnia, and shortly after Whalen scored for Belleville. Simmons repeated with a goal for Belleville. Dore tied the score by a well-directed shot from off left wing. Finch scored for Sarnia. Score 3 to 2 for Sarnia.

The first goal in the second period was scored by Symons for Belleville and a minute later Mitchell again scored for Belleville, followed in quick succession by another goal for Belleville by Whalen. Symons scored the seventh goal for Belleville, and Finkle the eighth. Simmons notched the ninth and Whalen the tenth goal, making the score 10 to 3 at the end of the second period.

In the third period Symons secured the first goal for Belleville, and Hillman scored for Sarnia. Finkle and Whalen then tallied, and Finkle repeated the act for Belleville. Finch scored for Sarnia.

O. Bernhardt, of Bradford, was the referee. Secretary Hewitt and members of the O.H.A. executive witnessed the game. The line-up:

Sarnia—Goal, Dwyer; defence, McCart and Granasry; rover, Hillman; centre, Halpin; wings, Dore and Finch.

Giants' Old Leader Tells of Better Day

Recalls a Woeful Wait Before First Game at Polo Grounds

The most uncomfortable afternoon I ever put in during the twelve years I was President of the New York Club was the afternoon of the first game played at the old Polo Grounds with the Nationals and Washington. The city was anxious for New York to be well represented in the baseball world and a crowd of perhaps 1,000 turned out at this first game.

The only seats were a few benches erected on the field by the Polo Club, and most of the spectators stood up. I do not remember that there were any women present on that first day. They began to attend soon after we started, however.

Manager Mutrie had his team out practicing some time before game time, but the Washington Club was strangely missing. When it was time to start the game the Washington Club had not yet appeared. Manager Mutrie got together a club of 'pick-ups' to play against our team, but the crowd broke into an uproar when they saw the substitute nine and not the Nationals.

They called us 'frauds 'and 'skins' and demanded their money back. Mutrie was pitching for all he was worth and the players tried to ignore the taunts of the disappointed spectators. The crowd became so worked up over the demand for their money that I got the money together and started to pay it back to the spectators. It was a sad blow to us to have our first game end in such a finish, and it was sure to be a black eye for our new undertaking.

As the restless spectators were standing in line to get their admission money back, there was a great shout, and as I looked around to see what was the matter I saw the Washington players, all in uniform, coming through the gate. The day was saved right there. It seems the train from Washington was an hour late, so the players dressed on the train and hurried to the grounds as quickly as they could. The substitute team was taken from the field and our first game was played as scheduled.

Mutrie and myself had been interested in the game from the beginning and we tried for some time to get into the league before we were successful. I told Mutrie if he would get the grounds I would furnish the money. So he got the grounds at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue. We played for a time as the 'Metropolitans' before we joined the National League.

During the second year we were in the league, the April games drew so well that we made $10,000, so you see the attendances were pretty good in those days. We played at the old Polo Grounds, for a time, and for a short while played on Staten Island. The crowd followed us there and the attendance held up well. Later we went to the present Polo Grounds, at 155th Street.

GASOLINE BATH FATAL.

Lighted Cigarette Resulted in Death of at Least 18 Prisoners.

EL PASO March 8.—The death list resulting from the explosion of a tub of gasoline in the city jail yesterday may go to 20. In addition to the 18 burned to death seven others are injured so badly they may die. While Mexican prisoners were being bathed with gasoline as a preventive measure against typhus someone threw a lighted match into the tub of liquid. Most of the fifty prisoners who escaped during the fire that followed the explosion are still at large.

Judge Craig sentenced him to five years in Folsom penitentiary

Collegiate Inspector's Report.

J. E. Wetherell, Collegiate Institute Inspector, presented his annual report of the local Collegiate: "In nearly all respects," he commented "this Collegiate Institute is in a very flourishing condition. The School has the same staff of twelve very competent teachers. By paying liberal salaries the Board is able to retain the services of the teachers who prove themselves competent and popular.

Some serious problems in the matter of accommodations will have to be faced courageously after the war. The situation as regards ventilation should have immediate attention. The physical exercises cannot be conducted properly until the school has a gymnasium. The girls' exercises do not include, as they should, the use of the apparatus of a gymnasium The boys lose time in going to and returning from the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium.

This school has still no fire drill. The trustees should give directions as to the need of this precautionary measure. Prospective Public School teachers should become familiar with some form of school fire drill."

All the departments were graded I the highest.

Ventilation at Collegiate.

Mr. Crane remarked that when the Collegiate was opened the ventilation system operated splendidly. Possibly, he said, something had happened to the flues.

Mr. Ackerman mentioned the fact that the Property Committee had secured plans for a new ventilation system, but no action had been taken because they called for an expenditure of $1,[illegible]00.00.

Mr Gordon moved, seconded by Mr. Eastwood, that a copy of the reports of the Inspectors of the Collegiate Institute and Manual Training School be prepared for each member of the Board and the respective principals.

The question of ventilation will be re-opened by the Property Committee.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It beats like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

Both the transmiter and receiver of a new French telephone can be hidden in a vase of flowers, a table ornament or any other inconspicuous object.

UNION SOCIAL EVENING WAS GREAT SUCCESS

I. O. F. and W. O. W. Hold an Enjoyable Entertainment

The social evening held under the auspices of the I. O. F. and W. O. W. on Monday evening, in the Woodmen's Hall, proved to be very enjoyable. Although the night was stormy there was a good attendance of the members of both societies and their friends who expressed themselves as being well repaid for braving the storm. The brethren repesenting the Independent Order of Foresters were W. G. McKee, G. W. Powell, J. W. Buyers and J. McDonald, and representing the Woodmen of the World were A. Graham, C. J. Hicks, B. H Carr and E. Ivey. On motion Bro. J. W. Byers was chosen to preside over the meeting, and performed the duties of Chairman in his usual efficient manner. In a brief address he extended a welcome to those assembled, and then called on Bro. A Graham and Bro. G. W. Powell, who made brief addresses in the interests of both societies. The musical programme, as follows, was then proceeded with, each number being encored:

Vanaphone Song—Mr. Roy Powell
Solo—Mr. Albert Lee.
Recitation—Mr. Percy Luther.
Solo—Miss Mabel Penrose.
Recitation—Mr. J. John.
Solo—Mrs. Scholey.
Vanaphone Song—Mr. Roy Powell.
Solo—Miss Cora Peters.
Song—Mr. C. Coleman.
Highland Dance—Miss Helen Waterman.
Song—Master Earl Waterman.

Piano accompanists were Miss Alberta Rehill, Miss Penrose and Mr. Loader.

The ladies, including Mrs. E. Ivey Mrs. A. Bradshaw, Miss Eva Rhode house and Mrs. C. J. Hicks, super intended the dispensing of the refreshments, which were liberally distributed to all present. The first part of the programme was then concluded by votes of thanks to the ladies and committee, and the singing of God Save the King. Card games were also provided.

The second part of the programme was then proceeded with, when Mr. D. Quinlan, Mr. Loader and Mr. Sutherland's orchestra commenced and the young couples hopped the light fantastic until the small hour was reached.

During the recess for refreshments Mr. Roy Powell delighted the gathering with a number of vanaphone songs and recitations.

The entertainment was pronounced the best held for some time, and the indications are that another union social evening will be held under the same auspices in the near future.

BUTLER A BARONET.

Mistress Entertains in Honour of Her Japanese Servant.

A baronet in his own country, a butler in Cleveland, O., and for one ecstatic exhilarating afternoon the honoured guest at an exclusive society luncheon given my the mistress of the house where he is "in service," was the remarkable experience that befell Oichiro Yamanoto, Japanese butler at the home of Ralph L. Fuller, vice-president of a firm of manufacturing chemists and Cleveland bank director.

Yamanoto, a shizoku or nobleman in his own country, came to learn American ways and eventually attend college. During the recent grand opera week here Mrs. Fuller learned Yamanoto knew Mme. Tamaki Miura, Japanese prima donna—in fact, had attended high school with her in Japan.

Then the Japanese butler introduced the prima donna to his mistress, and because of the butler's request that the little Japanese woman not be told that he is "in service," Yamanoto was one of the invited guests at the fashionable luncheon which followed in the exclusive Union Club. After the feast Yamanoto returned to his butler job.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A Dollar-Meal for Five Cents—The most expensive foods are quite often entirely lacking in food value. They do not build muscle or supply energy. Measured by the cost of most foods, a breakfast or luncheon of Shredded Wheat with milk and cream is worth a dollar—and the cost is not over five cents. Two biscuits will supply all the strength needed for a half-day's work or play.

Safety First In the Movies

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, March 7.—A wonderfully realistic moving picture film in the interests of the Safety First movement was displayed in to-day a specially fitted car at Windsor Station, before Vice-President Bury and a number of C.P.R. officials. The film was produced by Mr. Marcus A. Dow, General Safety Agent, New York Central Lines, and tells the story of a railroad man, Jack Foster, whose carelessness endangered the happiness of his wife and home until his friend, Jim Stevens, a booster for "Safety First," convinces him by demonstrating awful examples that it is worse to gamble for life than to gamble in any other way. One man loses his leg, and other accidents are realistically portrayed in an exhibition at the Safety rally to which Jim Stevens takes Jack Foster, such as the shopman who loses an eye through not wearing gbggles, the carpenter losing a finger while working at a buzz saw without the guard, the brakeman being run over while running between moving cars, the engineman being killed while boarding the footboard of an engine in motion. Particularly impressive is the picture of a collision due to slowness in flagging. In order to promote the safety first movement in Canada, Mr. Bury has secured a copy of the film which will be offered to moving picture houses at divisional and other important railroad points along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The Hexathlon contest which are being held at the "Y" gymnasium are proving very interesting now. Physical Director Roper has every class in the gymnasium engaged in the contest, and the boys expect to make some good time in the running and jumping events. All members of the "gym" classes are requested to attend regular as the final contest will take place about the 1st of April.

Last night the Junior Collegiate Gymnasium class held their annual supper. Over thirty boys sat down to the tables which were groaning with good things provided for the occasion. Mrs. Roper kindly looked after the arrangements for the supper which was much appreciated by the boys.

An Address.

Sunday afternoon at 4:15 the regular meeting for men will be addressed by Lieut. P. G. Might. A general invitation is extended to all men and older boys of the city to attend this meeting. Lieut. Might has had a long experience with men and boys' work, and his address will prove both helpful and instructive to all.

The dormitory rooms at the Y.M. C.A. are all filled up at the present time. Some of the rooms have only temporary guests, and any young man wishing to secure a room permanently should have his name placed on the waiting list, which can be seen at the General Secretary Office.

April 6 and 7 have been selected as the dates for the big Circus which will be held in the local Y.M.C.A. The different classes have started to get their work in shape, and some new and interesting stunts will be seen for the first time.

USING LIQUID AND GAS.

Germans in Verdun Battle Also Have Irritating Vapors.

PARIS, March 8.—The Germans, in their assaults in the Verdun region, are using several sorts of burning liquid projectors. One of these is in the form of a small tank, which is carried on the back, filled with a composition liquid, which seems to be mostly kerosene. Attached to the nozzle is an igniting apparatus.

The liquid is projected by means of a hand pump. The radius of action of the oil depends on the skill and the physical effort of the man who projects it, but it is ordinarily from 40 to 80 feet.

Some French soldiers have been burned to a crisp by the flaming liquid. Other chemical weapons used by the Germans in this battle include asphyxiating shells, vapors which irritate the eye and incendiary shells.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 538 College Street, will be answered—on Wednesdays—questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating, may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

C. B. R., Hastings, Ont. — (1) Where can I buy fire proof barn paint? Or, if I can make it myself, please give me a recipe. (2) What kind of paint is the cheapest to get? How is it made? (3) How much space will a gallon of paint cover?

Ans.—(1) There are several makes of fire proof paint on the market. Your dealer will recommend one to you. Some make their own by the addition of Sal Ammoniac to ordinary paint, or an asbestos paint. There are also some red oxide of iron pigments considered fireproof and are inexpensive. (2) The cheapest paint is the dearest always. There is greater danger to-day than at any time in my memory of substituting inferior ingredients for the proper. There is no satisfactory substitute for linseed oil, nothing that even approaches it for durability, and the same applies to turpentine and white lead. The danger to-day lies in the fact that, white lead, linseed oil and turpentine are so high in price and going higher, that it is a temptation to one to use some inferior substitute, that is much cheaper in price, and as good in quality, according to the blittered phraseology of some questionable advertisers who are anxious to exploit their inferior goods. Bear this in mind. According to the highest authorities of to-day, so far, nothing has been discovered that compares even favourably with white lead, linseed oil and turpentine (especially the oil). Cheap paints are made in many ways. Oils are so bought as to produce cheap pigments for two cents a pound, and thin with lime water, and the novice could not tell it from the genuine, by appearance. But in the end the cheap paint is dear. It depends on the surface to a great extent. A gallon of paint would cover 500 square feet of some surfaces and probably only 100 square feet of others. A rough absorbent surface takes more paint than a hard smooth one.

Poison, Peterborough, Ont.— Last week I read with interest your article on arsenic poison in wall paper, and am almost convinced that wall paper is healthy. But how does it compare (from a health standpoint) with paint or Kalsomine?

Ans.—There are conditions where I believe wall paper healthier than kalsomine and vice versa. Some of the cheap wall papers, where the colouring matter is made to adhere with common glue, certainly is not healthy. glue put in the paste for hanging, likewise. On the other hand, paint makes some people sick, lead poisoning resulting in some cases. Kalsomines made with glue are unhealthy. But this fact remains— that rarely does one see a hospital decorated with wall paper. Kalsomine containing no glue whatever, I believe to be the healthiest. But unfortunately they are like the proverbial "hen's teeth, few and far between." I only know of one make.

A.B.C., Peterborough, Ont.— How many rolls of paper should I buy for a room 9 feet high, 11 feet 6 inches wide, by 12 feet long? It has one door and one window.

Ans.—6 rolls ceiling, 13 rolls wall, 18 yards border.

Constant Admirer, City—As an interested reader of your weekly column, I would be glad to know which is the best wall decoration, paint or paper?

Ans.—You will find the answer to your query above regarding the sanitary elements. On the other hand paper is the best where the walls are cracked or poorly trowelled, or for elaborate decoration less expensive than paint. But for bathrooms, kitchens, etc., where steam arises, paint is best, as very often the steam loosens the paper.

West Ender, City—Kindly publish the colours that are most luminous. I mean the ones that reflect the most light.

Edith C., Peterborough, Ont.—How can I make a stain for fumed oak?

Ans.—I hardly understand your question. If you mean a stain to imitate fumed oak, it would be necessary to know what kind of wood you want to stain, as a stain suitable for basswood would not do on ash for instance.

"OUR MINISTER'S BIRTHDAY" A MUSICAL SKETCH

Will Be Given in Knox Church Lecture Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday Next

The Young Peoples' Society of Knox Church, who have previously given to the public some excellent amateur performances, are putting on a musical sketch in the lecture room of the church two nights next week, Tuesday and Wednesday, 14th and 15th. The sketch is entitled "Our Minister's Birthday," and will have a cast of seventeen people. There are two parts to the sketch, and it has fifteen musical numbers. The members have been giving particular attention to the proper putting on of the play and its presentation will no doubt be as well received as their play "The New Minister," which was a decided success a couple of years ago.

FRANCE IS AROUSED BY SWISS PARTIALITY

Acquittal of Colonels Followed by Ill-treatment of French Airment

PARIS, March 8.—The feeling which has been aroused in France by the reported partiality of the Swiss toward Germany, as indicated by the acquittal of the two Swiss Colonels accused of having supplied military information to the Germans has been increased by the publication to-day of a long letter from Eugene Gilbert, the French aviator interned in Switzerland. M. Gilbert, who escaped from Switzerland last summer, and was ordered to return says in part:

"The treatment to which I am subjected is worse than that of a prisoner. I envy my comrades in Germany, who at least can communicate with their friends, which I cannot do. When I was first interned I thought it was only momentary punishment of a military kind, but I am now informed that it may be prolonged indefinitely. All this time a German officer who is interned and who also tried to escape, is allowed to frequent cafes and beer saloons dine with friends and stay out until midnight."

OPEN MEETINGS OF RED CROSS SOCIETY

It is true that the financial statement each month so far has shown a substantial balance in hand, but that is due to the fact, which has been explained frequently, that many of the subscribers secured by the Advisory Board, preferred to pay their year's subscription in full instead of having it collected each month, hence the balance in hand. The "assured" income of the society was allocated at the beginning of the financial year, and so much allowed to each department, and the society depends entirely on the generous help of other subscribers to answer any special appeal that is made to it by headquarters, or for any extraordinary expenditure that may arise. If these subscriptions fall off we will be unable to respond to any call, no matter how urgent it is. Just now it is money with which to buy rubber goods, which are needed badly, and in view of the price rubber has risen to means a large expenditure.

The executive has the utmost confidence in the continued generosity of the public and assures them that both locally and at headquarters the greatest thought and care is given to the wise and careful expenditure of all monies received.

Have Adopted Prisoners.

The society's last list of Canadian prisoners of war received from Mrs. Rivers Bulkely is now exhausted, but another list is expected, as the secretary, Miss Laura Davidson wrote some time ago requesting another.

"Adoptions" seem popular and it is hoped that all adopting a soldier boy are remembering that "adoption" entails writing to them as well, but there must be no mention of the war or of military doings of any kind in the letters.

There is still room for workers in the work room, and as there is fierce fighting to come for our boys and others 'ere long, fighting which will tax the resources of the British Canadian and French Red Cross Societies to the uttermost come and help to make surgical dressings. Headquarters sent us word last week "you cannot send too many."

Much lies behind that statement to the thinnking woman, when you realise what it means you will go to the work room, and "do your bit," even though you have no boy of your own to send to battle for the right.

Annie Forbes Allan.

Seats for "The White Feather" engagement will be placed on sale at "The Grand" to-morrow morning. If there is anything in a name "The White Feather" should have a prosperous career. It brought the whole city to its feet on its first recent presentation, and if this engagement at "The Grand" is not the season's success, it will be proof indeed that Peterborough's taste has deteriorated. "The White Feather" came here first, earlier in the season, modestly heralded, morestly announced, and not so much was expected of it since it was practically unknown outside of London, New York and some Australian cities, yet it met a fate that no press agent's attempt, no sensational advertising could give it, it scored a veritable triumph. The company, by far the best seen here in a long time, plays with taste and power to convince. Certainly nothing finer than the performance of Albert Brown as Brent has ever been seen on the local stage, his work is absolutely flawless. He is ably assisted by a capital company of English players, and each and all of them are assured of a cordial welcome when they reppear in the roles with which they have been so long associated.

SPANIARDS TAKE PASSIONATE VIEW OF GREAT WAR

Are Either Enthusiastic Friends of Allies or Implacable, Hateful Enemies.

"Least neutral among neutral nations" is what a correspondent of the Paris Tempe calls Spain. "Of course," he adds, "Spain is officially neutral, but the Spaniards are not. At least, they are as little neutral as possible, each individual taking sides in the great struggle with as intense earnestness as if he were actually engaged in the war himself. From one end to the other the country is divided in two war parties, very unequal in numbers, but equally passionate. A Spaniard is either Francophile or Germanophile. This is a new classification which fits all and admits of no exceptions. There is no middle way, no third group pretending to be impartial on the war question.

"When you hear the name of a Spaniard mentioned it is invariably given a qualifying affix, either Germanophile or Francophile. In place of the latter is sometimes used the word 'aliado' (ally). And there is, too, a great significance in the tone in which the appellation is pronounced. When, a few days ago, I asked one of our most ardent sympathizers here for the name of a certain politician who passed us on the street he replied, with an inimitable expression of disdain and repugnance in his voice, as if he were referring to some disgusting vermin: 'Oh, that one. That is Mr. So-and-So., Germanophile.'

"War is the one and only topic of conversation, discussions, controversies, and lectures. Two Spaniards cannot be together without talking about the war, and they don't do it in a dispassionate, orderly manner, either, as when one speaks of other people's affairs, but they throw their whole souls into it with the most fervent ardour. One would think that the war was with them a most important personal affair, one of vital interest to them. These war discussions have caused as many dissensions, quarrels and estrangements among the Spanish people as ever sprang from any of the most violent crises in their nation's history.

"All facts, even minute details, connected with the war are perfectly familiar to the Spaniards. They study everything very attentively and retain every little incident in their memories much better than we do ourselves. They are awaiting the war news with impatience and they receive it with bursts of emotion. They are fired by our own hopes, they triumph at our successes, they fight all the time in our ranks. The day when a German cruiser was destroyed in the Baltic the event was announced to me by a Spaniard in these words: 'We have sunk a German cruiser.' Again, when our fortunes have been looking dubious, as, for instance, at certain stages in the Balkan campaign, I have seen Spaniards almost distracted by anxiety, so that I felt it my duty to console and reassure them as best I could. Their sentiments are fully as strong as ours. Their indignation over any contemptible acts of Germany waxes just as hot as ours.

"Whatever side they take, the Spaniards carry their sympathy or their hatred to the utmost limits. They are either enthusiastic, faithful friends or implacable, hateful enemies. The great war drama has enveloped their entire existence. Bossuet's saying that 'every spectator at a theatrical performance is himself a silent actor' can be appropriately applied to the Spaniards in this instance, only with the modification that the latter are not at all silent."

NO PRICE TOO HIGH TO PAY.

Tactics at Verdun Are Explained by German Officer.

PARIS, March 8.—"The first clear statement from the German side why the general staff decided to attack Verdun is supplied by a German officer captured on the Russian front," wires the Petrograd corespondent of the Temps. "This German officer gave the following explanation: 'Verdun is an advanced point thrust into our flank. How could we attempt to march upon Paris from any other point, leaving this corner unflattened? As we advanced on Paris the position at Verdun would be left behind us instead of upon our flank. We are told that the price we pay is too high. But what does price matter when it is absolutely necessary to get something? Now that everything in warfare is dear, victories cannot be bought cheaply. Whatever our losses may be they are infinitesimal compared with what we would lose by defeat. We know what we are doing when we prepare ourselves for sacrifices.'"

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT! STOP DANDRUFF AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Hair Stops Falling Out and Gets Thick, Wavy, Strong and Beautiful

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, just try it.

"The Sporting Duchess"

Moving Pictures That Move the Impulses—Tragedy and Comedy at the Empire Theatre

The five-reel production entitled "The Sporting Duchess", from the famous play of the same name will be put on at the Empire Theatre for the three last days and nights of this week.

This is one of the greatest of all moving picture plays, every scene being a film of feeling in which the female tarts stand out in all their, ardent, pamionate, attractive and thrilling nature with mid-day incidents, mingled.

"The Sporting Duchess" with popular Rose Coghlan in the title role is unquestionably the most fascinating photoplay of sporting life ever shown. Always absorbingly interesting when acted upon the stage. "The Sporting Duchess" is doubly gripping on the screen because of the added features that are impossible of reproduction in an ordinary theatre. One of these is a thrilling horse race. But even without the great race track setting, the story itself is a powerful one and gives unlimited scope to a company of rare skill. And such a cast has been selected with none other than the widely celebrated star, Rosa Coghlan, in the stellar role.

As an afterpiece, the laughable comedy entitled 'The Princess at the Bat' will be shown.

MR. AND MRS. LAFAYETTE REID

It is with feelings of deep regret that the Examiner is called upon to chronicle the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. L. Reid of Burleigh Township.

In the death of Mr. Reid, who passed away on Tuesday morning, Feb. 22, at his home, Burleigh Township has lost one of its pioneer residents, and one who, in completing his allotted span of life, will long be remembered as one having done everything in his power to promote the common good of this community in which he lived for over fifty years.

The late Mr. Reid was in his 78th year. Although for several years he had not been very rugged, his death came as a shock to all, as he had been confined to his bed only a few days by a relapse from la grippe. He was married to Susannah Leslie of Douro, who survived him by only one week. In politics he was a life-long Liberal, but took no active part and in religion he was an adherent of the Methodist Church.

The late Mrs. Reid was in her 67th year. As she had been in poor health for some years her death was not unexpected, but it has cast a gloom over the community.

They were both very highly esteemed by all for their hospitality, liberality, honesty and kind heartedness, in every sense of the word. They took an active part in Church work, having many times given free use of their premises for Church teas and socials, etc.

They are survived by three daughters and two sons, namely: Mrs. A. R. Mallory of Smith, Miss Beatrice of Rochester, Mrs. Wm. Spence, and Messrs. Bruce and Howard at home. Two brothers, Messrs. W. Reid, of Warsaw, and Jas Reid of Burleigh, survive Mr. Reid, and one brother, Mr. J. Leslie, of Douro, survives Mrs. Reid.

The funeral services, which were attended by a large concourse of friends and relatives, were held at the family residence, and then the funerals proceeded to Warsaw cemetery. Rev. S. Carr of Apsley officiated, assisted by Rev. C. Barret of Lakefield.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Albert Reid, Hilliard Reid, Gordon Reid, Wm. McCauley, E. J. Leslie, and A. R. Mallory.

The bereaved family have the deep sympathy of all in this their double bereavement.

"Christ will gather in His own,
To the place where he is gone;
Where their heart and treasure lie
Where our life is hid on high.
Day by day the voice saith: "Come,
Enter thine eternal home";
Asking not if we can spare
This dear soul it summons there."

We must ourselves learn the ways of right and wrong, and having learned, we must choose.—Marie Corelli.

Goodness is usually its own vindication, but no always, for holiness is not invariably self-evident.—Rev. R. J. Campbell.

M. RIBOT

Alexander Felix Joseph Ribot, the French statesman, who is directing the finance of the war, is 74 years old. For over forty years he has been active in the political life of France and has held the most important offices in the Government. The Franco-Russian alliance was brought about by him, and he had a large share in achieving the entente with England.

KING EDWARD FORESAW

His Statesmanship on Russian Question is Here Revealed

A hitherto unpublished letter written forty years ago by Gambetta, the French statesman, to a Corsican Senator contains some striking prophecies. He says: "Affairs concerning Russia become more numerous and important every day. Lord Lyons (then Ambassador at Paris) keeps the Prince of Wales (later Edward VII.) posted daily as to the difficulties raised and encountered by that Power. Russia's political dreams will be impeded by Austria, who has already assumed a hostile attitude. She is influencing Roumania. Can you imagine in the course of time Austria allying herself with Roumania and Turkey against Russia? What a conflict!

"The Prince of Wales, however, foresees it. He does not share the hostility shown by a portion of the British nation towards Russia. His opposes with all his young authority the application of measures which might be prejudicial to her. I discern in him the makings of a great statesman. It is clear that Bismarck desires an alliance with the Austrians. Before long I can see Russia and England uniting if only we follow a reasonable home policy."

Russian Wolves Alert

Large packs of wolves on the right bank of the Dvina have done a lot of damage among the horses and other domestic animals. There have been cases in which they have carried out watchdogs from farmyards in the full light of day, and the peasants have been compelled to beat off their attacks with clubs. It is believed that the wolves have been passed from the forests of Livonia and Poland by the incessant artillery fire.

The Useful Thumb-Nail

Every "Tommy" has to keep the proved barrel of his rifle spotlessly clean, and every morning on parade his commanding officer examines his weapon to see that there is no rust or dirt in the interior of the rifle. An ingenious ruse is practised to enable the officer to minutely examine the barrel of a rifle. When the soldier holds it up for inspection, he slides back the bolt at the breech and inserts his thumb in the slot formerly occupied by the bolt, so that his nail is at an angle which reflects light up the barrel; thus when the officer looks down the rifle from the muzzle end he can see at a glance whether the bore is clean, as the thumb-nail throws a light into every corner.

J. H. EASTWOOD, Lieut.
Assistant Adjutant for Adjt. 93rd O.S. Battalion, C.E.F.

Just at present there are five units looking for recruits in Peterborough: the Engineers, 52nd Battery, 59th and 80th Battalions, all competing with the 93rd in the race for men. In spite of the opposition, the local Battalion is still getting recruits, adding eleven to the strength since yesterday morning.

M.G.S. at Play with the Keene Cutters.

The Machine Gun Section of the 93rd clashed with Keene at Brock Street Rink last night.

The M. G. S. were in fine form, having been in strict training for the last week. The game opened very fast and finished fast, the Keene team not being keen enough to continue playing, the odds being against them.

McCarty scored the first goal for Keene. Russel followed by scoring one for the M.G.S., quickly followed by one from Windsor, who made a brilliant rush and found the net.

After fifteen minutes play Keene decided that the M.G.S. were a too boisterous team. The game ended in favour of the M.G.S. by a score of 2 to 1.

Pte. R. Micks played a flourishing game in the nets.

France, Feb. 19, 1916

Dear Editor,—Friends in Peterboro have sent me copies of the edition with my photo and also a picture of my chum, Pte. A. Holt. It might interest you to know that the 39th Battalion, is a reserve battalion and that all the original 39th men are now at the front. We were drafted to different battalions and Pte. Holt and myself went to the 26th battalion of St. Johns, New Brunswick.

The 26th is known throughout Canada as the "Fighting 26th" for their good work of October 13th to 15th when they charged a crater and accomplished the end in view.

Pte. Holt is now wounded and away from the trenches. His photo being on the same page as my own was most cheerful to me for I have no photo of him and I took the one of him out of your edition. Wishing the paper and your staff every success in the good work of recruiting, ads, and reports.

I remain,
Yours gratefully,

FOR THE ENGINEERS

Sergt. Marshall Here Looking For Recruits

Another unit of the C.E.F. has entered the recruiting field in Peterborough. Sergeant I. M. Marshall of the Canadian Engineers is here on a recruiting mission.

The Engineer Corps is considered the highest branch of the service and is one of the most mobile. It also provides unique benefits to its members. The training the men receive gives them a fund of practical general knowledge not to be obtained from any other source. Skilled workmen not only do "their bit," but incidentally learn a lot, which is certain to be of future benefit to them.

The Engineers are engaged in building bridges and obstacles. They superintend and direct the construction of fortified positions and entrenchments, erect telegraph and telephone lines of communication, sigal flares and illuminating devices and in short, all things that require intelligence and ability.

Any one wishing to join or secure information, apply to Sergt. Marshall, Oriental Hotel.

KAISER'S VAST POWER

Forms of War Lord's Government of Vaterland

The German Bundesrat, or Federal Council, numbers sixty-one members, and represents the States of the empire as such, whereas the Reichstag represents the individual voters. The members of the Bundesrat are appointed by the Governors o fthe different States for each session. The 397 members of the Reichstag are elected by universal manhood suffrage and ballot for the term of five years. Prussia controls seventeen votes in the Bundesrat, and it is largely through his power, as King of Prussia, over this large vote, that the Emperor of Germany exercises so much authority in the government of his country. Except for financial matters, the Reichstag has very little actual power, and does not initiate legislation. The Chancellor is responsible to the Emperor and remains in office if the Emperor approves of his course even after a "no confidence" vote has been returned by the Reichstag. The Emperor, as such, is in supreme command of the army and the navy

FILLING A CORNER IN A NEWSPAPER

A few evenings ago the Montreal Herald and Telegraph representative attended a meeting in aid of one of the many good causes for which public sympathy is sought in these days. One of the speakers, a much respected doctor of divinity, deplored what he thought was a fact that the newspapers paid so little attention to the cause which he had so much at heart.

"Why," he said, "there is scarcely ever anything in the papers about the work, and when there it is only to fill up a corner."

The Herald makes the incident the subject for the following editorial comment:

"This good man had never been an editor of a daily newspaper in a city like Montreal. That is why he did not know what he was talking about.

"Nobody tried to set him right.

"Nobody said a word for the newspapers. We didn't expect they would

"Most of those present probably thought that receiving appeals for aid relieved an editor of any anxiety as to the danger of going to press next day without all the corners filled up, and doubtless some of them did feel that it was perfectly true—the newspapers and their editors were terribly selfish, if not absolutely wicked, institutions.

"We are used to popular misconceptions.

"We don't like to talk about the power of the press and the great influence we wield in moulding public opinion."

"We prefer to let these things sneak for themselves.

"But we feel that, just for this once, we owed it to ourselves to point out to our friend, the Doctor of Divinity, and to his hearers that there are newspapers in Montreal that never go to press without a certain amount of what is known as "free publicity" for one good cause or another.

"This matter varies in form. Sometimes it is an appeal; sometimes an acknowledgment; sometimes a plain statement of good work done—a specific case of dire need, a note of personal service, a 'reader' about a coming entertainment, a plaint about cramped quarters for good work, a report of a meeting of a committee harassed for lack of funds, one of a series of 'booming' notices for a tag day or bazaar; or perhaps even a week's campaign on a large scale.

"These are inserted by the publishers—not grudgingly—but with the desire to help an effort that is really deserving to take one's part in the constant 'uplift' work that goes on in a city like this.

"But there is just this one point that organizers of religious or philanthropic work would do well to remember—these notices are not a boon to an editor 'to fill up a corner'.

"The gray hair or furrowed brow of an editor of to-day is not caused by the problem of how to fill the paper so much as by the incessant worry how to find room for the columns and columns of matter for the insertion of which there is insistent demand.

"Thousands of words by cable every day, the volume immensely swollen by the news of this cruel war, thousands of words by telegraph from all over this continent; thousands of words embracing the news gathered by a large staff of reporters in Montreal and suburbs, lengthy debates in Parliament and Legislature, the fluctuations of the stock market, the sporting news of the season, the work in which women are engaged, and then the illustrations, which take up large space—these are a few of the features for which an editor has to find space in every addition.

"And yet we hear of kindly, well-meant efforts to help us fill up a corner!"

It seems to the Fourth Estate that the Herald's comment very appropriately fits the case.

If other newspapers would once in a while call attention to such misapprehension they would relieve somewhat the weight of public misunderstanding that makes the editor's hair gray and his brow furrowed.—New York Fourth Estate.

NO PRISONERS KILLED.

British Press Bureau Issues Report on German Camp.

LONDON, March 8.—The Official Press Bureau has announced a reference to a report printed in the Times that an exchanged prisoner of war had stated that two British prisoners at the Gustrow detention camp had been bayoneted for smoking in a prohibited area, that James W. Gerard, American Ambassador to Germany, had sent Lithgow Osborne, third secretary to the Embassy, to Gustrow to investigate the report.

Ambassador Gerard forwarded the report to the British authorities, the Press Bureau states. It reads as follows:

"I visited the Gustrow detention camp on February 19th, and talked with a large number of British non-commissioned officers. All are unanimous in saying that they heard of no such occurrence. In point of fact, instead of complaints, I heard praise from the interned British soldiers."

Germans Continue to Make Futile Attacks Around Verdun

RUSSIANS HAVE CAPTURED TOWN OF RIZA

SLAYS SEVEN OF OWN FAMILY WHILE INSANE

LAWTON, Oklahoma, March 9. — Testimony tending to show that Daniel O'Kane, a farmer, killed seven members of his family and then took his own life was introduced before a coroner's jury which held an inquest at the O'Kane home near here where a negro farmhand yesterday morning found the bodies of seven of the murdered persons, with O'Kane fatally shot, lying beside them. O'Kane died last night.

Witnesses testified that O'Kane frequently had quarreled with his aged father, James O'Kane, and gave their belief that the strained relations existing between son and father caused Daniel to become temporarily insane.

The dead are: Mrs. Daniel D'Kane, the five O'Kane children, an infant and four others, ranging in age from five to 13; James O'Kane, 75 and Daniel O'Kane, about 48.

The children's heads had been crushed in with a hammer and the throats of the four elder children had been cut with a razor. Mrs. O'Kane's head had been crushed with a hammer and she also had been shot. The elder O'Kane and Daniel O'Kane and the baby had bullet wounds through their heads. A bloody hammer, a razor and a revolver were found in the house.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with the result.

Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of "GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS," and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old. 24

Germany Expected To Declare War on Portugal By Saturday, Says Report

Germany's Note to Portugal Has Been Ignored---Germans Think Portugal Is Forcing a Declaration of War From Germany.

LONDON, March 8.—Germany is expected to declare war on Portugal, Saturday.

PARIS, March 8.—French have made further regains around Verdun and Champagne. Fighting is continuing all along the line.

ATHENS, March 8.—Cairo despatches say Russians are just a day's march from Bagdad.

TORONTO, March 8.—Premier Hearst replying to the prohibition appeal said a majority vote might make Ontario dry in place of the three-fifths vote.

LONDON, March 8.—Twenty-nine German battleships were encountered by a Dutch steamer on Monday. After asking the whereabouts of the British fleet they steered north.

LONDON, March 8.—First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour criticizing Churchill's attack on the Admiralty declared his assertions paradoxical and of the wildest kind. Balfour does not favour supplanting of Jackson by Lord Fisher.

AMSTERDAM, March 8.—Germany is preparing an ultimatum to Portugal because her note has been ignored. The Germans think Portugal is forcing a declaration of war from Germany.

"SLEEPING MYSTERY" BECOMES CONSCIOUS

Has Record of Six Weeks' Continual Dozing.

BOSTON, March 9.—Regaining consciousness for an hour or more, Miss Fannie Greenis, aged 22, who was found in an unconscious condition last week near Harvard Square, Cambridge, last week Tuesday night, and taken to the Cambridge hospital again relapsed into a doze.

Miss Greenis is known as "the sleeping mystery girl." She has a record of six weeks' continual sleep and is a puzzle to the medical fraternity. Doctors throughout the country are interested in her case. She is in what medicine authorities call a sub conscious state of mind. Last June she was in that condition 14 days.

She is given liquid food at the hospital. Monday she was visited by her parents, who were questioned by the hospital authorities concerning her childhood days.

MISSING GIRL SEEN AT BATH

Called on Friend There Some Time After Leaving Straatsburg

BATH, March 9.—Dispatches under New York date have carried a story of the mysterious disappearance of Miss Harriet A. Root, a school teacher, from her home in Straatsburg, N. Y. The story was featured in the news, as the apprehension dwelt that Miss Root was either a prisoner in New York City or that she was the victim of foul play. Light upon the case was thrown yesterday by the statement by Mrs. Matthew Runner, of this village, that Miss Root called at the Runner home in Cruger Street here on Thursday of last week. Miss Root and Mrs. Runner were girls in the same town in this county, North Cochocton. Miss Root was with a man, apparently about 28 years old well dressed, with dark hair and eyes, and smooth face, whom she introduced as 'my friend, Mr. Clark.'

Miss Root related to Mrs. Runner that she was in town for a short stay and remembering that Mrs. Runner lived here, had consulted a directory, obtained the address and had taken a taxicab and ran out for a short visit. Miss Root appeared in excellent spirits and health and declined Mrs. Runner's invitation to remain for a visit, saying "I have no time as I am obliged to catch a train."

She volunteered no information to account for her presence here, nor did she volunteer any information concerning Mr. Clark. Neither did Miss Root state where she had met Mr. Clark, who was a stranger to Mrs. Runner.

The New York dispatches stated that Miss Root in leaving Straatsburg, on February 11, said: "I am just going down to New York on a shopping trip and will return within a day or two."

ROB WOMAN DRUGGED WITH CHEWING GUM

Victim Is Placed on New York Train In Chicago.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Mrs. Rose Luto, mother of eight children, went to Macdugal street police station Tuesday night and said that last Wednesday two women stopped her on the street in Chicago and gave her a piece of gum. She put it in her mouth, chewed a few times and lost consciousness.

When she recovered she was on a train with her little boy, Philip, who also had chewed some of the gum, and in time the train reached New York. Her hand bag, which contained $10 and a chamois sack, containing $90, which hung around her neck, were missing when she reached here.

Mrs. Luto remained in bed here for several days, strangers having taken in her and the boy.

Tuesday night the police sent a telegram to Chicago asking them to notify Mr. Luto of 882 Garibaldi place, of his wife's experience.

BULGARS SEIZE GREEK SOLDIER

Inadvertently Crossing Frontier, is Made Prisoner and Plea For Return is Denied

ATHENS, via Paris, March 9.—Further friction has occurred between Greek and Bulgarian soldiers along the frontier. A Greek soldier inadvertently crossed the border and was made prisoner by the Bulgarians. A demand that he be returned to Greece not having been complied with, three additional regiments of Greek troops were sent today to the district of Drama, thirty miles northeast of Seres.

An Athens despatch of Sunday night, filed after the foregoing delayed message, said Bulgarian soldiers had attacked Greek frontier guards in the neighborhood of Macikovo, near the frontier.

TEN PRISONERS BURNED TO DEATH IN EL PASO

U. S. Officials Were Using Gasoline to kill Vermin—Ill Feeling Develops.

EL PASO, March 9.—Ten prisoners were burned to death and 22 others seriously injured in the El Paso jail when one of the prisoners lighted a match for a cigarette while all prisoners were being given a bath in gasolene and vinegar to kill vermin Most of the victims were Mexicans.

Following the catastrophe, bad temper developed in Juarez, where the report spread that all the Mexican prisoners in the jail had been huddled together and burned to death.

This report, following ill-feeling prevailing for several days past, as a result of the efforts of the United States to prevent typhus fever being brought over the line by Mexican immigrants, resulted in the Juarez officials to avoid trouble, stopping all cars at the international bridge last night and turning all Americans back to El Paso before dusk.

A car from the Juarez race track, bringing Americans back from the races, was fired on several times from the darkness while in Juarez, presumably by Carranza soldiers.

Motorman C. A. Phelps was shot twice in the head and was trampled on by passengers trying to escape. He will probably die.

Teutons Pour Thousands of Shells Upon French Positions East of Goose Hill

Enemy Driven Out of the Corbeau Woods By Vicious French Counter Attacks--Heavy Cannonading on Both Banks of the Meuse.

LONDON, Eng., March 9.—French trenches were smothered in storms of fire in a renewal of heavy German artillery assaults on the whole crescent-shaped Verdun front, according to latest despatches from Paris to-day.

The cannonade became most violent yesterday on both banks of the Meuse. Driven out of the Corbeau woods position by vicious French counter- attacks, the Teutons poured thousands of shells in upon French positions east of Goose Hill, and followed with infantry attacks.

The German War Office, minimizing the importance of these operations, declared in the latest official statement that the Germans attacked on the west bank of the Meuse with the sole object of straightening their front.

Paris despatches, however, report that the German artillery fire at the most, equalled the terrific cannonade around Douaumont. Paris believes the Crown Prince will launch another heavy attack from the northwest.

Soldiers Who Attacked Lutheran Clergyman at Berlin Go Free

BERLIN, Ont., March 9.—The Police Court room was not large enough to accommodate the crowd which desired to witness the final act in the Tappert case yesterday. Magistrate Weir's entrance silenced the babel and the soldiers present stood at attention.

Sergeant-Major Blood and Pte. Schaefer remained standing and were asked by his Worship if they had anything to say why sentence should not be passed up them. They replied, "No, sir."

"Have you anything to say further in justification of your action?" and E. W. Clement, acting for the soldiers, said he had nothing to plead.

"I purpose suspending sentence and had hoped that the Crown Attorney would be here to have given his consent to this, but as he is not here I must act alone and obtain his consent later. I think the ends of justice will be served if sentence is suspended.

WARNING FOR FUTURE.

"In allowing you to go on suspended sentence you must remember that you can be called at any time, especially if you offend, and be sentenced on the charge which is before you to-day."

The Court addressed the prisoners at some length, pointing out how the standard of British loyalty had been improved since the 118th Battalion had been formed. "We expect more from men in uniform, especially the King's uniform, and it is the duty of the soldiers to work with the civil police to see that law and order is observed, not violated. When your deputation that night was denied entrance it should not have been turned into a mob. I don't think any serious bodily harm has come to Tappert, and the offence is practically one of common assault."

ALIENS AGREE TO BE LOYAL.

Over five hundred men of the enemy alien nationality have so far signed the undertaking to remain peaceful citizens during the progress of the war and three men have been sent to an internment camp by the Chief of Police O'Neil and a Dominion police officer who is assisting him, and it appears that if Mr. Weichel, of North Waterloo, does not pull the political strings at Ottawa, things should be pretty well cleaned up within the next thirty days. The percentage of Germans so far registered is about one per cent. and the Austrians and Galicians appear eager to register and those who have been here three years are applying for their naturalization papers, which, of course, will not be issued until after the war.

General Otter was reported to have come here to look over the situation and he is expected again.

SWITZERLAND HARSH TO FRENCH AVIATOR

PARIS, March 9.—The feeling which has been aroused in France by the reported partiality of the Swiss toward Germany as indicated by the acquittal of the two Swiss colonels accused of having supplied military information to the Germans has been increased by the publication of a long letter from Eugene Gilyert, a French aviator, interned in Switzerland. Mr. Gilbert, who escaped from Switzerland last summer and was ordered to return, says, in part:

"The treatment to which I am subjected is worse than that of a prisoner. I envy my comrades in Germany, who at least can communicate with their friends, which I cannot do. When I was first interned I thought it was only momentary punishment of a military kind, but I am now informed that it may be prolonged indefinitely. All this time a German officer, who is interned and who also tried to escape, is allowed to frequent cafes and beer saloons, dine with friends and stay out until midnight.

NEW WAR LOAN IN U. S.

Another British Loan For $500,000,000 is Virtually Concluded.

NEW YORK, Mar. 7.—Wall street had a strong intimation that the negotiations between the officials of the British Treasury and J. P. Morgan, representing a syndicate of American bankers, for establishing in this country another British credit, had been virtually concluded.

It was said that Mr. Morgan would return to New York probably within two weeks, when the terms of the agreement would be announced.

The opinion was expressed that fully $500,000,000 of foreign-owned American securities could be taken immediately on loans running from one to three years, and that at the expiration of each term the collateral could be sold in the market to the advantage of the foreign owners if at that time they should elect to dispose of their investments.

BEAUTY DOCTOR TELLS SECRET

Detroit Beauty Doctor Gives Simple Recipe to Darken Gray Hair and Promote its Growth.

Miss Alice Whitney, a well-known beauty doctor of Detroit, Mich., recently gave out the following statement: "Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, promote its growth and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 2 ozs. of bay rum, a small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of the hair, relieve itching and scalp disease, and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."

DEPLORES STAND OF SWITZERLAND

BERNE, via Paris, March 9.— The political and economic crisis in which Switzerland remains plunged through the war was the chief subject of consideration at the opening session today of the Federal Chamber in National Council.

Dr. Spahn, of Schaffhausen, Council reporter in the German language, recommended the continuance of full powers to the Federal Council, and declared them to be indispensable in the present circumstances. He deprecated what he characterized as legends arising out of incidents such as the prosecution of the two Swiss colonels for communicating military secrets to representatives of Germany and Austria, and declared that that case should now be regarded as judged and done with. The economic situation, he said, was most serious, and Switzerland could only obtain supplies through the Federal Council.

Mr. Secretan, Council reporter in the French language, said it was impossible for intelligent men to remain indifferent in the presence of the struggle in which the great European nations were engaged. He regretted that Switzerland has not protested against the violation of Belgium.

OUR SERIAL STORY

BY LOUIS TRACY

"'Me only?' she cried, trying to rise in the bunk, and giving me such a piercing look.

"'No,' I said, 'we took off all hands.'

"Dad dear, I simply didn't dare say that her husband alone had been killed in trying to save her; so I put it that way, hoping she would not ask me any more. But she did then succeed in lifting herself on an elbow.

"'Child,' she said, 'they must never meet! God! They must not meet!'

"'Who must not meet?' said I, feeling rather frightened, as of something unseen that threatened me in the dark.

"'Your father and Walter Carmac,' she replied.

"'If Mr. Carmac is your husband, he is still unconscious,' I assured her, catching at the first straw that offered in the whirl of things.

"'Is your father on board?' she demanded, grasping my wrist.

"'Yes,' I said.

"Then she sank back in the bunk again, as though I had struck her, and began to sob. 'Oh, it is cruel, cruel!' she wept. 'After all these years my folly has found me out! Yvonne, Yvonne, don't you understand? I am your mother! I left your father eighteen years ago. I left you, my darling little baby! I sought freedom because your father was poor, and I longed to be rich. Look at me! Look at me, I tell you! Can you deny that I am your mother?'

"Oh, Dad, I knew in my heart that she was speaking truly; but even in that moment of torture I tried to be loyal to you, and begged her to close her eyes and let me cover her with the blankets. But she only laughed, in a ghastly way that was worse than tears. Then she heard one of the men in the other bunks groaning, and started up again, asking wildly who was there. I told her that two men were badly injured, and had been brought below. Unfortunately, I added that her husband was on deck.

"'Husband!' she cried. 'I am not worthy of such a husband! I bartered my very soul for luxury, and now I am being punished as I deserve. Yvonne, one night in Paris your mother kissed you when you were lying asleep in your cot, and I hurried away to what I deemed liberty. I have lulled my conscience for eighteen years into the belief that I was justified, that I had acted for the best, since my extravagant tastes were even then embittering your father's life. Yet the husband and child I abandoned have saved my miserable life, saved the man too who came into my life when I was free to marry again. Oh, why didn't you let me die? Perhaps I am dying now. Yvonne, you have my face; but a kindly Heaven must have spared you from having my nature. You, at least, will forgive. Kiss me once before the end comes. If you are merciful, an Eternal Judge may not condemn me utterly; for I have striven to atone by doing some good in the world. Unhappy myself, I have tried to make others happy.'

"Father dear, I could not refuse. I took her in my arms. I suppose she nearly fainted again, because she only spoke incoherently until she heard your voice in the hatch, when she whispered your name and buried her face in the clothes."

The girl's tremulous voice ceased, and there was no sound in the room save the crackling of elm logs and the pleasant babble of flames in the big open fireplace. At last, fearing lest he should break down completely, Ingersoll gently untwined his daughter's clasp, rose, and fumbled with a pipe,—man's sole harbour of refuge in emotional storms.

"Don't cry, Yvonne," he said brokenly. "It—it hurts. From what you tell me I gather that your—mother—is in a more critical condition than I imagined. Do you want to go to her—now?"

Yvonne too stood up. She brushed away the mist of tears, and looked at him with shining eyes. "Dad," she said, and a vibration rang in her voice that carried her father's memory back half a lifetime, back to the days when youth was golden and love was deemed everlasting, "when my mother was muttering in delirium, my own poor wits wandered. I asked myself what it all meant and I could not escape the bitter understanding that came to me. Then I remembered what you said one day when a wretched girl had been hounded out of the village because of her transgression."

"What I said?" repeated Ingersoll, baffled in the effort to follow her train of thought.

"Yes. You were speaking to some man who was angered by the merciless attitude of the peasant women to one of her own sex. You blamed the misleading teachings of narrow-minded theologians, and reminded him of Christ's words to the Pharisees who brought before Him some poor creature who had fallen. They taunted Him with the Mosaic law which ordered that she and her like should be pelted with stones; but He only said that the man who was without sin among them should cast the first stone. And the crowd melted and Christ was left alone with the sinner, whom He forgave. I did not know then just what you meant. I did not know until I heard my mother confessing her fault, and asking me, her daughter, for forgiveness."

"Unhappily our everyday world is not ruled by the maxims of Christ. The girl you speak of went to Brest, and her body was found in the harbour a fortnight later."

"I remembered that too."

"If you go to your mother now, you may set in motion influences that may darken your whole life."

"If I did not go I would never forgive myself—never!"

"Prudence, the merest sort of commonsense, warns me that we ought to get away from Pont Aven by the first possible train."

"Father dear what did Peridot say to you before he brought the Hirondelle round into the wind off Les Verres? I couldn't hear, of course. But do you think I could not read your face? Had you not to decide whether or not you would risk my life as well as your own? You were sure of Lorry—who wouldn't be? But it came hard to sacrifice me as well. Did you obey commonsense then? Did you even hesitate?"

Ingersoll threw up a hand in a gesture of sheer hopelessness and pretended to search for a box of matches on the mantlepiece. "So be it!" he said wearily. "Don't think I am afraid of any rival in your affection, Yvonne. Perhaps your woman's heart is wiser than my gray head. But, mark you, I make two stipulations! No matter what transpires, you must come home before eleven o'clock; and it is impossible, absolutely impossible, that your mother and I should ever meet!"

He was choosing his words carelessly that night. How "impossible" it would have seemed that morning had some wizard foretold the events of the succeeding hours! But Yvonne also was deaf to all but his yielding. She ran to him, and drew his face close to hers.

"Dad," she said, kissing him, "you are the best and dearest man in the world. How could your wife ever have left you? If I live a hundred years, I shall never understand that."

She was going but; he stayed her. "Yvonne, be governed by one vital consideration. Those two men in the cabin must have caught some glimmer of the truth from your mother's ravings. But they are strangers, and their own troubles may have preoccupied their minds to the exclusion of the affairs of others. The only person in Pont Aven who knows something of my sad history is Madame Pitou. She has been aware all these years that my wife was alive, or at any rate that she was living after I came here. She is certainly to be trusted. Take care that none others learns your mother's identity. I ask this for her own sake."

The girl smiled wistfully. "Yet you would have me believe you an ogre!" she said.

A few minutes later Tollemache arrived. He found his friend sitting by the fire, with a pipe that had gone out between his lips.

"Hello, Socrates!" he cried. "You're togged for the party, I see. Where's Yvonne?"

"She was unhappy because of that poor woman who lost her husband; so I let her hurry off to Julia's. They've been taken there, I suppose?"

"Yes. It was awfully distressing. Peridot carried Mrs. Carmac off the boat, and by some mismanagement the light of the lantern fell on her husband's face. Ill as she was, she realized that he was dead. She screamed something I couldn't attach any meaning to, and her cries as she was being put into the hotel auto were heartrending. By gad! a beastly experience!"

"What did she say, Lorry?"

"I hardly know. It sounded like a cry from Yvonne, and a protest again. Heaven that her husband should be taken and she left. 'I am the real offender!' she said. 'The punishment should be mine, not his!' Somehow, not the sort of thing you'd expect from a distracted wife. I guess she's nearly out of her mind."

"Naturally. Think what it meant to a delicate woman to be imprisoned in that deck saloon when the yacht keeled over. You see, Lorry, we were buoyed up with the hope of being able to effect a rescue. She, on the other hand, must have gazed into the opening doors of eternity. Pull up a chair. There's time for a cigarette. Seven o'clock is the supper hour."

Tollemache obeyed. Ingersoll relighted his pipe, and the two smoked in silence for a while. Then the younger man glanced at his companion with a quizzical scrutiny that was altogether approving.

"Glad to see you've bucked up, old sport," he said. "You were thoroughly knocked out by the time we reached the quay. I know why, of course."

Ingersoll stooped to throw back into the fire a half-burnt log that had fallen out on to the hearth. "Do you?" he said calmly.

"Great Scott! I should think, indeed! It was one thing that we three men should go into that death trap, but quite another that you should bring Yvonne into it. Bless your heart, Yvonne was watching Peridot and you, and told me what you were saying. 'Dear old Dad,' she said, 'he feels like Jephthah when he had to sacrifice his daughter.' Made me go cold all over. Gee whiz! I was pleased it wasn't I who had to make the choice between turning back and running into safety—where my sister—or my wife—was concerned."

Tollemache stammered and reddened as his tongue tripped on the concluding words; but the elder man paid no heed. He was too profoundly relieved by an explanation that differed so materially from the avowal he dreaded.

"By the way, Lorry, that journey to Paris is postponed," he said after a pause.

"Good! It was hardly like you to bolt out of the place where you were most needed. Those sailormen would be at sixes and sevens to-morrow if we didn't show up."

"I must leave that part of the business to you," said Ingersoll slowly. "I mean to efface myself entirely. Indeed, I'm thinking of paying a long-deferred visit to Forbes, at Concarneau. Yvonne and you can manage splendidly in my absence. Now don't argue, there's a good chap. I rather lost my head on being brought into contact with two people with whom I quarreled years ago; or, to be precise, my animus was not against the poor fellow who is dead. Of course his wife is bound to recall the facts, and it would place her in a difficult position when she discovered that I was one of her rescuers. Women are apt to form curious notions about such matters. It was an extraordinary misfortune, to say the least, that her husband should be the one man whom we failed to save. I think you follow me?"

"Oh, yes—the irony of Fate, and that sort of thing," said Tollemache with an air of wisdom. He was convinced that he understood the position exactly.

Ingersoll stood upright, drew in a deep breath that was curiously like a sigh, and tapped his pipe against the stone pillars of the fireplace. "I hear sounds of revelry by night," he said. "Herri has arrived with the bagpipes."

"Dash it all!" growled Tollemache. "I don't feel a scrap like dancing this evening. That unhappy woman's shrieks are still ringing in my ears."

"We must adjust ourselves to the conditions," said Ingersoll quietly. "Life, like art, is a matter of light and shade. Each of us sails a tiny craft through an unknown sea, and if we can give a brother or sister a cheery hail—why, let us do it, though our own vessel be sinking steadily. I'm in no mood for revel,—goodness knows!— but, with Yvonne absent, you and I must help Mere Pitou to entertain her guests. Some excellent folk are coming here from Nizon and Nevez. Her sister is driving in from Riec. You'll hear some real old Breton ballads to-night. Pity Yvonne isn't here to translate them. My acquaintance with the language is limited; but Madeleine or Barbe will tell you the drift of the words."

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfactior, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my urine or feces," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

GERMANY'S NEW TAXES.

Postal, Phone and Telegraph Rates to be Increased.

BERLIN, March 9.—The proposed increase of postal, telegraph and telephone rates, comprising a part of the war taxation scheme, has been submitted to the Bundesrath. The schedule provides for a surtax of 5 pfennigs on ordinary latters, 2 pfennigs on postcards and local delivery letters, 25 pfennigs on every telegram, and a 20 per cent. increase in telephone charges. Rates on parcel post packages, money orders, special delivery letters and other postal facilities are also increased. It is understood the Government expects to raise about 200,000,000 marks ($50,000,000).

Coughed Almost All Night

WITH THAT

DRY, TICKLING SENSATION

IN HER THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.

Mrs. Joseph Riley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, and coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say "Dr. Wood's" resulted in a complete cure."

There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Sunken Bark.

"They tell me that Smith was arrested today because he drowned his dog in the river," said Jones.

"How could they arrest him for drowning a dog in the river?" demanded Brown.

"Why, they claimed that a sunken bark obstructed navigation," replied Jones.—Spokane Spokesman Review.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Crimson Domino

What Happened at a Masquerade in High Life

By MARY L. HARKNESS

Pennington is one of those places where wealthy people from the city live all the year round, though some have residences in town in which they spend a few months in midwinter. But as for social pleasures, Pennington residents have most of the enjoyments of city life with those of the country added. Their summer outdoor sports are prolonged till late in the autumn, and they play golf any time when the ground is free from snow.

Young Mr. and Mrs. Archie Worth came to live at Pennington at the instigation of Charlie Erwin, Archie's intimate friend. Had Erwin foreseen what this change of residence would bring about he would certainly not have proposed it. There resulted one of the most unpleasant situations that can happen to a man. Worth had no sooner settled at Pennington than he was obliged to go abroad on business. Before his departure he said to his friend:

"Charlie, I'm going to leave Winifred in your charge. Being a newcomer here, it is liable to be pretty dull for her at first, and I shall expect you to see that she gets invitations to what's going on both out of doors and inside, and when she needs an escort take her about yourself. You're one of the few men I know with whom I would trust my wife without the slightest compunction. I hope to get back here in time for the holidays, but I may be detained longer."

Erwin accepted the charge. Indeed, since the Worths had come to Pennington at his instance he could not do less, and, having accepted it, he devoted himself during that autumn to giving Winifred Worth a pleasant season. He drove her out, made up automobile parties for her, escorted her to field sport matches and rode with her across country.

Now, in the communities of smart sets the love affairs that go on among the unmarried and the married as well are not as with people less pretentious. Either the courtships of the boys and girls attract little attention or they precede marriages of convenience. Now and again some married woman will make an incursion upon the domain of the girls and carry off an eligible young man, gaining nothing for herself and robbing the girls.

There was a married woman of middle age living at Pennington, a Mrs. Edwards, nearly forty and much given to the society of men younger than herself. She was not popular with the women, but so long as she could monopolize their husbands, brothers and lovers she was indifferent to their opinion of her. This woman had resolved to make Charlie Erwin her cavalier when Archie Worth went abroad and left his wife in Charlie's care.

One night or, rather, morning, Charlie Erwin went to bed conscious of being the central figure of a peculiar situation. During the evening Mrs. Edwards had shown plainly that she proposed to monopolize him, and Mrs. Worth, the wife of his friend, who had left her in his charge, had indicated that she had been overwhelmed by one of those mad passions for him which will lead a woman to wreck herself for the man she loves.

Had Erwin been a lightweight man either intellectually or morally perhaps he might have been flattered that two women should have tingled him out for the bestowal of their favors. But he was a man of character and with a high sense of honor. He knew women well and felt assured that, while Mrs. Edwards' interest in him was the satisfaction of appropriating him to herself, Winifred Worth had really become infatuated with him. The situation was most dangerous for him and Winifred, for not only had Winifred's infatuation made her reckless, but Mrs. Edwards would doubtless be on the watch for some slip which she might turn to account against her rival.

After thinking the matter over Erwin decided that there was no safety for him except in flight. True, the leaving behind of two women who were at swords' points about him—he not being on hand to repress either—was fraught with danger, but less dangerous than to remain. Besides, flight would put him personally in a better position in case the affair came out.

HE EXPOSED THE FACE OF MRS. EDWARDS

But in order to leave matters in as good shape as possible he went to the vicious one of the two and, assuring her of his devotion to her, told her that it was necessary for him to go away for a time on business.

I have said that Charlie Erwin knew women. He certainly didn't know Mrs. Edwards or he would not have counted upon her, even in this slight respect. She conveyed the news of Erwin's proposed flight to her rival and, knowing that Winifred would see Erwin and endeavor to keep him, lay in wait for the couple with a view to surprising them and thus getting Winifred in her power.

Having a maid who was quite bright in observing people's motions, Mrs. Edwards instructed her to shadow Erwin and report if he visited her rival. At 5 o'clock on the afternoon Erwin was to depart the maid telephoned her mistress that he had gone to Mrs. Worth's home. Mrs. Edwards went there immediately, entered without ringing and found Charlie and Winifred in the library, Winifred in tears.

Mrs. Edwards, having made the two aware of her presence, said that she had called and, not getting a reply to her ring, had ventured in. Then she withdrew.

Erwin saw at once that he had made a mistake in informing Mrs. Edwards of his proposed departure. He felt that he and Winifred Worth were as much in her power as if she had had a dozen witnesses to the scene she had come upon, for a married woman must be above suspicion. He abandoned his plan of going away, feeling it necessary for him to remain and, if possible, scotch the viper who he was convinced had determined to put her poisonous fangs into her rival.

That year the smart set of Pennington concluded to give a masquerade ball at the close of the season and before the opening of Lent. The costumes worn on the occasion during the first part of the evening were to be covered with dominos until the unmasking, when the dominos, with the masks, were to be thrown off.

Charlie Erwin resolved to take advantage of this ball to spring a trap on Mrs. Edwards that he hoped would put her out of business as to doing Winifred Worth or himself any harm. Worth returned a few days before Ash Wednesday. He thanked Charlie for his attentions to his wife, but Charlie could see that he had heard more of those attentions than he cared to hear. Nevertheless he was cordial and invited Charlie to dinner on the evening of the ball. After dinner he went out, leaving his friend alone with his wife, thus indicating his confidence. This gave Charlie an opportunity to give Winifred so much of his plan as was essential. He told her to tell her husband that she would wear a crimson domino, but to use one of another color. This she promised to do.

There was no hall in Pennington suitable for a ball, so one of the largest dwelling houses was offered by its owner for the purpose.

A crimson domino was seen moving about, always attended by a purple one, the two dancing together nearly every set. Presently some one standing behind Worth said, "Look out for the crimson!" Worth saw the crimson and the purple dominos going out of a door together.

Worth was an honorable man and above spying, especially on his own wife. But Mrs. Edwards had contrived to let out enough of his friend's attention to his wife during his absence, colored to suit her purpose, to make him anxious. He turned to look behind him and saw a pale blue domino just passing away. The figure turned and pointed to the crimson. There was something about this person which the domino did not conceal that was familiar to him. Whether it was the walk or the gesture, or what it was, he could not tell.

But this did not concern him as much as the crimson. He remembered that his wife had told him she would wear a crimson domino, and he had seen the domino constantly attended by the purple one. Indeed, the green monster had begun to take root in his breast before the warning came. Following the two retreating figures, he was led through several rooms on the ground floor. The figure in purple, evidently a man, occasionally turned his head and looked back.

Worth believed the man fancied himself followed and was making an effort to shake his shadower. This only added to the former's determination to remain on the scent. Nevertheless he lost sight several times of the pair, who mounted from one story to another till they entered an apartment built on the roof and used for plants.

Before going in the purple domino turned evidently to see if others were about, but by this time Worth had learned that if he were to discover what he dreaded he had better keep out of sight. He waited impatiently for awhile, then stole to where the two had entered. The crimson domino was encircled in the purple domino's arms. Rushing forward, there was a muffled shriek. He tore off the mask of the woman he thought to be his wife.

He exposed the face of Mrs. Edwards. The man uncovered, and Worth saw his friend Charlie Erwin.

With an humble apology, Worth retreated, and Erwin felt sure that any expectation of trouble with his friend had been eliminated.

The next morning both Erwin and Mrs. Edwards left Pennington, but not together. Mrs. Edwards did not return, and Erwin remained away until the next spring, when the Worths removed to the city. Then he returned.

Thus by judicious management a woman who yielded to a passing fancy was saved from the world's cold criticism.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Presentation To Omemee Soldier

Mr. W. J. O'Neill Has Identified Himself With the 109th Battalion —Reception to Pte. Noel Clarke

OMEMEE, March 8.—On Wednesday evening last a number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. O'Neill for the purpose of showing their appreciation of the stand taken by Mr. W. J. O'Neill in enrolling himself as a soldier in the 109th Battalion. Mr. Harold Graham presented him with a military wrist watch and a fountain pen. The following address was read by Mr. James McQuade:

Dear Will.—Those of us who have gathered here to-night, knowing that you have enlisted in the 109th Battalion for overseas service, feel that we would not be doing our duty to permit you to go into this new life as a soldier of the King without in some way showing you the honour and respect you so richly deserve.

We cannot but admire your decision and courage in taking the course you have. We are aware that it requires more than ordinary resolution to take such a course. It means the severance of many happy friendships and the facing of many risks and hardships; but no doubt you have pondered over all this before you decided to go.

The condition of affairs in Europe at the present time required such men as you and we feel assured you will do your bit bravely and well. At this war means the defence of our Canadian homes, as well as of the British Empire, we realize that we have a personal and vital interest in the result. We, therefore, avail ourselves of this opportunity to present you with this wrist watch and fountain pen as a token of our love and good wishes. We trust that whatsoever ups and downs you may have, these little gifts may serve as a remembrance of your old Emily friends and of their interest in you. Where ever you are, always remember that the prayers of the people at home go with you. We hope that God will guard you and bring you back safe to your many friends.

Even Hospital Treatment For Kidney Disease Failed

Well-Known Commercial Traveller Says That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Undoubtedly Cured Him

News of his recovery from kidney disease will be welcomed by the many friends of Mr. L. D. Griffin throughout the lower townships and the adjoining district of the United States.

Mr. Griffin has travelled this section for 35 years and what he says will be accepted, as proven by all who know him best.

He tells in his letter how relief was obtained by treatment in Sherbrooke and Montreal hospitals, but the old kidney trouble returned again and again until by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure was effected. As he says, these pills "undoubtedly did the work."

Mr. L. D. Griffin, Bulwer, Compton County, Quebec, writes: — "I can add one more statement of kidney disease cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For about twenty years I was bothered more or less with the kidneys, then the disease became worse and I was sick in bed for one year, took doctor's medicine to no avail, and on his advice went to Sherbrooke Hospital, where I was benefited, but the old trouble returned, and I tried a Montreal hospital. Got a little better, but the help was only temporary, and I was soon bad again.

"On the advice of a friend, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I now thank that friend, for to-day I am as free from kidney disease as I ever was in my life. I owe the cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, for they undoubtedly did the work. I am 68 years old, and have spent 35 years as a traveller calling on the drug trade. Everywhere I am told that Dr. Chase's medicines are the best sellers and give the best satisfaction of any medicines on the market. Shall be glad to answer any questions in regard to my cure if people care to write me."

LOOK AT A CHILD'S TONGUE WHEN CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Take No Chance! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once

Mothers can rest easily after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you can have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or side, headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

THE ANTWERP NEWS

Belgian Ladies Who Live Only on What Townspeople Allow Them

Antwerp, the city of churches and chimes, is crowned with history, and its name will figure prominently when the page of the future comes to be written. The romantic Belgian city, that ever responds with the sound of church bells, will doubtless have heard during the siege the sinister chime of a bell that has not been rung within the history of living man. The bell hangs in a convent supported by nuns of a curious order. These nuns have all been great ladies who have renounced the world and all its ways, and consecrated their wealth to the church. Having taken the vow of poverty, they walk through life barefooted, and hold no communication whatever with the busy populace outside their walls. For their daily bread they depend solely on the charity of the townspeople, who religiously leave food on their doorstep every day.. The bell hanging in their convent is never tolled. It being kept as a last desperate resort to inform the city that the nuns can live no longer unless they have food.

Linseed for Explosives

The German military authorities have been hard put to it in some ways to keep up the necessary supplies of substances required for making ammunition. The export of linseed from England was forbidden, and quite a number of people were puzzled why the Germans should not be allowed to make as many linseed poultices as they required. But the Germans didn't want linseed for poultices! They wanted it to extract glycerine from it for the making of nitro-glycerine and dynamite. Linseed oil usually fetches $13 to $15 for 336 pounds. Germany is eagerly paying many times these amounts for the same amount, for every pound means her holding out so much longer.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Home Health Club

By Dr. David H. Reeder

Preparedness: Just at this time the subject of self defence is paramount. It is quite probable that not one man or woman in ten thousand wants war. The unanimous cry is for continued peace, at the same time 99 per cent. of us know in our inmost hearts that Gen. Washington was right and that the only way to remain at peace is to be prepared for war, be able to maintain our honor and our property.

Life itself is, as I have said before, a continuous battle, from the first cry of the struggling infant to the last gasp of old age and he that is best equipped with pure blood, good ancestry, physical training and practical, temperate habits makes the most successful fight.

In the battle of life th diet of the individual has much to do with his success or failure and that leads me to ask your co-operation in preparing yourselves as well as the nation in the one element of vital importance in sustaining ourselves if defence of the nation should ever call us to arms.

In reading accounts of the terrible struggle on in Europe, a letter from a soldier in the trenches tells of continuous fighting for 5 days and nights without food. The writer formerly worked in the stock yards of Chicago and like the rest of us, would have thought it a great hardship if he should have been deprived of a single meal. Guns and bullets and men and ships, airship, submarines, torpedoes and any other death dealing instruments, are of no greater, if as great importance as food. The kind of food is also of importance if our defenders are to retain strength and vigor.

Many of you will remember an immense potato crop harvested in this country a few years ago. Train loads of them were sent to this market that could not be sold for enough to pay the freight charges. No attempt was made to save this product of the farmers toil for a future time of need. Dessiccated potatoes could under proper conditions be kept almost indefinitely. Every year we see many thousand tons of good go to waste in various parts of the country, while in other parts people may be starving. Last summer an effort was made to save some of the waste and several car loads were gathered by Sunday School Children in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan and sent to Chicago to be distributed among the poor.

While I admire the loving spirit in which this was done, it does not solve the problem. The department of agriculture at Washington appears to be doing its best and at an enormous expense has gathered statistics and sent them out in the form of monthly crop reports, special reports, etc., but matters appear to be even worse than before. The information given out has helped the speculator, the storage men and the dealers, but the farmers, the producers and the consumers are even worse off then before.

To illustrate: On January 1, this year there were in the storage warehouses 15 per cent more apples than a year ago and although the farmers received less for them than a year ago the wholesalers are getting 25 per cent. more and the retailers 50 per cent. more than a year ago. In many parts of the country potatoes were sold a few months ago for 35 cents per bushel. At present the poor of Chicago must pay 55 cents per peck. A few years ago there was a great amount of talk and bluster about giving the farmers the right to work up refuse and surplus produce into denatured alcohol, the talk as far as the political effect was concerned was fine but when the farmer wanted to work up surplus potatoes, soft corn and cobs from the canneries he found so much red tape and so many hungry inspectors to be employed that the surplus again had to be thrown into the discard.

Enough waste is produced annually to supply denatured alcohol as fuel for a large percentage of the gas consuming engines of the country and if the department would give more practical plans and less statistics it might help the people to prepare food for years and years of war, thus helping producer as well as consumer.

Dear Doctor: I am 69 years old, 5 feet 4 inches in height, light complexion, dark brown hair when young, am quite nervous, lame in both knees with rheumatism, comfortably well otherwise. Last October I was taken with a scratching sensation in the throat. It felt as if it were full of dust and I would cough and cough. I raised nothing except the phlegm that looked like that which comes from the nose when we are catching cold all full of little bubbles. I went to a doctor but obtained no help I took home remedies, one prescription that I have is a most excellent cough remedy, but it did not reach this cough. The scratchy sensation has about stopped but I cough until I vomit some bitter tasting fluid. I have those spells 5 or 6 times during the day. I can lie but very little on my right side without coughing. It seems first to come from the throat and later from the sternum, some times even lower. I do not drink coffee or tea, have a good appetite, sleep well if I do not get nervous and cough. What causes the cough and what shall I do? Am troubled with head and throat catarrh.—Mrs. H. S.

(Answer) The cough I am inclined to think, is due to an irritation in the throat caused by a cold and the continued coughing keeps the throat inflamed so that either warm or cold air or a little particle of dust irritates it. I will give herewith a formula which has been universally used for many years for the relief of coughs such as you have described. Mix one ounce of syrup of squills with an ounce of ipacac and 2 ounces of best Holland gin Of this take one teaspoonful 3 or 4 times a day. The local use of the so-called Grandmother's Herb Ointment can also be highly recommended. The exercises given in the Home Health Club book, vol. 2 on the subject of catarrh will overcome the catarrh of the head and throat, if you will follow them for a few weeks. It will also enable you to resist colds in the future. These exercises are too extensive for me to repeat in the notes department, and you will find the book of great value to you in other respects.

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. EVER-SMILING OFFICER

Cherub-Faced V.C. Who Bore a Many Charmed Life

A correspondent writes from British General Headquarters: I remember a road behind some famous trenches and a few officer companions there. None of us elders were comfortable. We were the only people about. The rest were in hiding. Passing overhead was a procession of horrible sounds. On either hand columns of smoke were bursting, and every house we passed was an abandoned ruin. There was a boy with us, a short, ruddy, smiling officer lad with merry grey eyes. He seemed quite out of place there. He was altogether too cherubic, innocent and happy. He glanced up smiling at the passing shells exactly as if he had never heard them before, and did not know where they were. Even his tunic was not exactly the regulation pattern, as though he were unaware even of the necessity to be dressed like other officers.

I thought he was a new arrival who would learn much more presently. Later I was told, as a huge joke, that that boy was once lighting his cigarette when a bullet swept the match out of his fingers. His cap had been blown off five times by explosions. His tunic was what it was because it was a make-shift: his old one had been torn off his back by machine-gun fire. He had dragged, that lad, a heavy box of bombs over the corpses, in a trench, a target for every explosive abomination the Germans could shower round him and his men. His men were killed, but he got through with the bombs and dived a position. He (not his) Lieutenant Smyth, and he had his V.C.

THE SIRDAR

Britain is fortunate in having at the supreme head of the Egyptian army at this critical period of Turkish menace Sir Francis Wingate, Sirdar of Egypt, who knows, next to Lord Kitchener himself, more about Egypt and Egyptian administration than any other soldier.

Like Lord Kitchener, Sir Francis set to work in the first place to master Arabic. He is, indeed, a wonderful linguist, and has been known to say that there was no language to which he applied himself that he could not master in three months.

Sir Francis has held the position of Sirdar of Egypt longer than any other man, the appointment dating back fifteen years, when he himself was only thirty-eight years of age.

The stories of Sir Francis' active service would fill a book. He has been mentioned many times in despatches, has received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament, holds the D.S.O., and has a chest full of medals and decorations.

He is an excellent raconteur, and is rather fond of telling a story of a certain young attache of the British Embassy at Petrograd. During a dinner at the palace, at which the Czar was present, this official had the misfortune to upset his glass of wine over the tablecloth. "Do they do that in England?" asked the Czar, with a smile. "Sometimes, sire," replied the attache; "but in England nobody makes any comment upon it."

It was a curious coincidence that Sir Francis' only daughter was born on the day when he defeated and rid the Soudan of the Khalifa at Um Debrikat, in 1899.

WAS NOT CHRIST'S WAY.

Peace at Any Price Denounced by Rev. Dr. Manning.

ST. LOUIS, March 9.—The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church, New York, speaking recently at the National Defence Conference of Mayors, said:

"Jesus Christ does not stand for peace at any price. He stands for righteousness at any cost. He proved that by going to His death on the cross. Prayers without action will avail as naught.

"The country that is in the midst of a world war is likely to pray in vain for deliverance when the enemy is at the gate. I know about the quotation of turning the other cheek But it will not do to take isolated quotations. The same Book that gives us this quotation says that the Lord is a lion to fight evil.

"There are worse things than war. Every true American would rather see this land involved in war than see the flag dishonoured."

A saddle has been patented by a New Jersey inventor which includes leather flaps to cover the buckles which frequently wear out riders' clothing.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

The Egg Situation Here and "Across the Line"—Wheat and Flour Down, Hay Up—The Cattle Market—Sugar Outlook —Comparison in Prices

MARKET FEATURES.

Butter remains firm. Eggs likely to decline. Loose Hay goes up $2.00. Vegetables a little stronger in price. Potatoes loosened up a little. Hogs advance 15 cents a hundred. Sugar up 20 cents a hundred.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter Dairy	35 to 38c
Butter, creamery	36 to 37
Eggs, new laid	28 to 30c
Cheese, lb.	22 to 25c
Cream, qt.	35c
Turkey, lb.	25c
Geese	16c
Ducks	18c
Chickens	23c
Live hens, each	$1.00

Butter is still holding its own' around 38 cents as a top level. An extra large quantity last Saturday was a temptation for some who did not want to remain on the market all day to drop a little, and a few went as low as 35 cents, but they were in the minority.

Telephone Number on Butter Paper.

Last Saturday one good lady from the country, besides having her name and address on the oiled paper surrounding her dainty prints had also her telephone number thereon. This would seem to be a good 'stunt' for, after the city purchaser tastes the butter and realizes its good qualities, the first impulse that would come over her business-like brain would be to go at once to the 'phone, call up Mrs. butter-maker, and order a supply for next Saturday.

The egg market, both locally and in Toronto is very responsive to prices "across the line." On the "other side" there is such a bountiful harvest of "hen fruit" just now that they are able not only to supply their own needs but to spare some for export This has a decidedly depressing effect on Canadian prices.

"Growing eggs" is quite a fad in the States, which reminds me of little Georgie who was always asking his mamma the meaning of words.

Said Georgie: "When our teacher was giving us our lesson on department to-day, she used the word "egitist" several times. What does it mean, mamma?

Mamma: I don't know, dear, unless it is one of those city folks who go on to a farm and start raising chickens.

Grains, Hay.

Spring Wheat, bushel	98 to 99c

Bran, ton	$25.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.25
Baled hay, ton	$20.00 to $22.00
Loose hay	$20 to $22

The feature of the sensational drop on the grain market was a uniform lowering of prices all along the line. When the Chicago Grain Exchange pulled down prices those in Ontario were shot to pieces.

Cereal wheat is down 15 cents a bushel in Toronto (13 cents locally) selling at 98c to $1.00 a bushel.

Winnipeg No. 1 Northern followed suit and is now $1.05 a bushel, a drop of 20 cents in a week.

Toronto prices on coarse grains are —Oats, 45 to 47 cents a bushel; barley, 60 to 62 cents, a decline of 6 cents per bushel; rye is down 10c per bushel, selling at 78 cents, or 11 cents lower than last week; peas, $1.25; a decline of 50 cents in the week.

There has been a decline in flour as well. Besides acting in sympathy with the grain market, the question of ocean freights is becoming worse instead of better. Not only is there a system of excessive charges, but "bottoms" are exceedingly scarce. As a result export conditions are precarious.

Hay came to market in large quantities during the week and showed a tendency to stiffen up in price. Several farmers were asking all the way from $20.00 to $22.00 a ton, whereas the price for some time has been $18.00 to $20.00

The Toronto cattle market eased off a little. Choice steers sold at $7.50 and $7.90. Fat cows and bulls ranged from $6.00 to $6.50. Stockers ranged at these same levels. Good milkers brought $60.00 to $90.00. Calves advanced 50 cents, bringing $9.50 to $11.50. Lambs weakened 50 cents going at $10.00 to $12.50. Sheep were 50 cents higher, going at $8.00 to $9.50. Hogs brought $9.75 to $9.85, fed and watered.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Plain, tailor made skirts are favored for general wear and especially with the lovely separate waists that tempt us on every hand. The model shown is one of the most practical for materials of narrow width or those which are medium. This skirt has four gores, and they will cut without piecing from 44 inch material. One gore forms a narrow panel down the front of the skirt and one completely fills the back, leaving narrow side gores between them. The waistline may be either raised or regulation as preferred, and the lower edge measures 2¼ yards in the medium size.

There are numbers of very handsome mixed materials which look as heavy as any old time tailor goods, but when taken in the hand it is seen that they are of very light weight in spite of their appearance. This is characteristic of all the new materials and makes a skirt much more comfortable. Such a design as this one may be trimmed only with braid and buttons, but when altering it might also be possible to put in a new front panel of plaid or striped goods harmonizing with the color of the balance. In this way an old skirt can easily be gridened.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,602, is cut in sizes 22 to 34 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 44 or 50 inch material, without a nap.

This pattern can be obtained by sending [illegible] to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

REPEATED GERMAN ATTACKS ON BETHINCOURT REPULSED BY FRENCH

The Germans Attempt to Swing Forward With Their Right Wing But Their Advance Was Stopped by the French Curtain of Fire---Fruitless Attempts to Dislodge the French From the Corbeaux Woods Positions

PORTUGAL GOVERNMENT DEFIES BERLIN

PARIS, March 9.—Repeated and heavy German attacks against the village of Bethincourt, eight miles northwest of Verdun throughout last night were repulsed, the War Office reported this afternoon.

Two of the heaviest onslaughts were preceded by artillery fire lasting several hours. The German advance was stopped by the French curtain of fire from Goose Hill and Dead Man Hill to the east.

The Germans attempted to swing forward with their right wing on the Forges-Bethincourt front west of the Meuse, planning to straighten their front before making a grand assault on the Goose Hill and Dead Man Hill positions. At the same time they made fruitless attempts, the War Office reported, to dislodge the French from the Corbeaux woods positions, southeast of Bethincourt, recaptured by the French yesterday.

East of the Meuse around Vaux des Pile, the intense artillery firing continued throughout the night accompanied by violent assaults. The enemy, however, was unable to weaken the efficacy of our artillery and was completely repulsed.

In the Woevre region intermittent bombardment continued throughout the night. West of Le Pretre woods we took twenty prisoners. In Eastern Argonne, in the region of Montfaucon and Montillios, we continued to bombard enemy communications.

German troops entered the village of Vaux southeast of Fort Douaumont, but were completely driven out by a counter-attack, the War Office reported. Several strong attacks on the Douaumont-Vaux front were repulsed.

ANOTHER COUNTRY IN THE WORLD WAR

Germany Has Declared War on Portugal as a Result of the Latter's Seizing German Vessels—The Fourteenth Country to Enter the Great European Struggle

BERLIN, March 9.—(Bulletin)—Germany has declared war on Portugal.

The Portuguese Government is the foutreenth involved in the world conflict.

The German Minister at Lisbon to-day notified the Portuguese Government of the declaration by handing the official document to the Foreign Minister with the remark: "The German Government therefore now considers herself from this date at war with Portugal."

The German declaration was based on the act of Portugal in seizing without previous notice, German merchantment in Portuguese ports. This action, Germany charged in a sharp note of protest, violated the existing commercial treaties between Germany and Portugal, and offered evidence that Portugal is a vassal of England. To this note Portugal on March fourth replied with a communication to the German Foreign Office, flatly rejecting the German demands.

GERMANS ARE ADVISED TO LEAVE PORTUGAL

Special to The Examiner:

LISBON, March 9.—The Germans still remaining in Portugal were today advised by their consuls to leave at once for Spain. It is rumoured that German diplomats are preparing to leave before the end of the week.

The Foreign Office has made no reply to Germany's note protesting against the seizure of German merchantmen. As if in defiance of the Berlin protest another German ship was seized at Madeira yesterday. Naval officials held a conference aboard the flagship Vasco Da Gama to-day.

ASKS UNITED STATES TO INVESTIGATE CASE

Examiner Special:

BUFFALO, N.Y., March 9.—Rev. C. R. Tappert, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church at Berlin, Ontario, has forwarded a request from here asking the State Department at Washington to investigate the assault made upon him by soldiers of the 118th Canadian Battalion at Berlin, recently.

COPENHAGEN, March 9.—The Norwegian steamer Memona struck a mine and sank in the North Sea. The crew of fifteen are believed to have perished.

LONDON, March 9.—Newspapers announce this morning that a proclamation will be issued next week calling to the colours married men between the ages of 27 and 35.

OTTAWA, March 9.—General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, attended caucus this morning. The caucus was hastily summoned affairs, as the decision of the Minister of Militia to leave for the south and thence for Europe was a hastily made decision. Whether there is any relation between the two is not known.

SIMPSON AGAIN REMANDED.

LONDON, March 9. — Colonel Simpson, Winnipeg, was again remanded till March 23. The charges have already been made public. Counsel said it was confidently hoped the charges would be disposed of at the next hearing of the case, which was unlikely to take more than a few

CONSCRIPTION IS FAVOURED BY THE PATRIOTIC LEAGUE

Local Organization Will Write With Other Leagues in Bringing Pressure to Bear on Government With This End in View

GOING AFTER RECRUITS

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League took place last night in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, Water Street. Several very important items were very fully discussed.

Lt.-Col. Johnston and Major Watt were present at the former part of the meeting, and meetings are being arranged for at a number of places including Keene, Havelock, Indian Settlement, Apsley, Buckhorn, etc. the dates of which will be announced shortly.

The next consideration was the question of recruiting and very strong opinions were expressed by all the members present.

A special committee was appointed to act in conjunction with a special committee of officers of the 93rd Battalion, to take such steps in any direction they thought fit to hunt out the medically fit men who have not enlisted, and bring all pressure possible to bear upon them to have them get to their place, if not in the 93rd some where, so that the Empire may be saved.

One member of the Committee went so far as to suggest that a motion be made to disfranchise the man who will not fight for his liberty and franchise.

The Secretary was authorized to communicate with the Central Organization, with Hamilton Recruiting League and other Leagues, to bring pressure to bear upon the Government to introduce conscription immediately.

In the meantime all the eligible will be found out and followed up as swiftly and as determinedly as possible.

FIRST PETERBORO OFFICER TO RECEIVE A WAR DECORATION

Lt. Col. T. W. Young, Formerly Commanding Officer of the 10th Artillery Brigade, and Now Medical Officer of the 2nd Canadian Divisional Engineers is Decorated With the Order of St. John of Jerusalem---93rd Officers Promoted---To-day's Orders and General Military News

Lieut.-Col. T. W. H. Young, M.D. C.A.M.C., M.O. Headquarters of the 2nd Divisional Engineers, C.E.F., now on active service in Flanders, has been invested with the order of St. John of Jerusalem, of which King George is Sovereign Head and Patron. This information was received by Mrs T. W. H. Young, 305 Stewart Street, in a letter from Col. Young, enclosing a copy of the official notification, which follows:

"His Majesty King George, the Fifth, has been graciously pleased to confer upon Lieut. Col. T. W. H. Young, M.D., C.A.M.C. M.O., headquarters of the 2nd Divisional Engineers, C.E.F., now on active service, the order of St. John of Jerusalem, with the grade of Esquire."

The insignia is a star cross of white enamel, embellished, and set in silver. At the four principal angles are two lions and two unicorns, alternately, passant and guardant. It is worn on the left breast. The diameter is one and three quarter inches. The Examiner cordially congratulates Lieut.-Col. Young (Dr. as he is better known at home), upon this signal mark of the approval of his sovereign, an honour that derives additional value from the fact that it is one that must be earned and deserved, by not only efficient, but distinguishedly efficient service.

These medals are conferred for acts of gallantry on land, involving risks of life.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE IS UP TO DATE

If You Like Good Clean Photoplays With the Best Artists Appearing—The Sporting Duchess To-night

You may not be a movie picture supporter, or you may be, but whether you are or not have you stopped to realize the class of pictures that are shown at the Empire Theatre. Just run over the following list for the balance of this month and then see any or more of the pictures and we think you will agree with us that you cannot spend a better evening than at the Empire Theatre:

ess, Rose Coghlan starring.
March 9, 10, 11—The Sporting Duchess
March 13, 14, 15— The Circular Showcase
March 16, 17, 18—The Juggernaut.
March 20, 21, 22—The Lure of Women.
March 23, 24, 25—The White Sister.

We are taking particular pains to give the public of Peterborough the very best and cleanest in the picture world. Together with our feature we have a fine comedy that pleases, and is not rude.

For to-day, to-morrow and Saturday, we present the Sporting Duchess, with Rose Coghlan, a Canadian actress of international repute, in the title role, and it is unquestionably the most fascinating photoplay of sporting life ever shown. Always absorbingly interesting when acted upon the stage, "The Sporting Duchess" is doubly gripping on the screen because of the added features that are impossible of reproduction in an ordinary theatre. One of these is a thrilling horse race. But even without the great race track setting, the story itself is a powerful one and gives unlimited scope to a company of rare skill. And such a cast has been selected with none other than the widely celebrated star, Rose Coghlan, in the stellar role.

PETERBORO DELEGATES WERE WELL SATISFIED

Expressions of Opinion From a Few of the Peterboro Delegates Who Formed Part of the Temperance Deputation That Waited Upon Premier Hearst Yesterday

SIR GEORGE FOSTERS SPEECH

His Worship Mayor Duffus, who attended the monster temperance parade that was held in Toronto yesterday, was more than elated at the result. He is of the opinion that Premier Hearst and his Cabinet are all united on the measure and were determined to give the voters of the Province an opportunity of expressing their opinion. Mayor Duffus returned to Toronto early this morning where he was called in connection with civic business.

The Rev. R. G. Peever, on being interviewed, said: "The conclusion must be reached that the Government is wise in granting the referendum, and that the liquor saloon has received its summons to quit. While I would have been greatly pleased if the Government had caused the bill to become law at once prohibiting the liquor traffic during the period of the war, and then refer the matter to the people for their decision, yet in view of this not obtaining the Government must be commended in granting a referendum on a straight majority vote."

Money Well Expended.

Mr. Peever was of the opinion that the $40,000 or so that the campaign cost was the best money even spent in temperance work in the Province of Ontario, and the impression caused by the whole affair will have a far-reaching effect. He thinks it was the sanest thing ever attempted in the cause of sobriety, and those who were behind the movement showed the highest type of judgment in launching the movement to capture the minds of the people without respect to church, class or political parties.

Of course the war situation has greatly aided the sentiment.

The mass meeting in the Massey Hall, on Tuesday night, was a particularly strong feature in conection with the programme. The speech of Hon. Sir George Foster fairly bristled with arguments that could not be refuted.

After reviewing the remarkable advance made in temperance of late years, he referred to the fact that fifty-six years ago, as a small boy he had signed the pledge, and while it did not grant immunity from doing wrong, it was for him the beginning of a new realization of future possibilities and was a tremendous factor in steadying him throughout the course of his life, during which time he has seen many fine men, with brighter prospects than he had go down to ruin and death because of the demon drink.

A Good Point.

The best point scored by Sir George was that regarding the enforcement of the law. Said he: "It is not the duty of the individual to enforce the law of the land. Hitherto it was thought that the individual had the right to enforce the law against another, and because of that false impression temperance people were supposed to be detectives and law enforcement agents while the Government looked on. On the contrary the supreme duty lies with the state to see that its laws are carried out."

He also spoke of the efficiency and sacrifice for the good of the state on the part of the people and business interests throughout the Empire. Great businesses have gone, partic-

MRS. MICHAEL BURKE DIES AS A RESULT OF HER INJURIES

Passed Away at Midnight Last Night—Inquest Will Be Held This Evening

FUNERAL SATURDAY

As a result of the injuries she received when struck by a street car, while on her way to mass yesterday morning, Mrs. Michael Burke, 841 Water street, passed away last night at midnight. Mrs. Burke sustained serious injuries to her chest. No hope for her recovery was held from the first. Coroner Greer, on being notified of her death, decided to hold an inquest at 8 o'clock this evening in the City Council Chamber. As noted in last evening's issue, the late Mrs. Burke was crossing from in front of her home to the east side of the street when she was hit by a north bound car.

The late Mrs. Burke was about 68 years of age. She had lived all her life in Peterborough, and for the greater part of the time in the north end of the city. She was well known and highly respected, and her sudden death will occasion deep regret among a host of friends. Her husband, two sons and three daughters are left to mourn her loss. The sons are Messrs. Patrick at home, and Daniel, 581 Homewood avenue. The daughters are Mrs. Arthur McGarrity, Buffalo, N.Y., Mrs. John Casey, Milwaukee, and Miss Julia at home.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at nine o'clock from the family residence, 841 Water street to St. Peter's Cathedral. Interment in St. Peter's cemetery.

11 Americans Were Killed

Special to The Examiner.

COLUMBUS, March 9.—Eleven Americans were killed by 400 Villistas who swooped down on this town in the darkness early to-day and were driven off only after nearly two hours fighting with 300 United States cavalrymen and citizens. Thirty or forty Villistas were killed or wounded it is estimated. Five American civilians were wounded.

STOPPED SHORT.

Taking Tonics, and Built up on Right Food.

The mistake is frequently made of trying to build up a worn-out nervous system on so-called tonics.

New material from which to rebuild used up tissue cells is what should be supplied, and this can be obtained only from proper food.

"I found myself on the verge of a nervous collapse, due to overwork and study, and to illness in the family," writes a young mother.

"My friends became alarmed because I grew pale and thin and could not sleep nights. I took various tonics but their effects wore off shortly after I stopped taking them. My food did not seem to nourish me.

"Reading of Grape-Nuts, I determined to stop the tonics and see what a change of diet would do. I ate Grape-Nuts four times a day with cream, and drank milk also, went to bed early after eating a dish of Grape-Nuts.

"In about two weeks I was sleeping soundly. In a short time gained weight and felt like a different woman. Grape-Nuts and fresh air were the only agents used to to accomplish the happy results." "There's a Reason." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

HOODLUMISM.

The attack of a mob of hoodlums and riotous soldiers upon the prohibition procession in Toronto yesterday was simply disgraceful, an outrage upon the law and order conditions that we Canadians prize so highly. I is no excuse for soldiers that they were expressing their resentmen against the W.C.T.U., which tried to deprive them of tobacco and the little sip of medicinal rum. Our soldiers enlisted to fight for civilization, and it does not become them to apply the beastly German doctrine of force as an element in the management of human affairs. They were not justified in mobbing a peaceable procession, which after all was held in the interests of the soldiers themselves. If Col Logie does not sharply discipline somebody, he himself should be disciplined. As to the attack on the procession itself, that should encourage temperance workers. When the see that the opponents of their cause have no other argument than the desperate resource to physical violence, they may feel assurance that the cause of temperance reform, becomes alarmingly formidable to its enemies.

NEW PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.

The Ottawa Free Press makes a strong case for making the present standing walls of the burned parliament buildings at Ottawa, serve for the purposes of Parliament. By making the interior a place for the real and exclusive transaction of the business of the nation, in a parliamentary sense; by eliminating the chil and restaurant and social features there is ample room. Adding to the present buildings on the outside would destroy the architectural unity and beauty and harmony of proportions of one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture on this continent. By taking the steps to utilize the space enclosed by the remaining walls the Free Press claims it can be so utilized as to make the new parliament buildings of a convenience and adaptability to Parliamentary business, that they have not had heretofore. The residential features, the home life for our legislators can be provided in separate buildings. The present magnificent pile, as represented by the remaining walls, is of too dignified a character and occupies such a splendidly commanding site that it would be a pity of pities if the architectural harmony and ensemble should be marred by architectural excrescences to be represented by additional wings.

BENIGN TAXATION.

It is a pleasure to have occasion to congratulate the Ontario Government on a measure that serves the public interests and helps us do our duty without inflicting burden or injustice upon anybody. The proposal to supplement the Provincial revenue that has fallen off on account of the war, by imposing the extra taxation required upon luxuries, is the right principle of levying that ungleasant necessity—taxation. The tax of one cent upon each admission to cinematograph theatres and others will not be a burden, while it will yield, it is estimated, a revenue of about $350,000—enough to build about 120 miles of first class highway. It is a tax that will not be felt, and need not be felt, except from choice, by those who pay it. If such a specific tax were levied upon clothing or food of any kind we should be hard hit, for we have to dress and eat; these things are necessities; but at a pinch we can do without amusements in war time. We should not, while we are enjoying amusement, grudge the sacrifice of a little extra cost when we remember that our fellow citizens in thousands are having starner amusement and paying a heavier cost—in life, in limit in comfort, and all for the sake of ourselves. The extra taxation upon race meetings and similar amusements comes under the same consideration. We must have revenue to conduct the public affairs of the country and facilitate our provincial and national discharge of duty in this war; but we can do without amusements if we are compelled to do so, or cheerfully pay the trifling additional cost the enjoyment involves, under the new taxation scheme.

SPRING AND ITS VISIONS.

Though the earth is snow-covered, and the air has a keen and frosty nip, yet we are on the verge of spring, and the resumption of nature's vegetative activities. The trees are beginning to feel a prophetic tingling in their limbs; the buds are beginning to swell, and the boughs of the trees to take on a new complexion—the hue of awakening life.

Spring will soon be upon us, and we are reminded to get ready for it, and to take full advantage of the short time that remains to us to prepare to beautify our premises and streets with flowers, and care and tidiness.

Apart from the cult of the beautiful, our selfishness should help us to make our short summer as glorious as possible. We are winter-locked nearly half of the year, and we should, therefore, make the most of our too brief season of bloom and beauty of tree, shrub, grass, and flower.

We have not yet come as a body of citizens, to realize the beauty and consequent enjoyment that can be created with very slight effort, and a very little expenditure of money. But other cities can show us the way. St. Thomas, Ontario, is much smaller than Peterborough; the census gave it a population of 14,654 in 1911, and Peterborough scored, according to the same authority, 18,222 Yet St. Thomas is, in some regards, far ahead of Peterborough. The public seem to appreciate public beauty and fill their streets with it. The last number of "Conservation" shows four pictures of streets in St Thomas, where the boulevards or streets, where working men own their homes, are planted by the joint efforts of owners and the Horticultural Society with flower beds, 4 ft. x 20 ft. Even business streets are adorned with rows of flowers at suitable points, and even on some residence streets the street railways have grass parkings on each side of the track, and beds planted with flowers, with the driveway of concrete on each side. One can imagine the splendid effect and the beauty of the whole city where such a public spirit permits such things to be done.

Can we do the same thing in Peterborough? Why not? We need only the encouragement and co-operation of the civic authorities. Unless the people at large are assured that the active support and protection of the city authorities will be behind the public in their endeavours to beautify the city and make it more prosperous and better home place, there is little encouragement. If St Thomas can plant its boulevards with flowers why cannot Peterborough do the same?

The suggestion of Mr. W. H. Young, of Chamberlen Street, that the boulevards on our paved residential streets should be similarly treated, is, by some, considered impracticable. The public, for whose enjoyment such beauty would be created, would not, it is said, refrain from stealing the flowers. Why not? We need only to have public sentiment of respect for these things created by the example of the authorities. If the City Council, the Horticultural Society, and the citizens would work together the thing can be done.

But the City Council must set the example by showing that it cares, and that it looks ahead. It could do this, and have done this, by filling in the boulevards with good soil that would grow grass. But they did not do this. At the time of street paving the boulevards were, in some cases, filled in at the bottom with the refuse of concrete, and the loose stones from street operations, and covered with a skin of good earth—no decent foundation for grass or even, weeds.

If the city authorities show a proper care for the street boulevards fronting private lawns, the latter would be practically forced to do likewise, and we should have our streets a perpetual delight—a beautiful extension of our well-cared-for parks. Except in the matter of expense, every residential street could, and would be, made a park.

It is time the Horticultural Society got to work. We look to it for light, and leading, and example. It is a regrettable thing that we can't look for similar things to our Aldermen. Unfortunately they lend a more ready ear to plans to destroy the beauty of Peterborough than to add to it.

If we could only get the ball set rolling we should soon have, by force of example, a general improvement of the beauty of our city, its streets and public places. We should make Peterborough a far more desirable place of residence—a home that would be homelike.

A New Spirit Aroused in Canadian Politics

The charges of political corruption which are rife in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, following upon the revelations which last year upset a Manitoba Government, and upon certain war contract episodes in Ontario and the Maritime provinces are discorforting enough to any Canadian who desires to respect his country and countrymen; but they have at least this compensation, that in every case a vigorous public spirit is clear in attack. In Manitoba, a large body of Conservatives turned openly against the Roblin administration after the proof of corruption in connection with the new Legislative building. In British Columbia, a representative Conservative like Sir Hibbert Tupper leads others who rightly or wrongly distrust the Bowser administration. In Saskatchewan, Liberals take action to force investigation by a Liberal Government of charges of improper action by ministers; in Saskatchewan, public opinion compels a Liberal Government to promptly drop a minister shown to have awarded a public contract to a firm in which he himself was a silent partner; in the East resignations from Parliament are promptly forced where questionable relations appear to have existed between a legislator's pocket and the public money; and if an ex-member appeals to his former constituents for re-election, why, even a party hive is apt to prove a hornet's nest for him.

It would be a lot better of course if no basis for such troubles ever existed. But in all politics and in all countries, such troubles occur more or less, and are bound to continue to do so until civilization gets upon a considerably higher plane than at present; and the next best thing is a determined public spirit that dishonesty of any kind in public affairs shall be punished as promptly as possible. This is a matter in which party loyalty should go to the extent of with-holding condemnation and action only until clear proof of wrong is furnished; and there should be an open mind in weighing the evidence. Can there be conditions in which party welfare could excuse moral wrong, or a voter's support of moral wrong? One doubts it. In matters of policy, an adherent of a political party who believes that the general policy of his party or the personnel of its leaders is better for his country than the alternative side, is justified in going far to overlook honest mistakes or inconsistencies or blindness—indeed to do so if not only common sense but his duty to his general convictions—but where a question of moral right or wrong arises, surely the only good plan, whether for public interest or private conscience, is to line up against not only the man or men who are proved to have gone wrong, but against any public men who support them.

One of the innumerable good stories which hang around the name of Sir John Macdonald, like that of Lincoln, tells how a supporter once said to him, "I'll stand by you to the last, John A., whether you are right," and Sir John's reply is said to have been "I don't give a d—— for a man who'll stand by me when I'm right. Everybody will stand by me when I'm right. What I want is a man who will stand by me when I'm wrong." Maybe Sir John never said it; maybe he said it in jest; in any case, he would mean it only as regards matters of policy or general administration. Sir John was a big man; and no really big man has ever belittled the vitalness of honesty. Take that away and human society would be a hell.—Ottawa Journal.

VERY CLEAR.

One of the Oldest Inhabitants, on being consulted this morning about the thunder and lightning that attended the March snow storm last night, says it is a sign of a cold and late spring. "That thunder and lightnin'," he says, "escaped from the place where it is kept, and it'll leave 'em short-handed like along in the spring when they need thunder and lightning to warm things up." It seems clear enough once it is explained to you.—Star.

SOLDIERS AND PROHIBITION.

A placard posted on various dead walls in Toronto asks whether the prohibition measure is being brought on at this time in order to deprive 100,000 soldiers at the front of their votes.

It is a foolish question. The measure is being brought on at this time because it is a war measure, intended to promote thrift, in order that soldiers at the front may be paid and provided with arms, ammunition, food, and clothing.

The measure will not restrict the liberty of soldiers at the front while the war goes on. They will be governed by the rules of the army, not by the laws of Ontario.

The soldiers at the front, even if they do not vote on the present measure, will have an opportunity of voting for or against repeal when they return.

This is a war measure, applying to those who remain in Ontario during the war, not to the soldiers at the front.—Toronto Star.

RECIPROCITY IN POTATOES.

After much effort, the Borden Government has managed to get the Government of the United States to raise the embargo against Canadian Potatoes, and to allow these to be sold in the markets of the United States, conditionally on similar privileges being granted American potatoes. And now what becomes of all the cry against reciprocity in 1911. If the American markets are so desirable for Canadian potatoes that the Borden Government could never be happy till they had obtained them, why would they not be equally desirable for the other commodities mentioned in the reciprocity proposals, as, for instance, wheat?—Herald.

ONLY A DREAM.

Stern troubles of grim war engrossed,
My Anxious mind throughout the day;
And still I pondered, o'er the theme
As restless on my couch I lay.

At length sweet slumber's soothing balm
Descended on my weary brain,
And Morpheus to beguide dull care,
Marshaled, his visionary train.

I heard the sound, of trampling feet,
The roll of drum, and bugle blast,
And saw the dauntless Dummer boys,
In khaki, mustering, strong and fast.

As chafes the charger for the fray,
Scenting red carnage from afar,
They rushed like warriors of old,
To man Mars fiery battle car.

Well pleased I marked the purpose firm,
Unflinching will, and courage high,
Heroic faith and loyal heart,
That steadfast shone in every eye.

To fight or die for freedom's cause,
They came with patriot zeal aflame,
The flower of Dummer's gallant sons,
Canadians, worthy of the name.

Grudging not in their country's cause,
Life, limb, or gold to sacrifice,
Scorning to stay, for sordid gain,
At farm, or forge, or merchandise.

Brave sons of sires, whose might subdued
At Lundy's Lane, the foreign foe
And in the dust, at wild Batoche,
Laid dark rebellious minions low,

Men taught at Petawawa's Camp
War's deadly art, the sword to wield,
Or mounted on their noble steeds,
Well trained to arms at Barriefield.

Not theirs to bow the servile neck,
Submissive to the Teuton chain,
Or with cold callous soul unmoved,
Hear sacred duty call in vain.

Till o'er their native country sweeps,
Such ruin as on Belgium fell,
While wives and helpless children meet,
The fate of martyred Nurse Cavell.

With joy and pride my bosom swelled
To see from Indian River's banks,
And the far shores of Stoney Lake
Those stalwart heroes in the ranks.

But when athwart the mists of dawn,
Fell soft the sun's first roseate beam
Alas to disappointment dire,
I woke, and found t'was but a dream.

PRESENT DAY WAR BLUDGEONS

A modern war with ancient weapons sounds either preposterous or like stage talk. Prior to the great convulsion in Europe any one suggesting such an event, even between semi-civilised countries, would be roundly ridiculed. Yet, this greatest of all wars is, to a very great extent, being waged with no less primitive weapons than the ancent spiked war bludgeon and the nearly equally ancient hand grenade.

With high power rifles that will kill a man at two miles distance machine guns of almost equal range and firing a steady sheet of bullets nearly 1,000 to the minute, and siege guns that can destroy the most impregnable forts from a distance of more than twelve miles and within a few hours, it would seem impossible for the men themselves to get even within sight of each other. But the construction of trenches has been so developed that each army has been able to creep forward through the trenches toward its enemy while the air above is alive with millions of deadly bullets. At points, the first line trenches of the enemies are often less than fifty yards apart. From this point the hand bombs are thrown or, rather, tossed into the air from one trench, to drop into the other, just as in the wars of a thousand years ago. The men of these front line trenches are armed with long, heavy clubs with an egg-shaped head, thickly studded with nails and spikes, besides their bayonetted rifles.

When ever chance offers, a man with a club will slip stealthily from his trench, like an Indian, squirm his way across the intervening fifty yards, search out a "Bosch" in the enemy trench, club him over the head and drag him back a prisoner, or, if he cannot take in the prisoner he will club hard enough to kill. How is it done? That will have to be told by each individual soldier, according to his own experience. It is desperately dangerous work an there are many hair breath escapes an not a few meet death or serious injury in the attempt.

But it is warfare of the most primitive kind in the very midst of the most titanic struggle in the world's history.

CASE OF TUBERCULAR SOLDIERS.

PARIS, March 8.—The Paris City Council has voted a credit of 4,700,000 francs ($949,000) for erection in the grounds of Paris hospitals of huts in which 2,800 tubercular soldiers can be given open air treatment. The cost of treatment will amount to 3,000,000 francs yearly.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's-eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

HOCKEY

The following is from the Toronto News:

Now come on, you soldier teams. The 93rd Battalion hockey experts are out with a challenge to play any other khaki bunch of puck-chasers. Here's a chance for "Billy" Breen's Sportsmen, the 81st, 127th or the 92nd to show where they get off at. The challenge follows:

Sporting Editor, News, Toronto, Ont.

Sir,—Many of the members of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., Peterborough, Ont., consider that we have one of the best, if not the best, all khaki hockey teams in Ontario, and if possible, would like to play home-and-home games or one game on neutral ice to prove the fact. We are winners of District No. 2 in the intermediate O.H.A. series, but were put out of the running by the speedy Belleville bunch, who can't be beat en on their own ice, which fact Midland now knows, much to their sorrow and regret.

There are no khaki teams down this way with which we can get a game in order to prove our superiority but there should be some in or around Toronto who might doubt our statement and would be willing to give us a game.

If something like this could be arranged I believe that it would be to the interest of hockey and recruiting

Sincerely yours,

O. R. Widdifield, Capt. 93rd Batt.

BILLY SUNDAY TAKES SHOWER BATH AFTER PREACHING SERMON

BALTIMORE, M.D., March 9.—Following the advice of Dr. Howard A Kelly, a famous radium expert who has taken him in charge since he arrived here, Billy Sunday has started a new system at the tabernacle.

Immediately after finishing his sermon, from which he emerges dripping wet and usually completely exhausted, he is taken by Dr. Kelly to a room adjacent to the platform in which a shower bath has been installed. Sunday is given a shower and rub down immediately and is then dressed in fresh underclothing and placed in an open automobile. The limousine was ordered discontinued by Dr. Kelly. In the open air he is taken for a spin through the Green Spring valley and the surrounding country.

Sunday preached last night on the "Pharisee and the Publican," and sent some of his characteristic compliments into self-satisfied, sleek and hypocritical members of church congregations. But there was not much vim and "pep" in his sermon.

The collections yesterday were $862, which was regarded as disappointing to the management in view of the fact that there were 12,000 present in the afternoon and 19,000 in the evening.

LINDSAY HERE TO-MORROW FOR GAME WITH THE 93RD

The game at Brock Street Rink tomorrow night, between the 93rd Battalion team and the 109th of Lindsay promises to be a real battle all the way. The Lindsay soldiers have a team of O.H.A. players and are in good shape from their City League games, while the 93rd will have their regular O.H.A. team, with a couple of dark horses in action. The game should be one of the most interesting of the season, and should attract a good crowd of fans. As the ice will be in the best of condition, both teams will be seen at their best advantage and the game will be fast all the way.

NO CITY LEAGUE GAMES TO-NIGHT

There will be no City League games at Brock street rink to-night. The Pennants won the League last week and as to-night's games would have no effect on the standing, they have been cancelled.

MENACE IN LOVE OF LUXURY

President Hibben of Princeton Calls it Worse Than War.

As great as is the danger of military unpreparedness, greater still is the danger bred of our love for material comforts and satisfactions, according to President J. G. Hibben of Princeton University, who spoke yesterday afternoon at the Central Presbyterian Church, Madison Avenue and Fifty-Seventh Street.

"As the great institutions upon which the strength and integrity of our land have rested are the State, the Church, and the schools, I, as a representatives of the school feel that I have a particular right to speak on the question of military preparedness. As a pacifist may be defined as one who desires peace, I think that I may be called a pacifist," said Dr. Hibben.

"Many have said to me, 'Do you not see that you are doing a very dangerous thing in pleading for military preparedness; that you are putting into the hands of the nation a great power that may be used for other purposes than national defence?' There is no power, not even spiritual power, that does not carry with it a certain kind of temptation.

"The great danger lies in the fact that our young men should have on all sides of them comforts and pleasures which make them consider themselves alone. Many of our youths are indifferent to everything under heaven except how they can maintain their comfort and convenience. They have done or experienced nothing that would make them ready for service and sacrifice.

THIRD DIVISION AT FRONT.

Now Right on Firing Line, it is Officially Announced.

OTTAWA, March 9.—The third Canadian division, most of which crossed to France two months ago, is now right up in the firing line.

It consists of three infantry brigades, the 7th, 8th and 9th, and the usual subsidiary units. The 7th Brigade is made up of the Royal Canadian Regiment, the Princess Patricias, the 42nd Battalion of Montreal, and the 49th of Edmonton. It is commanded by General Tuxford, during the absence, because of wounds, of General Macdonell. The 8th Brigade is made up of the Canadian Mounted Rifles from different parts of the country, a mounted organization now in service as infantry. The commandant is General Victor Williams. The 9th Brigade comprises the 25th Battalion of Halifax, the 26th of St. John, 52nd of Port Arthur, and 58th from the west.

Made His Heart Glad.

'Twas night, and the editor lay in bed and thought of the weary day he had just passed, of his aching head and the bills he had to pay.

He watched the stars through his window peep and Cynthia's silver beams till his eyes grew tired and he fell asleep and passed to the land of dreams.

He slept and dreamed till the morning broke and the day began its race, and the wife who lay by his side awoke and gazed on his placid face.

She looked and saw on his face a light like the sun's first golden ray that softly kisses the mountain's height as the darkness flies away.

Then she nudged his arm, for 'twas time to rise, as the clock was striking 7, and asked as he rubbed his sleepy eyes, "Did you dream you were in heaven?"

"Oh! not quite that, my love," said he, "but it made my heart so glad; I dreamed that a man came in to me and paid in advance for a full page ad."—Exchange.

London's New Joke.

London is holding its sides because of a wonderful new joke. It's rather a shame to tell it to you, but it's too good to keep. The [illegible] Englishman asked the second, "Why is Melba like a Dutch oyster?" Get ready, now, it's coming. "Because she is an Australian." Isn't that the acme of wit? An "oyster often?" And people dare to say the English are not humorous.—Springfield Republican.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner

Sir,—Could you spare a little space in your valuable paper to allow me to express the impression made on one by the great recruiting meeting in the armouries last Sunday night, which I had the pleasure of attending.

What did I see? A vast gathering of women who no doubt were drawn there by curiosity to see and hear Mrs. Pankhurst speak. That was only natural, but where were the men? I could only see some elderly men and boys, till I looked behind me, and there standing up near the wall convenient to the doors were several hundred of them. This made a bad impression to begin with.

After that splendid oration by Mrs. Pankhurst was there anybody present who did not recognize their duty, and who would not gladly offer themselves right away without any hesitation? But when the call came for recruits, what did I see? I glanced behind me expecting to see a rush for the platform of those fine looking chaps at the back, but where were they? A lot of them had evaporated into space and the others, many of whom no doubt, had tried and failed, stood their looking on under the searching gaze of that vast throng of women. At last, after quite a pause, a few men and boys mounted the platform. I believe there were fifteen in all, when there should have been an hundred and fifty. Then to make the situation more intense, there was a call made for women to take men's places who had enlisted. We all saw the crowd of women, young and old, who surged forward, offering their services so that the men might do their duty. How proud I felt of those women. They did not hesitate nor ask a lot of silly questions; they just offered themselves for any duty that might be required of them.

Then another appeal was made to the men to come forward and give those good women a chance to make good, but by this time the remaining brave heroes at the back had gone, but they were not forgotten. When the meeting broke up, and on coming out we found quite a number of these fine, handsome fellows waiting outside, chafing at the girls like so many poodles that were waiting for their mistresses. Again later I saw several of them down town in the restaurants gorging themselves and displaying their wit in foolish remarks about suffragettes. Yet to my humble opinion Mrs. Pankhurst has more courage and more soul than the whole bunch of these gentlemen put together.

If I could add my appeal to those who have already spoken, I would remind these young fellows that the war will not last forever, and the time will come when it will be too late, and their chance of proving themselves men worthy of the respect of other men, and worthy of the mothers who bore them will be gone forever. What then?

Peterborough has done very well in the past in regard to recruiting, but there are still lots of men available as I have seen on my recent visit to the city. I have had the honour of fighting with the boys of Peterborough at the front, and I can tell you that what we think of those who have not come when they might have done so, is not very complimentary. So to save their faces I would urge these chaps to buck up and enlist; it is for a good cause, or we would not have been in it ourselves. In after years when time rolls on, history will record the details of this world war. Those who have been there can feel a thrill of satisfaction at the knowledge that they took part in it; but woe to the man who has not done his bit when he might have done so, I can hardly imagine his feelings.

I have no hesitation in wishing the 93rd Battalion great success and a speedy completion of their numbers so that they may go overseas and prove themselves, as I have no doubt they will make good, as all the boys from Peterborough have done. I have yet to hear a complaint from any of the boys in the 93rd. That speaks well for the commanding officer, those in charge and the men, so I can recommend any young man who is hesitating to join up. He will never regret it. Hoping when I come again to Peterborough I may find the 93rd up to strength, and wishing them great success, I remain, sir.

Yours truly,
C. W. Stenson.

Worn out and run down, besides feeling sore.
Tho' we don't use poultice, plaster or pill,
We cure all sick shoes no matter how ill;
Our prices are lowest, our work is the best.
No equal in town, just give us a test.

SESSION ENDED BY EASTER

That's Ottawa's Expectation—Opposition Has Big Programme

OTTAWA, March 9.—Now that an investigation into the contracts of the Shell Committee is wholly improbable, the indications point to a considerable shortening of the session of Parliament. The debate on the Laurier resolution, however, may take several days, after which the details of the amended budget are to be considered and general estimates and supply taken up. It is probable that the session will last till Easter, as the Opposition is disposed to discuss matters freely in the House and has a rather extensive programme outlined for investigations by the Public Accounts Committee.

National Association of Audubon Societies Places Advantages at Disposal of Our School Children

At the last annual meeting of the Commission of Conservation, Dr. T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies, of New York, gave a very interesting and instructive address on Bird Reservations.

The Association is international in its scope, and an outstanding feature of its work for the protection of bird life is the education of children to a love of wild birds. Dr. Pearson has kindly arranged to extend to Canadian school children all the advantages of this work, and it is hoped that school principals and teachers will interest their pupils in the great work of saving Canada's wild bird life.

To this end Dr. Pearson says: "For the past few years we have engaged in systematic organization of the school children into classes for bird study and bird protection. The children each pay a fee of ten cents, and receive material which costs us much more than that to publish and place in their hands. This consists of a series of excellent coloured pictures of birds, together with outline drawings, which the children, by means of water colours or crayons, can fill in and thus fasten in their minds the correct colourings of the various birds. The children also receive a very pretty bird-button bearing the words 'Audubon Society.' To the teacher who forms a class of ten or more, and sends in their fees to the Audubon Society, 1974 Broadway Avenue New York there will be forwarded free for one year the magazine Bird Lore and other matter on the subject of bird study. In 1915 about 150,000 children were thus organized in the United States.

Dr. Pearson further states: "As a further indication that there is nothing of a commercial character about this proposition, I may say that this work last year cost us at the rate of 26 cents for each child enrolled. For the present school year we have at our disposal a fund of $26,000 to use in this work, and I shall be very happy to share the advantages of this plan with the children of Canada."

There is thus placed before our school teachers an opportunity to interest pupils in this branch of nature study and at the same time secure for themselves valuable material to assist them in their work.—Conservation.

Cyril Maude Has Made Many London Productions

In 1895, Cyril Maude, the distinguished English actor who pays his second visit to Peterborough next week appearing at "The Grand" in "Grumpy," in partnership with Frederic Harrison, took over the management of the Haymarket in London, a house of comedy and long standing distinction, and a theatre associated with Buckland and the Bancrofts.

There he produced many plays and appeared in many parts: Hardcastle in "She Stoops to Conquer"; Acres in "The Rivals"; and Sir Peter in "The School For Scandal," among classic comedies; and Captain Lacelle in "Under the Red Robe"; Gavin Dishart in "The Little Minister"; Lord Bapchild in "The Manoeuvres of Jane"; the dentist in "You Never Can Tell"; Major Bingham in "The Second in Command"; and Captain James Barley in "Beauty and the Barge."

Bent on the direction of a theatre that should be altogether his own, Mr. Maude made ready in 1903 to pass to the Avenue, a little house on the Thames embankment, next to Charing Cross Station. When he was about to open it, a part of the roof of the station fell in and so damaged the Avenue that it finally had to be wholly rebuilt as a new theatre and was named The Playhouse, and was opened with a prologue by Mr. Shaw. Thither Mr. Maude transferred "Toddles," the pajama farce in which he was citing at another theatre and there he has appeared in the play in which he has acted in recent years—light pieces for the most part like "Tantalizing Tommy," "Love and What Then?," "The Flag Lieutenant" and "The Headmaster."

Mr. Maude has been honoured by three "command" performances. On the first and second occasions he appeared before King Edward and Queen Alexander, at Sandringham. On November 9, 1907, he acted Peter in "French As She Is Spoke" and Lord Ogleby in the dressing scene from "The Clandestine Marriage." On November 13, in the following year, he appeared before their Majesties as Richard Lascelles in "The Flag Lieutenant." Mr. Maude's third "command" performance may be taken as an especial compliment. During a brief farewell tour of the larger cities of Great Britain, in the autumn of two years ago virtually on the eve of his sailing for his first tour of America, he was honoured with a royal command to appear, with his company, at Balmoral Castle where King George and Queen Mary were in residence. The play chosen was "The Headmaster."

Shamrock Day Saturday Next

Proceeds in Aid of St. Vincent's Orphanage—Over Forty Orphans Provided For

The annual Shamrock Day will be held this year on Saturday, March 11th always the Saturday just previous to the 17th of March. The Ladies Aid of St. Peter's Church are again organized for a street sale of shamrocks the proceeds of which go to the aid of St. Vincent's Orphanage where at the present time over forty orphans are being taken care of. There is nothing more pathetic than to be left an orphan even under the very best of circumstances and conditions and by far the greater number of orphans are required to be taken care of systematically and tenderly by organizations for this purpose. In the work in this connection St. Vincent's Orphanage has done a noble work and the Ladies of St. Peter's hope for good demand for their shamrocks on Shamrock Day.

IS IT A GERMAN PLOT?

The Conscientious Scruples Affidavit of a Member of the Bible Student's Association

There has reached the hands of the military authorities here an affidavit, attested and signed, by, of all persons, a man whose Christian name is that of the Iron Duke, the great warrior, Arthur Wellesly—who swears that he has conscientious scruples against performing military service—that such service is contrary to his conscience and especially to his principles as a member of the "International Bible Students' Association."

There is evidence that a man in the country of common education could not of his own motive and initiative and knowledge of law and law forms, have written the preamble of the affidavit which learnedly cites the military law, but there is reason to believe that it is one of a series of such affidavits prepared by some central body and sent throughout the country to be signed in order to prejudice the cause of recruiting; that it is the outcome of German plotters. The German propagandists, working in every underhand and sneaking way are not above prostituting religion to serve the cause of the Huns. One way seems to be to use a cowardly conscience in the name of religion to prevent us filling up the 93rd Battalion.

Every loyal citizen in Peterborough should be on the alert to circumvent such tactics and should oppose with every effort any influence, under no matter what religious guise, that is calculated to directly or indirectly discourage recruiting.

There are men in Canada, "doing time" for discouraging recruiting and there should be no tolerance for any person, who does anything, to encourage the discouraging of recruiting.

DIVORCE AFTER 25 YEARS.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 9. — A trail of trouble, reaching half way around the world, covering a quarter of a century of time, dragging itself through the courts in seven different lawsuits and including the magical metamorphosis of a rising young musician into a sausage peddler, has reached an end. The Minnesota State Supreme Court has rendered final judgment in the Rose divorce case. Rose, relying on the legality of a divorce obtained by him in New York, had married a second time.

By the Supreme Court's ruling, Maurice Rose, a Minneapolis attorney, is granted a divorce from Bertha Rose, although it was the wife who originally brought a suit. The husband in a suit of his own charged cruelty.

Troops May Be Quartered Here

Mayor Duffus Will Look Into Prospects of Establishing a Military Training Camp at Nassau

A deputation representing the Speaker's Patriotic League waited upon the City Council last evening with a view of obtaining the Council's endorsation of a project to create a summer training camp at Nassau. In another month or two the Battalions at present quartered in the various armouries throughout the country will be placed under canvas where they will remain until their removal overseas or until the advent of another winter demands their return to barracks. Mr. E. G. Patterson, superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Company has intimated that one hundred and sixty acres owned by the company at Nassau, will be available for the training of troops. Mayor Duffus, assured the deputation that steps will be taken to interview the authorities and endeavor if possible, to have Nassau, made brigade headquarters for the third division. Mayor Duffus was delegated to look into the matter.

The Council was also asked to rebate the taxes on the old Baptist Church which has been leased by the Government for fifty dollars a month. The Government declines to pay the taxes. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee of the City Council. The Aldermen expressed themselves as willing to grant the request.

EXPRESS WAGGON ROBBED

NEW YORK, March 9.—Following the disappearance of $7,006.52 from the safe in the Adams Express company's waggon, on a Weehawken ferry the police were asked to send out an alarm for William Sherbut a clerk for the company. The money was placed in a safe in the wagon in front of the offices at 53 Broadway, and Sherbut was sent along to deliver it to a firm in Weehawken.

On the ferry Sherbut told the driver to go into the cabin while he watched the safe. When the ferry docked the driver could find no trace of Sherbut. He notified the express company and a clerk was sent who opened the safe and found it empty.

Popular Opinion in Italy is to Join the Allies More Closely

MILAN, Italy, March 7, via London, March 9.—The whole of Italy is hanging breathless on the battle of Verdun. Popular feeling is increasingly favourable to France. There is a growing pressure felt in political circles for wider participation of Italy in the war.

This was seen in the Chamber of Deputies, which recently reassembled with a coalition among the smaller parties to obtain from the Government wider action in conjunction with the allies. The majority of the deputies belong to the Giolitti party, which, prior to this war, favoured neutrality, along with certain Germanophiles. The Government, although of dependent tendencies, had to rely on this majority, but was inclined to meet the popular demand for Italy's close co-operation with the other members of the quadruple entente.

Public Opinion Asserted.

On this subject Guglielmo Ferrero, the famous historial, said in interview with me: "From the logic of the situation Italy must make every effort to assist the quadruple entente to bring the war to an end. I believe new coalition parties will be backed by public opinion that will bring about wider participation in the war and that before long there will be a declaration war against Germany.

"France will come out of the war the greatest European nation, for she has astonished the world by the magnitude her efforts against her powerful enemy compared with which the egorts of the rest of the quadruple entente are insignificant.

"The greatest idea that has been brought out during the war is that expressed by Theodore Roosevelt when he spoke of the duties of neutrality. Much has ben said of the rights of neutrals, but there are no rights without corresponding obligations. The hope of the future lies in acceptance of the idea that it is the duty of a nation which is not involved in an international dispute to intervene in favour of those international agreements which all should respect and that make for a normal condition of peace.

Do Not Want U. S. in It.

"I cannot say I should like to see the United States enter the war. You could not furnish an army, and we do not need your fleet. Besides, we are going to pull through without help. However, as an Italian, I should liked to have seen a breaking of diplomatic relations with Germany by the United States. The moral effect would be great. This moral effect is one of the powerful weapons of war. Because of it, I believe Germany does not desire a break with the United States."

DIDN'T BAR PAPERS.

Canadian Censors Deny that They Withheld Them from Soldiers.

OTTAWA, March 9.—As to a cable from London that Canadian papers for soldiers were taken from liners at the instigation of the censorship department here, Major Chambers says the thing is inconceivable. The censorship, he says, has taken no such action. If the papers contained any matter so objectionable as to make them unfit for soldiers' consumption, the editors would, he says, have been promptly on the carpet. There seems to be no explanation other than that of congestion between England and France for the non arrival of the papers at the front.

HER PLEA FOR $500 A MONTH ALIMONY FAILS

NEW YORK, March 9.—Mrs. Anna S. Wilkens Bergh cannot have the $500 a month in alimony which she sought pending trial in the Supreme Court of a separation action brought against her by William C. Bergh, a banker connected with the Columbia Bank. Justice Finch denied the wife's application. Mr. Bergh is a brother of Henry Bergh, founder of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The husband declares that his wife abandoned him October 1, 1915, taking their children from their home, at No. 32 West Seventy-first street. The children are Alfred P., fourteen; Henry Bergh, 3d, thirteen, and Roland C. Bergh, ten. They went with their mother to New Jersey.

Mrs. Bergh declared in her application for alimony that the treatment by her husband endangered her life and the lives of her children.

"Immediately after our marriage my husband began to treat me with great discourtesy," the wife said. "He talked only in monosyllables. He never addressed me by name and never used a term of endearment except on two occasions, when in the presence of third persons he called me 'My dear.'"

She believes his treatment may be summed up as one of "studied indifference and contempt." She said:—"It has been his practice to ignore my presence in any room he entered, and for years he has left the room immediately after I entered. For three years he refused to speak to me at the table, but always addressed me through the servants."

The wife says that she has not abandoned her husband, merely having left his home, not to return until he will treat her with the proper respect. She is now living with her children in No. 25 West Forty-ninth street. She says that when she was married she had $40,000, of which she spent $40,000 for a house in No. 136 East Thirty-sixth street, where they lived, and devoted the remainder to household expenses.

Her only present income now is from a trust fund producing $6,000 a year, she says. She owes $9,000. She declares that her husband has a one-third interest in property at No. 429 Fifth avenue, the interest being worth $275,000, and a half interest in about one-half of a block near Chatham square. He receives a large salary from the Columbia Bank, she says.

Mr. Bergh says that his wife told him in June, 1913, not to speak to her any more and "not to kiss her or notice her in any way." He says she has interfered with the education of their sons, taking them from schools where they were receiving the proper training.

Mrs. Bergh is extravagant in her tastes, he believes, because it cost him $10,000 for family expenses during the last year, in addition to bills of $1,800 which he paid for his wife's wearing apparel. He says he has had to spend $30,000 of his principal because of her extravagance.

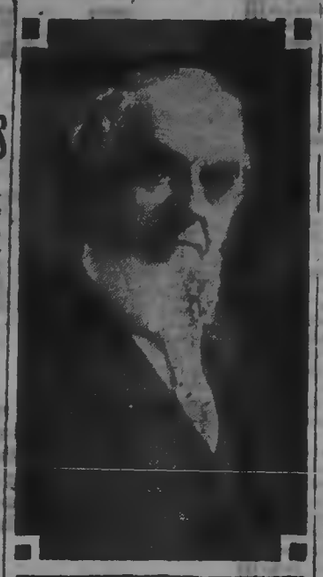
Miner's New Wage Contract Is Adopted

Examiner Special:

The shortage of supply and the unsettlement of the soft coal situation that was anticipated this spring has evidently been taken care of as the following despatch from New York shows the mine workers and owners have adopted a new wage contract which covers a period of two years.

NEW YORK, March 8.—After a warm debate lasting nearly six hours, the Interstate Joint Conference of miners and operators from the soft-coal fields of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, representing nearly 200,000 mine workers, today adopted the new wage contract agreed upon by the sub-committee of employers and employees.

The agreement will increase the income of the mine workers in those States about $15,000,000 during the run, and will have an influence on the wage conferences to be held in other bituminous fields.



PASTOR RUSSELL of BROOKLYN TABERNACLE, N.Y.

Who will Lecture at the Grand Opera House on Sunday March 12th at 3 o'clock p. m.

LORD DERBY REGRETS IT

MANCHESTER, March 9. — Lord Derby, speaking here to-day on the question of enrolment of married men for military service, declared he regretted this early calling up of married men more than he could say.

"They are being called up long before I expected they would be," he said, "but I should be casting a slur on their patriotism if I believed they were not going to come forward when called upon."

If the scheme of getting recruits by groups had been in existence before the war, continued Lord Derby, the details could have been fought out. As it was the government had to get men while the organization was being prepared. He was certain that in good time they would get all the single men, but unless the married men came forward there might be a shortage which might be absolutely fatal.

"I am receiving the assitance of all the government departments," he continued, "and I have no doubt we shall succeed in procuring an army sufficient for our purpose, made up for the most part of single men, and at the same time leaving behind all those essential to the carrying on of the industries of the country."

DEFER CHURCH UNION

Kingston Presbytery Considers it Proper to Wait Till War Ends.

KINGSTON, Ont., March 9.—Kingston Presbytery passed a resolution that, in view of the large minority opposed to church union and the large numbers of ministers, elders, communicants, and adherents of the church now overseas, it does not deem it wise or expedient to urge union, but that the Assembly take steps to secure the fullest possible co-operation with sister churches to save overlapping.

Rev. Dr. MacGillivary, moderator of the General Assembly, for 29 years pastor of Chalmer's Church and with 43 years service in the ministry, will ask the Assembly for permission to retire. He is now 71. On his motion the Presbytery nominated Rev. John Neil, Toronto, as Assembly moderator for the coming year.

MISS DOROTHY ALLAN "CALLED" TO CHALMERS CHURCH

Offered the Position of Soprano Soloist in Chalmers Church, Toronto

Miss Dorothy Allan has been offered a position of soprano soloist in Chalmers Presbyterian church, Toronto, with large increase in salary. Chalmers church makes quite a feature of its music. The offer is all the more to be appreciated as it came entirely unsolicited, Miss Allan having been recommended unknown to herself by Mr. Richard Tattersall, the well-known and talented organist of Old St. Andrew's church, Toronto. The chairman, organist, and some of the lusical committee of Chalmers church went to hear Miss Allan recently when she was the vocalist at Mr. T. J. Palmer's organ recital in the Metropolitan Methodist church.

Dr. Vogt has paid Miss Allan the compliment of asking her to repeat Gounod's "O, Ma Lyre Immortelle" at one of the Conservatory commencement concerts in April. This was one of the numbers Miss Allan sang at a vocal recital there recently

While, from considerations of the tribute involved in this offer to Miss Allan's exceptional vocal artistry and general musical talent, she is to be warmly congratulated upon the compliment implied in the invitation of Chalmers church. She has, both by her art and her personality, endeared herself to the people of Peterborough. The city enjoys a reflected credit by being the some of a singer whose work has not only deservedly made her popular at home, but appreciated and praised abroad. Flattering as the offer Miss Allan has received, she is attached by affection to St. Paul's at Peterborough, and we are selfish enough to hope that even the temptation of a largely increased salary will not deprive us of her presence. We should lose much by her departure, for not only has she filled a distinguished place in our musical life, but she has given her artistic services at—one must think—no little sacrifice, very freely ever since the war began. She has not only sung repeatedly at home in patriotic interests, but has gone to the outlying districts with the speakers of the Patriotic League, and has always been willing to give her splendid musical services to any good cause.

WAR ORDERS $400,000,000.

Du Pont Total Produced $57,840,758 Profit Last Year.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 9.—War orders booked by the DuPont Powder Company have reached an aggregate of $400,000,000, it is understood. Much of this enormous business was filled in the fiscal year ending December 31, 1915, and was the potent factor in the production of $57,840,758 of net profits which the company reported for last year. Prior to the present war the DuPont Company's net profit has formed about 2 per cent. of gross.

Had His Right Arm Amputated

Millbrook Man Was Struck by a Train—Took a Weak Spell

MILLBROOK, March 9.—While going home on Thursday night, Mr. J. N. Hicks took a weak spell and fell backward on the track. He managed to get clear of the track, except his right arm, which was crushed at the wrist and also near the elbow. He was lying out about two hours before he was found by Mr. Fern, who was asked to look for him by Miss Brown, a sister-in-law of Mr. Hicks, who had become anxious when he did not get home at his usual hour. Dr. Turner was called and had him moved to the Queen's Hotel where it was found necessary to amputate his arm near the shoulder.

larly those not directly appertaining to the war, and their energies have been directed in other directions, toward larger production and the general benefit of the country.

"Who," challenged Sir George, "has heard of the liquor traffic willing to make sacrifice at this time?" Great men like Kitchener and Asquith have set us a noble example. Even King George said: "As for me and my house no drink shall come within its walls during the war."

At the same meeting Mr. Nicholson of Chapleau, a man of large experience on the frontiers of business life, at one time an adjuster of disputes for the C.P.R., spoke of the terrible wastage of life and manhood in the northern regions due directly to strong drink.

Dr. Henry, chief speaker of the Anti-Saloon League of the United States, was of the opinion that such a record by petitions touching the voting power and personnel of the Province has never been equalled in the world, when it is considered that in some cases as high as 98 per cent. of the voters had signed.

Alderman Langford, as Chairman of the County Committee, was one of those privileged to be present in the audience chamber when the monster petitions were presented to Premier Hearst and his colleagues. He was very well pleased with the reception given the deputation, and was confident that in the promised referendum on the straight majority basis would forever settle the liquor traffic. The Premier was most outspoken in his sympathies, and intimated that the Government had already foreseen the sentiment as obtained through the medium of his License Commissioners. After the vote is taken, however, it will be largely up to the temperance people to stand behind the movement by seeing that proper facilities are provided the travelling public lest there should come a reaction later on. He emphasized the fact that so far as he and his Cabinet were concerned they were united on the question and determined to see that the will of the people be carried out.

The programme arrangements, in his opinion, were well carried out, and must prove of great benefit in influencing the electorate of the Province.

Mr. Langford realized that this is simply the first step in the campaign and that much work remains to be done to counteract the anti's who, naturally, will put up a stiff fight in this, their last gasp.

"THE WHITE FEATHER" HERE ON SATURDAY

Seats for "The White Feather" return engagement at the Grand on Saturday went on sale at the box office this morning and met with a steady demand all day. It is a pretty fair test of the merits of a dramatic composition if, instead of proving a bore upon a second hearing, it gives greater pleasure than upon first acquaintance, and of "The White Feather" it can truly be said that its good points come out stronger and in a more entertaining way as one becomes familiar with the cleverly drawn characters which move about in it. These characters are, in fact, perfect cameras of men and women who are taking part in the life which Britons are leading these days. There can be no doubt of the lasting success of "The White Feather," it is proving to be one of the biggest hits ever given on the stage. The same company that made so pronounced a hit on the occasion of the play's first presentation here will again be seen in the various parts, could anything be more satisfying than this? It means that Albert Brown, will repeat his inimitable portrayal of the role of Brent, the British secret service officer.

May Construct A Footbridge

Proposal Endorsed by the Railway Committee of the City Council

The Railway committee of the City Council will recommend that the City Council provide an appropriation sufficient to construct a footbridge on the south side of the C.P.R. railway bridge crossing the Otonabee river. The committee met last evening and among other things perused a report prepared by City Engineer Parsons, estimating the cost of the structure at $3,117. This estimate may be raised by the railway company.

It was moved by Ald. Debbin and seconded by Ald. Weir that the engineer's report be received and the committee recommend the construction of a bridge unless the cost is prohibitive. It is likely the railway company will undertake the work, as it concerns their own bridge, to which the footbridge is to be attached. The proposed footbridge will have a five foot plank walk.

Street Car Service.

The committee dealt with a letter that was received from Mr. W. G. Ferguson, manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, and relating to a proposal to have their cars stop on the near side of intersecting paved streets. The committee decided that the best interests of all concerned would be served by having the cars stop on the near side of intersecting streets, whether or not they are paved. This would avoid confusion.

"It will be better for the policemen, although according to what we hear it wouldn't make much difference if we did kill a few off," observed Ald. Weir.

Ald. Stratton—"Not a particle."

"They couldn't enlist then," commented City Clerk Armstrong.

The committee's suggestion will be referred to the street railway company.

MOSQUITO-EATING FISH.

They Are Being Developed by U. S. Bureau of Fisheries.

Enter: The mosquito-eating fish. Those who look forward with dread to the approaching hot months and their attendant influx of mosquitoes can now breathe or heave, as the case may be, sighs of relief: For the terrible, monstrous denizen of the deep is on its way to relieve suffering humanity.

Dr. Hugh Smith, director of the Bureau of Fisheries, in Washington, announces that within a very brief period a fish which will devour mosquitoes, just like the angle-worms, will be developed by the bureau. Thousands of them will be poured into water unsuited for the propagation of food fish, and in places where oil cannot be used in co-operation with the Public Health Service, the Bureau has arranged to propagate the submarine fish in its stations.

Pastor Russell At The Grand

Pastor Russell, the great author and lecturer, President of the International Bible Students' Association, and Pastor of the New York City Temple congregation, will deliver a lecture next Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Grand Opera House, his topic being, "The Battle of Armageddon." The Brooklyn Pastor comes at the invitation of the Associated Bible Students of this city.

Pastor Russell's recent public utterances have attracted special attention because of the fact that during the past forty years he has frequently expressed the conviction, based upon the interpretation of Bible prophecy, that a time of unprecedented trouble was impending and would become world-wide. The time set by this Bible scholar was the autumn of last year. Since the outbreak of hostilities in Europe he has been delivering a series of lectures specially relating to the war and Bible prophecies respecting its outcome. His address here next Sunday is one of these.

The present conflict in Europe is but the prelude to an even greater struggle, according to Pastor Russell's view. He believes the following conflict will be largely the results of the poverty and distress occasioned by the war and the discontent their cause, finally leading to social revolution and anarchy. This succeeding conflict, the Pastor declares, is clearly marked in Bible prophecy and termed, "the battle of Armageddon," and described by Christ as "a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." This final trouble, the venerable preacher believes, will prepare the world for, and usher in the long-promised reign of "peace on earth and good will among men" at the hands of the Prince of Peace.

Pastor Russell is an independent religious worker, and has won world-wide distinction as a defender of the Bible and because of his "anti-hell fire" preaching. He is a familiar figure here, having visited this city a number of times during his long career of public life as author and lecturer. During the past year, the Pastor created quite a sensation by the launching of a moving-picture exhibition detailing the story of the Bible from the creation to "Paradise restored." This progressive method of carrying on evangelistic work has proven eminently successful according to the report of the Bible Students' Association which financed the production. The drama, styled "Creation," has been shown during the past year throughout this country and Canada. Many millions have witnessed the production.

As usual, it has been announced that no admission charge will be made at this lecture, and no collection taken. 24-9-11-1w10

He has taken the matter up and hopes to locate his own property.

Widow 77, Says She's Starving; Husband's Estate is $200,000

NEW YORK, March 9.—Mrs. Mary Hardy, widow of John Hardy, a lawyer of this city twice elected to the House of Representatives, testified in the Supreme Court that she is starving because she has been unable to collect $15 a week allowed to her by the courts from the estate of her husband amounting to $200,000.

The fact became known in a decision just made by Justice Cohalan, who criticised the conduct of Lambert Hubbel, husband of Mrs. Hardy's sister.

The justice heard an application by Miss Lillian M. Brown, niece of Mrs. Hardy, who holds a judgment against her of $361 for board and money loaned. The niece asked to set aside a confession of judgment for $2,500 signed by Mrs. Hardy in favor of her brother-in-law.

Miss Brown said that Mrs. Hardy married the late Mr. Hardy in 1865 and separated from him in 1873. The next year they signed a separation agreement by which he agreed to pay her $25 a week for the rest of her life. Later that amount was reduced to $15 a week. At the death of Mr. Hardy the income paid to Mrs. Hardy stopped, and she came here from the West where she had been stopping to established her residence in Newark, N. J., and bring action to enforce the separation agreement.

Money Not Forthcoming.

Douglas Mathewson, Borough President of the Bronx, a nephew of Mr Hardy, and James P. Dymock, as executors of the will of Mr. Hardy, were made defendants in a proceeding brought by the widow. She obtained a judgment awarding $15 weekly to her for the rest of her life. Not long after the judgment was entered Mr. Hubbell had a receiver for her property appointed on the ground that she had executed a confession of judgment in his favor for $2,500. She never knew she signed any confession of judgment until a copy of the order appointing the receiver was filed with her attorney, according to her story

Miss Brown asked to have Mr. Hubbell's judgment set aside on the ground that he had obtained it by fraud in representing to Mrs. Hardy that it was an agreement to pay him for his time lost in coming to this city to testify that he had witnessed the signing of the separation agreement.

Miss Brown said: "Mrs. Hardy is now in dire circumstances, being entirely without funds." The niece said that Mr. Mathewson had pleaded with Mr. Hubbell for permission to advance enough to Mrs. Hardy in order that she might live. Mr. Hubbell is said to have refused. A copy of testimony by Mrs. Hardy in supplementary proceedings said she said:

"I am starving. I owe $600 to the Continental Hotel. I am to get $15 a week from my husband's estate, but they won't pay me. I have had no money since my husband died."

Didn't Know It Was Confession.

The aged woman said that her attorney informed her she must make Mr. Hubbell testify as a witness to her separation agreement. He lived in New Jersey. She went to see him, she said, and they were "pleasant to each other". She continued:

Mr. Hubbell told me he would have to be paid for his time lost and carfare, and I said of course I would pay him. Just before the trial he came to my hotel in Newark with another man and asked me to sign a paper, which he said was an agreement to pay his expenses. I signed it and didn't know it was a confession of judgment until my lawyer told me about it."

Asked if Mr. Hubbell ever rendered any service to her, Mrs. Hardy replied:—"In the forty years I have known him he never did a solitary thing for me and never loaned me a cent. I can't even get money for meals, because he has tied up my judgment."

Justice Cohalan set aside Mr. Hubbell's judgment. His decision describes Mrs. Hardy as "an old lady" weak and penniless, and now in her seventy-seventh year." The justice found that four days before the opening of Mrs. Hardy's trial against the Hardy estate Mr. Hubbell filed the confession of judgment in his favor, and obtained an order prohibiting the Hardy executors from paying any money to any one except the receiver appointed on Hubbell's application. Justice Cohalan said:—

"The defendant is in dire circumstances, being now without funds and living on the charity of her friends. I am satisfied that she was imposed upon when she signed the confession of judgment, and that she believed it was an agreement to pay the legitimate expense of Lambert Hubbell as a witness, in which he hoped to recoup himself for money he alleges he advanced to her many years prior thereto. The plaintiff makes a feeble showing in his effort to sustain this confession of judgment. In doing so he chooses to make charges against the moral character of this old woman, and not only goes back forty-three years to do this, but by innuendo makes her a target for attack at this very time.

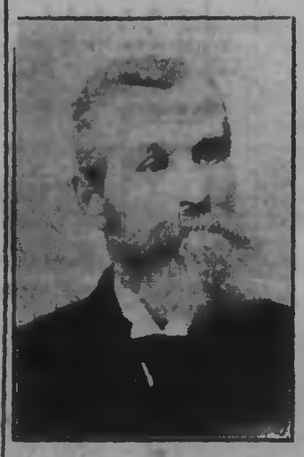
Mr. Hubbell thinks that he should be paid for helping Mrs. Hardy obtain her separation agreement, although he is not a lawyer, and says that at some indefinite time he paid $100 to help h reson out of a difficulty says the Justice. Justice Cohalan concludes that the confession of judgment was "not only fraudulently obtained, but fatally defective."

Celebrates His 84th Birthday

If Mr. William Yelland is privileged to see the light of another day the will have completed his eighty-fourth year, having been born March 10th, 1832.

Notwithstanding his advanced age, Mr. Yelland is a most active man, thoroughly enjoying life, and takes a great interest in affairs generally, particularly the great temperance movement which is sweeping over the world at the present time.

Mr. Yelland has been a resident of Peterborough for upwards of sixty-six years, having come here June 1st, 1861, and for over forty years he conducted a most successful carriage and blacksmith business on George street.



MR. WILLIAM YELLAND
Will be Eighty-four Years Old To-morrow.

Of late years he has lived retired, enjoying the fruits of his toil.

Mr. Yelland always took a deep interest in the city, and for fourteen years was a member of the Council, two of which he served as mayor. To show that he has enjoyed the confidence of his fellow citizens, it is only necessary to state that he has been a member since its inception of the Board of Trustees representing the Hall Trust Fund, an appropriation of $30,000 left by the late William Hall, the interest of which is distributed each year to the deserving poor of the city.

The Examiner extends to Mr. Yelland congratulations on the morrow and trusts he may be spared to see many more.

Crown Prince Lost Over 5,000 Men in Fight For Possession of Corbeaux Forest

Which Was Retaken by the French Troops Yesterday---German Losses in Officers Lately Particularly Heavy

NEW YORK, March 10.—A London cable says the Crown Prince lost over five thousand men in the last twelve hours' fight for the possession of Corbeaux Forest, retaken yesterday by the French troops.

BERLIN, March 10.—A French air squadron bombarded Metz killing two civilians and wrecking several buildings. One machine was brought down and the pilot captured.

PARIS, March 10.—German losses in officers in recent Verdun fighting have been particularly heavy owing to the Emperor's order for officers to lead the men into action.

AMSTERDAM, March 10.—Six French aviators bombarded German railway depots in Central Belgium, doing heavy damage.

BERLIN, March 10.—Austrians have made no further advances in Galicia following the capture yesterday of one thousand yards of Russian trenches. Bad weather has stopped operations on the Italian front.

NEW YORK, March 10.—United States Steel Corporation announces it will shortly spend fifty millions dollars on a big Canadian plant. Location is not yet reported.

ROME, March 10.—Russians are completing two super-Dreadnoughts at a Black Sea port, and plan to convey a great army from Odessa to Trebisond for Armenia.

PETROGRAD, March 10.—Turkish and Persian troops, under German officers, are evacuating the Persian city of Ispahan before the Russian advance.

NEW UNDERSEA TERROR.

NEW YORK, March 10.—An American business man of German descent who recently returned from Germany has told a few friends in this city that Germany has been experimenting for some time with a death-dealing invention that will astonish the world. He says he received his information from inner naval circles in Berlin, and that it is authentic.

This invention, he says, will play a big part in an attack on the British fleet, which is now being mapped out. It is compact, swift, unerring, and marvellous in its ingenuity. It can be operated by one man, is launched under water, and never comes to the surface, so that those whom it strikes never can see it or have any warning of its approach. It can be used effectively in attacking battleships, torpedo boats, or submarines; in fact, it will replace the submarine entirely, as it is so far ahead of them in efficiency as to make the submarines useless in comparison, he says.

According to this man, experiments have been made with the device in the Baltic for several months, and the invention has surprised even the German naval officers. Men are now being trained to operate it.

TO BREAK BLOCKADE OF ALLIES IN ADRIATIC

Austrian Vessels Prepare to Go to Aid of Turks via Dardanelles

ROME, March 9, via Paris, March 10.—Two of the most powerful of Austria's dreadnoughts are being prepared in a Dalmatian port, the Tribuna says, with the intention of repeating the exploit of the German vessels Goeben and Breslau and forcing the allies' blockade of the Adriatic, in order to reach the Dardanelles and bring assistance to Turkey in the Black Sea, as the situation of the latter is growing desperate, owing to Russian naval supremacy in those waters. For this reason, the newspaper adds, the floating mines which obstructed the Dardanelles have been swept up by the Turks and the Germans in order to clear a way for the Austrian battleships which are expected.

BROADWAY BEAUTY AND $2,600 GONE

NEW YORK, March 10.—Charles Rosenberg, a Buffalo merchant, arrived in New York Monday with $1,600 in cash and jewellery worth another thousand, met a pretty girl in Broadway that night, and when he awoke in "the cold gray dawn of the morning after" in a luxurious apartment he had only his clothes remaining.

Upon his statements Detectives Tierney and McGee, of the Fourth Branch Bureau, arrested Mrs. Harriet Curtis, who said she was an actress, in her apartment in the Robert Fulton, No. 250 Riverside Drive. Rosenberg, who is registered at the Colonial Hotel, Eighth avenue and 125th street, said she was not the girl he had met, but the police said she shared the apartment with the girl who is wanted.

After the theatre Rosenberg said he "casually" made the acquaintance of a very pretty girl in a Broadway restaurant. They had a fine time at several all night restaurants and dancing places and reached the Robert Fulton about three o'clock Tuesday morning. When he awoke at ten o'clock his fair companion of the night before was gone, also his $1,600 in cash and a diamond and pearl tie pin and his watch.

Mrs. Curtis informed the police that the girl who had "wrongfully" accompanied Rosenberg to the apartment had left about four o'clock in the morning, according to hall attendants. She had taken a travelling bag with her. Wealthy residents of the Robert Fulton were astonished when they heard that complaint of such a robbery in their exceptionally fine house had been made and that the police had arrested one of the tenants. Mrs. Curtis was accused of grand larceny and was locked in a cell. She said she would have sent a telegram to her brother in Philadelphia to come to her aid, except that he was to be married that day, and she did not wish to spoil his wedding day.

GILLETT'S LYE

ZEPPELINS WARNED THE GERMAN FLEET

It Intended to Attack England, But Found Movement Unfavourable

LONDON, March 10.—The morning newspapers publish from their correspondents in Holland such details as are available there regarding the recent activity of the German fleet in the North Sea. According to these accounts the fleet included about fifty craft of all descriptions, from the most modern dreadnoughts down to old-fashioned torpedo boats.

The fleet was escorted by two Zeppelins, which served as scouts to prevent a surprise attack by hostile vessels. One trawler sighted this fleet 150 miles due west of the mouth of the Elbe. Another saw it 35 miles north-west of Ymuiden. All the German ships were painted a war grey and were invisible at a short distance. Heavy clouds of smoke frequently hid them completely.

One Dutch trawler is quoted as having made the following report: "During the recent air raid on England a Zeppelin was seen scouting in advance of three cruisers and a fleet of destroyers and submarines, which were believed to have the intention of making a dash for English waters. The Zeppelin, however, made certain discoveries regarding the watchfulness of the British fleet and the German squadron hastily withdrew."

The fleet is reported back at its base again. A Dutch trawler, which was stopped and searched, reported that each warship was supplied with some kind of an extra funnel at the stern.

A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous glossy, silky, and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

Battle For Verdun is Now Entering Third and What May Be Its Final Phase

Enemy is Throwing Massed Battalions Against French Centre Around Fort de Vaux---Germany Prepared to Make Sacrifices Unequalled in This War.

PARIS, March 10.—With blasting hurricanes of shell fire and furious infantry fighting, the battle for Verdun is now entering the third and what may be its final phase.

The Germans are throwing massed battalions against the French centre around Fort De Vaux. They are assailing the French left on the west bank of the Meuse in charge after charge. Their big guns are opening a heavy attack on French lines southeast of Verdun from the direction of Fresnes.

All military experts here are united in the belief that Germany is prepared to make sacrifices unequalled in this war. French commanders are without a semblance of fear as to the outcome. Col. Rousset, retired, declared that Germany planned a mighty blow against Verdun, and if it fails now the check to German arms will be irreparable. Other experts agree with him.

The first phase of the battle must have been disappointing to the Germans, it is believed here. German infantry captured only advanced French position that had been blown to pieces to lavish waste of shells.

GERMAN ASSAULTS POWERFUL AS EVER BUT GAINS NOT EQUAL TO EFFORT

PARIS, March 10.—(Delayed)—The latest despatches from Verdun while reporting heavy bombardments and furious attacks with small German gains west of the Meuse and at Fresnes, strengthen my opinion that the battle is drawing to a close tactically. These German assaults have been as powerful as ever, but their gains no longer are commensurate with the effort. At the present rate it will take the Germans months and the waste of half their army to capture Verdun. However, to judge from precedents, it will probably take the Germans some time to realize that they really have been checked.

CHANGE OF TACTICS.

At Verdun, as at Ypres, more than a year ago, they may be expected to continue smashing away at the French lines in a desultory manner for some time. The Germans' tactics have changed considerably since the battle of Ypres. Their original style of massed infantry attacks seems to have been abandoned.

On this basis the French experience at Champagne and their own experience in Russia and Serbia, they seem to have adopted the system of fighting chiefly with artillery, but instead of a general assault, the Germans concentrate the bulk of their artillery first at one point, then another, following each bombardment with infantry attack, thus wearing away the enemy by hacking notches in his front.

HARD TO SHIFT BIG GUNS.

To move a great part of the heavy artillery takes time, during which the enemy can bring up reinforcements, so that before the end of the struggle the assailant will find himself confronted with artillery as strong as his own, which must be overpowered before the advance can be resumed. The Germans, in my opinion, have reached this stage of the battle of Verdun.

The French artillery seems to be holding its own. The day of German superiority in heavy artillery on the western front apparently has passed.

British Forces in Mesopotamia Defeated Turkish Troops

LONDON, March 10.—British forces in Mesopotamia defeated Turkish troops which were barring the way to Kut-El-Amara, driving them back seven miles.

LONDON, March 10.—General Smuts continues British victories in German East Africa. Important points have been captured.

LONDON, March 10.—Latest reports indicate that the Germans at Verdun are being crumpled up by French artillery. The French have regained much territory.

LONDON, March 10.—It is again stated that Rumania and Greece will shortly enter the war on the side of the Allies.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—United States troops continue to pursue Villa bandits into Mexico. In a pitched battle last night seven soldiers were killed and seven wounded.

Lad Fought At Fifteen

King's Chat With Brave Boy Soldier —"Military" Age

King George, unlike the Kaiser has a sense of humour.

While paying a private visit this week-end to the wounded lying in the National Hospital for the Paralyzed in Queen-square, W.C., the King, who was accompanied by the Queen, saw a particularly young looking boy soldier.

"How old are you?" said the King to this soldier—Private Ernest Leonard Cooper, of the 1st 5th South Staffs.

"Nineteen, your Majesty," came the prompt reply.

"Ah!" said the King. "I see you mean your 'military' age."

"Yes, your Majesty. I am seventeen. Enlisted when I was fifteen. But I had a lot of trouble in getting into the Army because I looked so young."

A "Lloyd's News" representative was given special permission to interview Private Cooper at the hospital, yesterday, and he told the story of how he became a soldier at fifteen.

Buried in a Dug-out.

"I am a native of Wednesbury, and enlisted in September, 1914, in the South Staffs. Though short, I was always pretty stocky, and I told a tall pal that I would enlist if he'd go and show his pluck, because he was being badgered by some of the other chaps. We were all a lot of young screw-cutters together.

"Well, he was rejected, and he tried to persuade me that there was no need for me to join up. But I said I'd promised to offer myself if he did, and so I just did. But the recruiting sergeant told me to go back to Sunday School! But I tried again, and my pal tried again, and we both got in. Poor chap, he's been killed since.

"Somehow or other I managed to get sent out with the draft last June. And because I looked so young somebody was always trying to send me back, but I always succeeded in wriggling out of it. I wanted to fight. The life suited me fine. I weighed eight stone when I enlisted, and when I was somewhere in France I bumped the scales at eleven stones! Being wounded pulled me down to 7st., and I now weigh 8st. 9lb., after being seventeen weeks in various hospitals.

"You see, I'm suffering from shell shock. I was taken away unconscious when coming out of a trench at Neuve Chapelle. Once I was buried in a dug-out. When I came to this hospital I'd quite lost my memory, and didn't know either my mother or my dad when they came to see me.

No Meat or Tea.

"I've never eaten solid meat in my life, and never tasted tea. I suppose I'm the only soldier who's never touched bully beef. I've done my fighting on bread and cheese (I like its taste), and eggs, and plenty of 'em. I suck the eggs raw when I get the chance. Instead of tea I drink milk, and I had all the milk I could drink at the front. My mother used to send me food parcels from home but they never contained any solid meat because she knew I couldn't eat it.

"When the King came to the hospital this week he asked me how old I was. I told him I was nineteen. But he smiled and said, 'You mean your military age.'

"After I had told him that I enlisted when I was fifteen, his Majesty said, 'But didn't your father object?' And he seemed pleased when I told him what my father had said at the time, which was: 'If any of my boys are plucky enough and lucky enough to get into the Army I shant stand in their way.' Why my middle brother tried to enlist when he was only fourteen, but he was told not to be cheeky.

"The Queen also had a little chat with me, and asked me if I still had the same pluck.

"'I hope so, your Majesty,' I replied, 'as I've still got the blood of a Briton in me.'"

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hinz, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

Many Women Suffer
FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS
IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WOMAN SUFFERAGE.

Its War Time Aspect.

London, Eng. The women of England are doing their duty. They are taking care of the wounded, or if they cannot assist in work of that kind they are adding their savings to promote the good work. They are knitting and sewing for the soldiers at the front. The suffragists have given so little trouble to the government that it will undoubtedly soften the hearts of those in Parliament, since the "militants" have turned all their energies to aid the fighting men of England, and so suffrage may soon come after this terrible war is over.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day, because it is made without alcohol or narcotics. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper.

Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of. In ninety-nine per cent. of these cases it is the womanly organism that requires attention; the weak back, dizzy spells and black circles about the eyes, are only symptoms. Go to the source of trouble. When that is corrected the other symptoms disappear.

St. Thomas, Ont.—"I wish to say for the benefit of other women who suffer that I recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a great help. I have personally recommended the same to many who in turn have been helped a great deal by its use."—Mrs. F. J. Bowden, 19 Oliver St., St. Thomas, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"Won't Yvonne be here later?" inquired Tollemache, striving to cloak his disappointment.

"I'm inclined to think she will remain with Mrs. Carmac till eleven or thereabouts."

"But the doctor is there — and a nurse."

"Unless I am greatly mistaken, Mrs. Carlake will prefer Yvonne to any nurse. There is a comradeship of nationality, you know. Now, Larry, no grumbling. Let's make the best of things."

A knock at the door heralded the entrance of a dozen or more smiling and self-possessed Bretons. The studio was the only room in the house large enough to hold the company that would gather within the next few minutes. The living room was packed with tables and chairs; hence, on fete days, Ingersoll's quarters were invaded.

The artist was acquainted with everyone present, and Tollemache was no stranger to the majority. Nearly all were of the well-to-do yeoman class; for Mere Pitou belonged to an old family and her husband a farrier, had been well thought of in Pont Aven. Men and women wore the national costume and appeared that evening in grand state. The women's full-skirted dresses were of black cashmere, trimmed and slashed with deep bands of black velvet; but this sombre setting was merely a foil of aprons and overbodices wrought in gold, silver and bright-hued silk threads, the whole blended in pretty designs with an oriental lavishness of colour and sheen.

The coifs, though bearing a general similarity of design, varied for each district. The abundant and jet-black hair of these Breton dames and demoiselles was waved over the forehead and coiled somewhat toward the back of the head. Round the twists thereon was placed, in the first instance, the petite coiffe, a stiff white linen band three inches deep, which, pinned securely, served as the basis of a dainty superstructure. A strip of silk ribbon, cream, pink, or light lue, hid the petite coiffe, and showed its tint through the meshes of the coronet of fine lace and cambric forming the grand coiffe, with its coquettish streamers falling below the neck.

Round the throat, and deeply cut, was the broad linen collar, highly starched, and so wide that its wings projected over the shoulders, leaving a space across the top of the breast to reveal the lace edging of an underbodice. These collars would puzzle any laundress who was not a Bretonne if she were asked to prepare them, because their graceful curves, moulded to the slope of the shoulders and the straight line of the back, are obtained by a process of wrinkling, or fursewing, effected by the use of long straws when the linen has been lightly ironed when it is still damp and pliable.

Age does not affect the style of dress. The girl of eight is attired exactly like her grandmother, the only variation being seen in the shoes, the younger people mostly donning white doeskin, and the older ones black patent leather with silver buckles.

The men too, without exception, wore tight-fitting gray trousers, short jackets of black cloth, with tabliers of black velvet and ornamental buttons. Some dandies affected gold, silver, and coloured silk embroidery down each side of the front of the jacket. Their hats were low-crowned, black wideawakes, with heavy bands of black velvet, carrying showy buckles of silver on a rosette.

A more light-hearted, jovial, and picturesque company it would be difficult to find, or, considering its nature, one more expensively dressed. (Strangers, especially of the fair sex, who decide to purchase "a Brittany costume" for the next fancy dress ball, are likely to be unpleasantly surprised when they inquire the price. The materials are invariably the best of their kind, and the lace and embroidery are handworked. Naturally one such outfit lasts several years.)

Ingersoll moved among these free-mannered, laughter-loving folk as though he had not a care in the world. Some notion of the disaster to the Stella had spread, and he was called on for particulars, which he gave in sufficient detail. The men appreciated the peril from which the Hirondelle had extricated herself, the women were prodigal of their sympathy with the American woman who had lost her husband. Tollemache, listening to his friend's easy flow of talk, wondered more than ever what sort of nervous attack it was that induced the amazing display of terror at the moment of landing.

Supper was ended when Peridot put in an appearance. His face was flushed, and his gray-green eyes had acquired a rather suspicious luster. In a word, Captain Popple had discovered the excellence of liqueur brandy, and Peridot, ordinarily an abstemious fellow, had proved himself a less seasoned vessel than his host.

Madeleine was the first to notice his condition, and it troubled her. She rather avoided him, and as a consequence he affected a loud-voiced and boisterous good-humor.

"Gars!" he cried, seizing the opportunity when the girl refused to dance with him. "Where is Yvonne? She can foot it better than any of you."

Now he had never before alluded to Yvonne by her Christian name. While the Bretons are not toadies, they are polite, and the artist's daughter ranked as an aristocrat in the village. An awkward silence fell. Even Ingersoll shot an inquiring glance at the fisherman.

"Mademoiselle Yvonne is at the Hotel Julie,' said Mere Pitou. "Pity she didn't see you as she was going."

"Why?" grinned Peridot.

"Because you might have known then how to address her. By this time you seem to have forgotten."

"Que diable! I meant no offense, Madame. I suppose she's looking after the lady who claimed her as a daughter."

"What sayest thou, Imbecile?"

"Fact," said Peridot, with drunken gravity. "I asked a man who speaks English what the lady was screaming as I tucked her into the auto, and he told me—"

"Larraidou," broke in Ingersoll, pallid with sudden anger, "you had better go home."

Then Peridot too flared into wrath. "What have I done wrong?" he cried. "Ore nom! they're as like as two peas in a pod! Come, now, Monsieur—is there any harm in saying that?"

Ingersoll turned to Tollemache. "Larry," he said, "oblige me by taking our talkative friend to his house. He will be glad of it in the morning."

So, protesting loudly that some people made a lot of fuss about nothing, Peridot vanished with a shattered halo. But the mischief had been done. Next day all Pont Aven would be discussing Mrs. Carmac's strange [illegible]. In the view of the one man who knew the whole truth, it was the beginning of the end.

CHAPTER VI.
A Lull.

Peridot lived on the Toulifot, a steep and rocky road that once upon a time was Pont Aven's main avenue to the interior of France. On the way he was consumed with maudlin sorrow that his beloved patron, Monsieur Ingersoll, should have forbidden him to take further part in the feast.

"Tell me, then, what was my fault," he protested to Tollemache. "Name of a pipe! can't a fellow take a thimbleful of cognac to keep the cold out?"

"Thimbleful!" laughed Tollemache. "The sort of thimble you used would make a hat for any ordinary head."

"The skipper of the Stella is a bon garcon, and showed his gratitude," said Peridot. "I could have carried the liquor like a drum major if I hadn't fasted at Ile Pouldo so as to keep a good appetite for supper."

"Ah! That's it, is it? Well, I'll make matters straight with Monsieur Ingersoll in the morning."

Tollemache had every reason to believe that the fisherman was speaking the truth. He had not seen Peridot intoxicated during five years of fairly close acquaintance.

"The worst thing is that Madeleine will be holding her nose in the air every time she meets me for a month," came the dejected whine.

"I'll tell her too how the accident happened. You'll be joking about it yourself to-morrow, old fellow."

"Tiens! I've got it," and Peridot stood stock still in an attitude of oracular gravity. "Monsieur Ingersoll was angry, not because I was a trifle elevated, but on account of what I said about Mamselle Yvonne. Queer thing if that lady should really be her mother!"

"Now I know for certain that you're drunk as an owl."

"Not me! Gars! Funny things occurs. I could say lots if I chose. Why does Monsieur Ingersoll encourage Mamselle to dress as Bretonne? Why won't he allow her to be photographed? Who has ever heard what became of Madame Ingersoll? And aren't those two the image of each other?"

"Peridot," said Tollemache, "it would be a sad finish to a glorious day if I were to knock you down."

"It would, Monsieur."

"But that is just what I'll do, as sure as Fate, if you utter another word concerning Mademoiselle Yvonne or her father."

"Mad!" declared the other. "All you Americans are mad! A man never knows how to take you."

"Would you stand by and hear anyone running down Madeleine Demoret of her people?"

"Monsieur, I'd chew his ear."

"Exactly. I'll spread your nose flat if you utter any more stupidities with regard to Mademoiselle Yvonne."

The Breton whistled softly, and staggered on up the hill. Each few yards thereafter he halted, and whistled, evidently expressing unbounded and inarticulate surprise. All this was intensely annoying to the young American; but it had to be endured. Even more trying was the leave-taking at the door of the Larraidou cottage. The Breton caught Tollemache's hand, and was moved to tears.

"Monsieur," he gurgled, "you have my regrets!—a thousand regrets! I understand perfectly. A Frenchman comprehends these things quicker than any other man in the world, even when he has filled the lamp. Gars! If I chew ears and you flatten noses, between us we'll spoil the beauty of any rascal who dares open his mouth against either Mademoiselle Yvonne or Madeleine."

With difficulty Tollemache got rid of him, and strode back down the hill. He had blundered into that foolish comparison of the two girls without giving a thought to its possible significance. The one consolation was that Peridot would be tongue-tied with shame next day, and would probably remember only that he had made a fool of himself.

Passing the Hotel Julie, he ran into Yvonne hurrying down the steps of the annex. Then, of course, he flung care to the winds.

"Well met!" he cried. "Socrates told me you were not coming home till much later."

"But where have you been?" she asked. "I imagined you were at Madame Pitou's ages ago."

"As though you couldn't tell by my swollen appearance that I had supped on white wheat and fatted fowl," he rejoined. "Of course I was there. I've been escorting Peridot home. He took an extra appetizer on an empty stomach, and it upset him. How are the patients?"

(To be continued.)

National Preparedness does not come from guns and dreadnoughts alone, but from men who are fit for the day's work. The making of men is a question of food and rational exercise. You can't build stalwart men out of an unbalanced "ration." Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains all the material needed for building the perfect human body. It is the whole wheat grain made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. One or more Shredded Wheat Biscuits for breakfast with milk or cream makes a man fit for work or play. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve.

HYMN ALTERATIONS.

Which Are Preferable to Those Originally Written.

Comparison between the original text of popular hymns and that printed in hymn-books to-day shows that in a number of cases the words have been slightly altered, either purposely, through misprint, or because people have got into the habit of singing certain words which they prefer to the original.

In some cases the altered version is certainly preferable. In "Rock of Ages," for instance, the line, "When mine eyelids close in death," was originally, "When my eyestrings break in death," while some time ago an effort was made to restore for "Hark! the herald angels sing," the original line, "Hark, how all the welkin rings," which proved so unpopular that the altered version was again printed in "Hymns Ancient and Modern." "Time like an ever-rolling stream," is an altered version of Watts' original words, "Time like an over-rolling stream," while in some books it has been altered to, "Death like an overflowing stream."

Again, "O God, our help in ages past," has been substituted for "Our God, our help in ages past."

Bishop Welldon points out the curious fact that Dr. Watts, in publishing his hymns, enclosed certain stanzas in brackets, or, as he called them, crochets, by way of indicating the best way of shortening hymns, if need be, for public worship. In that popular hymn, "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun," he bracketed four of its eight stanzas. One of the stanzas which he bracketed, the eighth, is almost always sung as the natural climax of the hymn, viz.:

Let every creature rise and bring
Peculiar honors to our King,
Angels descend with songs again,
And earth repeat the loud Amen.

Bishop Welldon points out that he believes Dr. Watts wrote not the "loud" but the "long Amen." Dr. Watts also wrote, "When I survey the wondrous Cross," with five stanzas, but of these the fourth is generally omitted.

Army Moustaches.

The order has gone forth that officers in the British Army are for the future to wear moustaches if possible.

This new edict was announced the other day to a party of aspirants to commissions, and some of them are in a quandary owing to their inability to grow the hirsutical effect at all.

On the other hand, the Charlie Chaplin moustache—the tuft of hair about half the usual breadth—is deemed in the Army, for the officers commanding declare they will not tolerate them at any price. They would rather no moustache at all.

The "kuts tufts," as the Charlie Chaplin order is known in the Army, has become the vogue lately, and, although it has been tolerated, it has never been admired, and now the halt has been ordered.

Whilst the involuntarily beardless one may have reason for anxiety, the "kaut" will have reason for a few moments' close thought as to whether he will become clean-shaven and commence afresh, or whether he will suffer the incongruity and indignity of appearance until the new portion of the moustache has grown.

On His Part.

"Tom out of work again? Why, I thought he had a steady job?"

"Oh the job was steady; Tom wasn't."

All men have their frailties, and he who looks for a friend without imperfections will never find what he seeks.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A GREENLAND LEGEND

By MARK ANDERSON.

That there have been great climatic changes in different parts of the earth is well known. But, though geologists can tell us that they have occurred, they do not tell us why. Some of them have possibly come to pass since man attained sufficient intelligence to hand down from generation to generation traditions concerning their origin. These traditions, arising when the human fancy was untrammeled by fact and when rude people spoke by natural symbols, are often very poetic. Here is one current among the Eskimos of Greenland accounting for a change they believe long ago took place depriving them of perpetual sunshine and substituting the dreary arctic night:

"Time was when the sun, which now hides himself beyond the southern ocean for many months in winter, circled always above the northern horizon. As it is now night for many months, it was then always day, for at midnight the sun still stood above the horizon. Then our mantle, instead of the white one it now is, was a perpetual green. Our people lived on luscious fruits that grew without culture and bathed in the tepid waves that danced lightly on the strand. In those days they knew only happiness.

"But one day when some were making merry under the green trees and others were sporting in the waves a canoe white as the snow amid which we now live was discovered far out at sea, now gently raised on the crest of a billow, now sinking out of sight, but slowly drifting toward the land.

"Awestruck, the people waited on the verge till the white canoe reached the sands, and there within it, infolded in a robe of ermine, lay a maiden whose skin was fair and whose hair fell over her shoulders like rivulets of sunshine. The chief stood where the canoe touched the beach and, stooping, took the maiden in his arms, carried her up to a grassy slope and asked:

"'What art thou, and whence cometh thou?'

"'I am Delfa, the daughter of the Spirit of the Winds, and I come from his ice castle in the far north.'

"'And will you stay with us,' asked the chief, 'or will you, having gladdened our hearts by your coming, leave us to remember you as in a dream?'

"'I will not leave you. My home shall be with you forever.'

"Then was heard a far distant moaning in the north, rising as it approached till it became an awful roar. It was the voice of the Spirit of the Winds, and it commanded our people to return at once his daughter to her white home in the north. Terror stricken, the people flocked to their chief and besought him to give the maiden to her father. But the chief stood mute, pointing to his house, which was now a ruin. Entering there, they saw on a couch the maiden, her hands, white as marble, folded over her breast.

"Then an awe greater than that which had fallen on the people when the maiden first touched their land came to them, for they knew a great calamity was about to visit them. The King of the Winds looked down on the form of his daughter, now cold in death, and great was his wrath. The multitude knelt before him, supplicating him to spare them. But he heeded not their prayers. At his command his servant, the darkness, came and threw a black mantle over the land.

"And so, bereft of the light and warmth of the sun, the verdure whitened and died. The north wind blew snow from the clouds and the cold congealed the waters. The sun, whose track had been a golden circle in the north, went to the south and hid behind the ocean for many months. Then our ancestors, who had lived under the trees, fearing no frost, were obliged to build huts to protect them from the cold. The warm waves in which they had bathed became icy cold, then hardened. The people, bereft of the fruits of the earth exposed to the cold, died in great numbers. It was many months before the snow king relented sufficiently to permit the sun to show his face again and his warm breath to revive the frozen land even for a brief season.

"Since that period, every winter, the sun goes south and leaves us in darkness. The fruits which grew so plentifully for us have never flourished again. But the spirit that deprived us of them sent the white bear and the walrus, and we are obliged to hunt them in order to sustain ourselves with their meat and warm our bodies by burning their oil. The sun continues every winter to hide his face beneath the ocean and when he comes back in summer shines for so short a period that there is no time for the fruits of the earth to ripen."

Is this tradition based on some change in the plane in which the earth revolves, a new direction in the current of that mighty river we call the gulf stream, a shrinkage in the terrestrial crust, or is it an ebullition of that poetic constitution common among men when they first enter upon a civilized condition? Whether it is to be explained by the first or the second hypothesis, it is certainly a very beautiful conception. And it is to these conceptions of primitive people, groping in the unexplained universe, grasping for the truth, that the poet who interprets the world of romance is indebted. Without them he would have no song to sing.

AGE OF THE EARTH.

Different Systems of Computing It and Their Varying Figures.

As long ago as 1800 John Phillips, the geologist, estimated that the time required for the deposition of the stratified rocks lay between 38,000,000 and 96,000,000 years. This was probably the only estimate prior to Kelvin's epoch making paper of 1862. Since that time many estimates have been made, varying all the way from 17,000,000 years to 400,000,000 years.

Kelvin was the first to discuss the age of the earth considered as a cooling body. In 1893 Clarence King introduced the important criterion of tidal stability and reached the conclusion that 24,000,000 represented the conditions. This result was adopted by Kelvin in 1897, and then he placed the limits as 20,000,000 and 40,000,000 years.

Only Sir George Darwin has discussed the age of the earth from a purely astronomical point of view. From his theory of the earth moon system he derived an estimate of more than 56,000,000 years, which for a long time stood between groups of higher and lower figures. J. Joley was the first to base estimates of the age of the earth in 1899 on the sodium contained in the ocean. Adopting the hypothesis that the sodium content of the ocean is derived at a constant rate from that of the rocks, he arrived at an age of 80,000,000 or 90,000,000 years and increased this by 10,000,000 in 1900. In 1909 Mr. Sollas made a searching inquiry into this subject and placed the age of the ocean at between 80,000,000 and 150,000,000 years.

The Sense of Taste.

Scientists say that the flavor of food and drink does not come to us through the sense of taste. The latter can only furnish sensations corresponding to the chemical composition of substances taken into the mouth. Although almost infinite in their variations, these sensations are few in number, comprising sweetness, bitterness, saltiness and sourness, with their numerous degrees of intensity.

The distinctive flavors of food do not come from chemical action and are therefore not perceived by the sense of taste, but by the olfactory nerve by which the sensation is transmitted to the brain.

This explains why one's food does not taste "right" when he is suffering from a cold.

BRITISH FIGHT LIONS

Plenty of Exciting Incidents in East African Campaigning

In the East African campaign the British are fighting lions as well as Germans. According to a story the lions got into a kraal containing a number of food animals belonging to a garrison and killed 40 sheep and goats. Next morning a gun was set, and at seven o'clock lions again appeared. The gun was heard to go off, and on investigation a full grown cub was found dead, but there was no sign of any more animals. Again the gun was charged, although it was not thought likely that the lions would venture to return the same night. They did come back, however, and this time successfully avoided the gun and got the remainder of the prey that they had previously left.

Although the intruders were distinctly heard by the sentries the night was so dark and rainy that nothing could be done and once more they got away. On the following night a trap having been cut and covered over, a number of officers watched in the trenches. Three-quarters of an hour later, a shot, which sounded like a good hit, rang out, but as nothing happened, the party remained on watch until after midnight. Next morning a fine big lioness was found not 30 yards away. It seems that one of the officers in the trenches had thought he saw a lion, and fired, whereupon, the animal sprang forward and landed on the top of the trench itself. Luckily this was strong, and as nothing more was heard it was believed in the darkness that the animal had made off.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HOUSE OF HAPSBURG PURSUED BY CURSE

One Tragedy After Another in the Unhappy Royal Family of Austria

The reign of Francis Joseph has been a long and troubled one, but the troubles of his family life have been far greater than those of his dominion. Many of his nearest and dearest relatives have met violent deaths. His brother, Maximillian, Emperor of Mexico, was deposed and afterwards shot by Juarez. The Crown Prince Rudolph met a tragic death, the mystery surrounding this has never been cleared up, but the generally accepted version is that he was a suicide. Another cruel blow was the assassination of the Empress Elisabeth—one of the kindest and best of women—just as the preparations for the celebration of the Emperor's 50th anniversary were about completed. The disappearance of Archduke John, the mesalliances of Archduke Henry, and of Stephanie, widow of Rudolph, are among the many minor troubles that have fallen to his lot. The Curse of the Hapsburgs is laid heavily on Francis Joseph. There are several versions of the origin of this curse, one is that Countess Karolai, frantic over the execution of her son for participation in the Hungarian revolt of 1848, publicly cursed the Emperor and predicted a violent death for all his family. Another version is the story of the ravens, which dates back to the 11th century. A flock of ravens is said to have rendered a service to a Hapsburg, and as reward were allowed undisturbed occupation of the turrets of the Castle at Aar. Two hundred years later Rudolph, the first Emperor, caused the birds to be driven out, and the legend is that from then on their hatred turned on the descendants of Rudolph. The presence of a raven anywhere near a Hapsburg is supposed to indicate some calamity about to happen. This raven legend is firmly believed in Austria, and many folks declared they saw the birds with Maximillian before his departure to Mexico. The ravens are also accused of being with the Empress shortly before her assassination; superstition dies hard.

The real curse of this house is a tendency to insanity, several members have been undoubtedly insane, and the "eccentric" Hapsburgs can be counted by the score. The last hard blow to fall on the poor old Emperor was the assassination of his heir, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, which was the excuse, rather than the reason, for the outbreak of this great war.

While Francis Joseph has not been a great ruler he has, at least, been skilful in holding his Empire together, and in gathering in such scraps of power, glory and territory as opportunity offered him. When he passes there is not a successor strong enough, or with experience enough, to keep the tottering monarchy together. The last days of Francis Joseph will be spent with the full knowledge that he is likely to be the last of his dynasty; truly the last and greatest sorrow and humiliation. The disintegration of this old empire is coming. Whether the Hapsburgs be cursed or not their day in Europe is over; the handwriting is on the wall.—From Beck's Weekly, Montreal.

Lasts From Canadian Maple

Lasts or wooden shapes are necessary in the making of boots, in fact every pair of boots must be molded on a wooden form or last. Canadians may not know that practically all the lasts for the army boots of both the British and the French soldiers are partly made in Canada from Canadian maple. We here in Canada were not given the job of putting the final touches to the last, but we have been allowed to go further than just growing the hard wood that is so necessary for making the best army boots in the world.

But Canada does not stop when she has shipped the roughly turned wooden last, for every month she sends thousands of pelts of leather to be later fastened onto the lasts. The British army boot has been declared again and again, to be the most perfect and most comfortable boot ever made, and it is due primarily to the great care taken in making the lasts that such perfection is reached in the finished shoe.

Fear British Bayonets

So great a respect have the German infantry for "Tommy" and his bayonet that they make for themselves thick paddings of straw and newspapers and such things with a view to lessening the distance by which the bayonet can pierce them. The Belgians, who at the outset of the fighting had very short bayonets, were the first against whom the Germans tried their new "cheat protectors."

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. Frank Knobl, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. Yoer, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. Clementina Duerring, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

Does 60% of the Strength In Your Food Go To Waste? For Thin Men and Women Who want to Gain Weight

Why Fleshmaking Food does not always Produce Flesh on Thin People. Full Directions Given.

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate yesterday. What became of all the fat producing nourishment it contained? Possibly you haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food probably passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The materials for flesh, fat and strength were there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth may be, you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of many thin folks the world over. Their nutritive organs, their functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

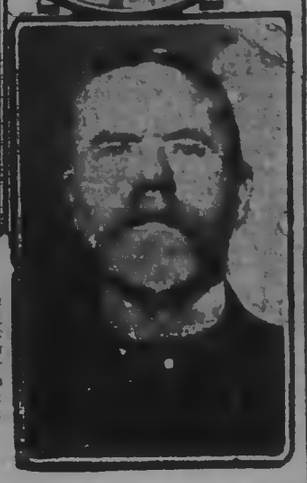
To those who are in this class and who would like to add from ten to twenty-five pounds of good, firm healthy flesh, fat and muscular tissue to their weight, the following test is suggested:

First, weigh yourself. Then continue regular meals as before but eat with every one of them a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks weigh again and note the difference and see what increase in weight may be the net result.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe, fat-producing nourishment, for the tissues and blood-prepare it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. Much of this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol works to stop the waste and do it quickly and to make the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop flesh between your skin and bones.

The best of any theory is practice. What do the people who have used Sargol say about it? Reports have been received from every part of the country. A lady from California wrote: "I never in my life before weighed more than 137 lbs. Now I weigh 155 and feel fine. My face is filled out and rosy and I feel better than I have for years." A patron from Wisconsin reported, "I can speak wonders for Sargol, having gained 20 pounds from its use." A man from New York said: "I have gained 21 pounds and look and feel like a new person."

NOTE—Sargol is not as some believe, a single patented drug, but is instead a skilful combination of six well recognized flesh building agents and assimilative aids. Leading local druggists who sell it, say that there is a large demand for it here among people who wish to gain weight and that it is always sold in accordance with a guarantee contained in each large package of money back in any case if satisfactory weight increase is not attained.



MONSTER PETITION FOR DRY ONTARIO—This pile of bound volumes represents the prohibition petition collected from all Ontario counties which were presented to Premier Hearst by a delegation followed by twenty thousand sympathizers in parade. The pile contains signatures of 825,582 residents of the Province These signatures would make a solid line of signatures three miles 1,600 yards in length. The petitions when closely piled together make a pile five feet in height, four and a half feet in length, and four feet in breadth The upper photo to the right is that of Mr. G. E. Johnston, of Brockville, secretary of the Leeds' County Committee and an energetic temperance worker. The lower picture is of E. P. Clement, K.C., of Berlin, Ont chairman of the Committee of One Hundred, who presented the address to Premier Heart at the Legislature Buildings.

Armenia's Last Name.

There is no such country as Armenia. Officially the Turks decline to recognize the name, and maps marking "Armenistan" have regularly been confiscated. Unofficially again nobody can say exactly where "Armenia," or Kardistan, as it is alternatively called, begins and leaves off. Nor is there properly such a people as the "Armenians." That is only a name given them by foreigners. They call themselves Haik and their country Haiasdan, tracing their descent from Haik, grandson of Japhet, whose dynasty was overthrown by Alexander of Macedon.—London Spectator.

The Big Dipper.

In astronomy the Big Dipper, so called, is in the constellation of Ursa Major, or the Great Bear. The stars forming the tail of the bear also form the handle of the dipper. The first star in the handle is Benetnasch, the second Mizar, the third Alioth. The other four, which go to form the bowl of the dipper, are Megrez, Phad, Merak and Dudhe. The two last named are called "the pointers" because they point or guide the eye to the pole star, which is distant 29 degrees. The top bowl stars are 10 degrees and the bottom ones 5 degrees apart.

The Serpent's Venom.

A physician while talking with a group of friends remarked: "It is common to hear people speak about poisonous serpents. Serpents are never poisonous; they are venomous. A poison cannot be taken internally without bad effects; a venom can. Venome to be effective have to be injected directly into the circulation, and this is the manner in which the snake kills. Their venom taken internally is innocuous."

An Appreciation.

An old sea captain was turning over the leaves of a friend's album when, coming to the photograph of a young lady of whose acquaintance the family was rather proud, he was asked what he thought of her. "Aweel," was the old sea rover's reply, "if I were goin' to make a rare stroke o' business I'd buy that girl for what she was worth an' sell her for what she thinks she is worth!"—London Mirror.

Learning It.

The Old Married One—You will learn, my dear, that men are most contrary creatures. The Young Married One—Oh, I know that already. The Old Married One—Indeed? The Young Married One—Yes, I cook things my husband likes and yet he doesn't like the things I cook!

Logical.

"What seems to be the matter, sir?" asked the clerk in the hotel. "Were you expecting some one?"

"I should say I was," said the man angrily. "My wife was to meet me here at 2 o'clock. I just got here, and now it's 4 o'clock, and she isn't here yet. Never knew a woman to be on time anyway."

A Dickens Character.

Smike, Charles Dickens' character in Nicholas Nickleby, seems to have been drawn from the life. Said the author in a letter apropos of that novel: "The rascality of those Yorkshire schoolmasters cannot be easily exaggerated. I have kept down strong truth and thrown as much comicality over it as I could rather than disgust the weary reader with its fouler aspects."

How Cripple Creek Got Its Name.

It was the cattlemen who gave Cripple Creek its name. There are a dozen traditions, but the best authenticated is the story of a cowboy whose bronc ehe balked at the jumping of a rivulet, balked and stumbled and fell, breaking a leg for itself and one for its rider. There was no surgeon nearer than Colorado Springs, and the rough anatomical carpentry of his mates made a cripple for life of the unlucky range rider, wherefore he named the rivulet Cripple creek, and the rivulet named the region.—Exchange.

A Bloodsucking Earthworm.

South Africa is the home of a species of earthworm, a creature closely related to our common angleworm, which is not only a giant among the denizens of the soil, but which is reputed to have a taste for human blood. There are two species of this uncanny wiggler—one of a dark red color and the other almost black. They are larger than one's finger and from three to four inches in length.

A Clever Woman.

"I never deceive my wife."

"You deserve credit for that."

"No. The credit belongs to her."

"How so?"

"I am utterly unable to spin a yarn she can't see through."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

The First Coins.

While the first actual coining of money is attributed to Pheidon, king of Argos, in 895 B. C., it must not be supposed that there had not existed a keen appreciation of the value and uses of money for centuries previous to the introduction of coinage. The ancient Egyptians had a gold and silver standard of currency, and their money was in the form of gold and silver ornaments, rings and nuggets, the purchasing value of which depended on their weight. The Greeks improved somewhat on this system by first marking the weight on gold and silver nuggets so that it would no longer be necessary to reweigh them every time they were to be used for purposes of exchange or trade. Then came the introduction of gold, silver and copper nuggets of graded uniform sizes and value. The next step was the molding and stamping of disks made from the precious metals. Some of these first coins were enormous, the idea apparently being to discourage the greedy from attempting to accumulate and carry around too many of them. There were copper coins as large as dinner plates. While the idea was based on excellent motives, it had to give way before the demand for smaller and more convenient forms of currency, and the giant pennies soon dwindled in size to meet the popular demand.

Ants at Work.

A botanist in the far east reports that in Burma and its vicinity the natives set the ants to work. Sandalwood, as everybody knows, is worth its weight in silver, but it is only the hard heart of the wood that is fragrant and valuable. This precious portion is overlaid by a soft and worthless layer, which forms two-thirds of the trunk of the tree. When a tree is felled and cut into suitable lengths the loggers just let it lie. Then the ants, attracted by the sweetness of the wood, attack the chunks. Within a few weeks the little insects have finished their work, and the valuable heart of the wood is freed of its worthless sappy covering and becomes a valuable article of commerce.—Boys' World.

Answered Frankly.

Shortly after Sir Edward Carson had relinquished the post of Solicitor-General he was speaking of the methods of examining candidates for the service, and told the following amusing story:

"I had a boy who went through that ordeal, and when it was over I asked him what had been said to him.

"'A lot of rot!' he replied. 'They asked me if my father was the Solicitor-General, and when I said that he was they wanted to know why I wasn't following in his footsteps. I replied that perhaps after I had failed at this job I would take it up!'"

Have Nothing on Tommy Atkins

A young artist who has just returned from a six months' job of driving a British ambulance on the war front in Belgium brings this straight from the trenches:

"One cold morning a sign was pushed up above the German trench facing ours, only about fifty yards away, which bore in large letters the words:

"'GOTT MIT UNS!'

"One of our cockney lads, more of a patriot than a linguist, looked at this for a moment and then lampblacked a big sign of his own, which he raised on a stick. It read:

"'WE GOT MITTENS TOO!'"

Compulsory Training.

Compulsory training is now in force in the Straits Settlements. Several people have recently been arrested for refusing to comply with the regulations. One person was ordered to pay the costs of the summons, he having refused to be sworn in on a Saturday, and pleading that he was a Seventh Day Adventist. Another, who claimed that he had conscientious objections, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment without the option of a fine. The Public Prosecutor said that he would see that this person did not remain in the Colony after he had served his sentence.

Buried Three Days by a Mine.

Among the incidents recorded in an official statement concerning the Dardanelles campaign is the surprising adventure of five British miners. The statement says:

"The enemy succeeded in exploding a mine under our trenches. The garrison, however, had already been withdrawn, but five of our miners, working underground, were buried and given up as lost.

"Three days later, having dug themselves out, they reappeared, little the worse for their ordeal."

Rainless Lima.

People don't talk about the weather very much in Lima, because it never rains there.

Habits of the Wildcat.

To say that a dog can "whip his weight in wildcats" is to pay about the highest tribute to his strength, courage and activity, and there are very few dogs that would care to earn such a tribute if they understood all it implied. Not that a wildcat is of a specially aggressive disposition. On the contrary, he would sooner mind his own business any time than fight. So anxious is he as a rule to keep out of trouble that he has often been accused of cowardice, but he has on so many occasions given evidence of the most desperate courage that it is doubtful if the accusation is a fair one. When wounded or at bay he is perhaps as dangerous as any creature of his size.

TRAINING X-RAY NURSES.

Big Demand for Specially Trained Women in Britain.

The use of the X-rays is now a recognised aid to both physician and surgeon. Bullets and other foreign bodies are located by these rays; fractures, abnormal conditions of the heart and lungs, and almost all diseases of the internal organs are diagnosed by this same wonderful means. Day by day X-ray work increases in value and importance. No hospital can do without it. At present there is a demand in England for women to take the places of male assistants as operators.

Training for the work of an X-ray nurse must be thorough and should be obtained in a well-equipped and organized X-ray department in a hospital or infirmary where there is a radiographic medical officer in charge. The Great Northern Central Hospital and the West London at Hammersmith give such training, and if the applicant has to wait for a vacancy as student it is a good plan to study osteology (that section of anatomy which treats of the bones) and the theory of radiography.

A knowledge of photography is of the utmost value to a would-be X-ray nurse, for the premium charged for X-ray instruction, which lasts from three months to a year or even longer, varies according to the use to which a student can be put in the department. A knowledge of photography enables a student to begin work at once—developing radiograms, making up solutions, preparing plates and films for exposure, cleaning dishes, and generally keeping the dark-room in order, and in consequence her premium will be less than that of a woman who knows nothing at all and has everything to learn. The photographic knowledge of an X-ray nurse should also include enlarging and reducing and the making of lantern-slides for lectures on the X-rays.

The working hours are usually 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The salaries for trained X-ray nurses vary from £1 to £2 per week where the sister or nurse lives out, uniform being provided by the hospital, together with dinner or tea, while the salary for an X-ray nurse living in should not be less than £40 per annum with all found. In some cases students have to provide their own uniform and pay for their own washing and meals. Many radiographers in private practice now employ an X-ray nurse, and the salary, on an average, is about 30s a week.

Easily Fooled.

In Leslie Ward's "Forty Years of 'Spy'" is this story of the absent-mindedness of Lord Crewe, a failing which, "since he was not aware of it," caused him to be considerably taken advantage of. He used to dine at the Athenaeum and usually at the same table. Another member came rushing in one day to obtain a place for dinner for himself. All being engaged, the waiter was obliged to refuse the extra guest, when the flurried member pointed to an empty seat.

"Oh, sir," said the waiter, with apologetic deference, "that's Lord Crewe's."

"Never mind," said the urgent would-be diner. "Tell him when he comes that he's dined!"

It is to be supposed the waiter found his deception worth while, for when Lord Crewe arrived he was met with surprise and quiet expostulation.

"You dined an hour ago, my lord," said the unscrupulous waiter.

"So I did!" murmured the poor victim as he retraced his steps.

What a Four Million Army Means.

Some startling figures were quoted by Mr. Herbert N. Casson in an address in London recently. He said Britain's little army of 275,000 became 4,000,000 in such quick time that we could not count the men as they came in. Four million soldiers meant one soldier for every acre in Yorkshire, one for every two houses in Great Britain, and thirty-three for every square mile of this island. We had now an army which, marching four abreast, would be 760 miles long. Let every man carry 500 sovereigns, and there we had the army and the cost—an army which would reach from Land's End to John o' Groats. We could stand our army round the coast line, elbows touching, and with every man bearing his own weight of silver we had the cost.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash poison from system each morning and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Betrayed by His Disguise.

In one of the principal western cities the proprietor of a large jewelry store reported to the chief of police an extensive diamond robbery. He was asked by the chief if he suspected any one.

"Yes, sir," hesitatingly answered the merchant. "Although we have no proof. But a man whom I have known for twenty-five years was in the store a day or two before the robbery, looking round and appearing to be ill at ease. He has since disappeared."

"What kind of looking man was he?"

"Dark complexioned, tall, with long curly hair and a heavy mustache."

"Well," said the chief after a moment's thought, "I hope to be able to give you some news of him soon."

Then he sent this telegram to the police authorities of several other cities:

"Arrest tall man with close cropped head and white upper lip. Diamond thief."

The next day he received this dispatch from a town in Missouri:

"Got diamond thief. Have recovered goods. Am holding him subject to your order."—Youth's Companion.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S COMBINATION.

By Anabel Worthington.

Combinations are daily growing in the favor of women. Owing to the looseness of the modern blouse the corset cover portion of any combination is now made considerably fuller than heretofore. This idea is carried out in the garment selected for our illustration. This corset cover is in surplice style in both front and back. This makes the garment low enough in the centre for use with an evening dress.

The drawers have a circular cut and this fits neatly about the body, while spreading somewhat at the lower edge. In the centre of the hem in the back a tab is attached and this buttons to the centre of the hem in front, forming the envelope which is so much liked and worn.

Those garments are made of many and various materials. They are shown in cambric, batiste, crepe de Chine, wash silk and even in taffetas and the new wash satin.

Color sets as much in evidence as white, and even the lace which trims them is either bought or dyed to match the fabric.

The combination pattern, No. 7,622, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material, or 2¼ yards of 45 inch, with 8⅝ yards of edging, 1½ yards of beading and 2⅜ yards of ribbon.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

7622

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

PERMANENT CURE OF PILES CERTIFIED BY MINISTER

Sixteen Years Ago This Man Was Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment—Had Suffered Keenly For Twelve Years

You might almost say that there is only one actual cure for Piles, and that is Dr. Chase's Ointment. Every day this conclusion is corroborated by reports from persons who had tried one thing and another without success. Some have even been operated on, only to have the old trouble return, and finally to obtain cure by use of this ointment.

Why not avoid waste of time, waste of money and needless risk with operations by using Dr. Chase's Ointment at once?

Some will say "that is all very well for itching Piles, but my trouble is from bleeding Piles." Well, here is a letter from a man who had bleeding Piles for twelve years, and suffered most keenly. For sixteen years he has had no return of the old trouble and naturally considers the cure permanent.

Mr. O. B. Peters, Salmon Arm, B. C., writes: "I was troubled with bleeding Piles for about twelve years, and suffered everything but death. I was so bad I could scarcely walk about, and though I tried many things, could get no relief. At that time I lived at Sharbot Lake, Ont., and a friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, saying he would guarantee cure. Less than two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me. That is sixteen years ago, and I am O.K. yet, so think you can consider the cure permanent. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough, as it saved me from a great deal of pain and suffering."

Rev. W. J. Beamish, Salmon Arm, B.C., writes: "I have been acquainted with Mr. O. B. Peters, and have always found him to be a man of his word. I can therefore most thoroughly endorse what Mr. Peters has written concerning the merits and value of Dr. Chase's Ointment."

A test of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon convince you of its merits. Relief comes almost immediately, and cure follows persistent treatment. For sale by all dealers. Sample box [illegible] mention this paper and [illegible] to Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Situation At Verdun Is Still Unchanged

Mines Cause Loss Of Two British Boats

SITUATION AROUND VERDUN REMAINS UNCHANGED TO-DAY

Violent Artillery Actions on Both Banks of the Meuse But No Important Infantry Actions Says French Report ---Official Statement Claims That Germans Who Entered the Village of Vaux Were Driven Out.

TWO BRITISH BOATS SUNK BY MINES

PARIS, March 10.—The situation on both banks of the Meuse as the result of last night's fighting around Verdun is unchanged, the War Office stated this afternoon. Despatches from the Verdun front to-day repeated the statement that the Germans who entered the village of Vaux were driven out and denied that the German claim that Fort De Vaux and adjoining positions were captured.

Violent artillery actions continued on both banks of the Meuse throughout the night, but there were no important infantry engagements.

In the Woevre region, intermittent artillery firing continued last night, said the official statement. In Alsace, east of Thann, our batteries on Hill 425 wrecked the enemy trenches. In the Argonne we cannonaded enemy convoys on the Montfaucon-Avacourt road.

WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF THEIR BELEAGUERED COMRADES

Examiner Special:

LONDON, March 10.—Gen. Aylmer's forces, who are fighting their way to the relief of the 10,000 British troops in Kut-El-Amara, are now within seven miles of their beleaguered comrades. Gen. Aylmer was last reported twenty-six miles away and unable to make further progress. Since then he has been reinforced.

A statement given out by the War Office last night says:

"Gen. Aylmer advanced on March 6. Moving by the right bank of the Tigris, he reached the Essin position, about seven miles east of Kut-El-Amara.

"The position was attacked on March 8, but Gen. Aylmer was unable to dislodge the enemy.

"The enemy suffered severely, and beyond strengthening his position, has shown no activity. Our casualties were not heavy. In the majority of cases the wounds were slight."

Torpedo boat No. 11 was built in 1906, displaced 263 tons, and was 172 feet long. She carried a crew of about 35 men.

PETROGRAD, March 10.—The drive on Ispahan represents the southern most section of the Russian advance in Asia. Russians were last reported as taking Kashan, 92 miles north of Ispahan.

STOCKHOLM, March 10.—The Swedish Government has decided to remove the German mine field off Fainterbo which caused the loss of the steamer Martha.

PARIS, March 10.—Two German war planes including a Fokker, were destroyed and thirteen others dropped behind German lines as if damaged in a series of air battles around Verdun and in the Champagne.

BERLIN, March 10.—French troops have gained a foothold in Fort De Vaux which was captured by the Germans on Tuesday. It was officially admitted this afternoon.

You Should See The Sporting Duchess

At the Empire Theatre To-night and To-morrow—An Excellent Play

A good crowd witnessed "The Sporting Duchess" at the Empire Theatre last evening despite the bad weather, and thoroughly enjoyed it. This photo-play is from the famous play of the same name and is one of the sensational hits of the season. The great horse race scene is one that adds materially to the picture.

The Empire gives two shows, and anyone who attends up to 8.30 o'clock can see the full programme. Enjoy a pleasant evening at the Empire to-night.

A special comedy is also on the programme.

TO OPEN BUREAU FOR REGISTRATION OF WOMEN WORKERS

Willing to Act in Any Capacity for Which They Are Competent, in Order to Release Male Labourers for Active Service

THOSE REGISTERED

At a meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Patriotic League held yesterday afternoon in the City Chamber, it was resolved to at once open a registration bureau for girls and women who are willing to act in any capacity for which they are competent, in order to release male labour for the purpose of .isting to serve the Empire.

The Women's Auxiliary wish it to be clearly understood that there is no attempt to displace male labour, neither will there be any voluntary work on the part of those who register. The workers may dispose of the wages received as seems best to them if they do not desire to retain them personally, but all labour must be recompensed. The Woman's Auxiliary also desire to emphasize the fact that they do not wish girls or women who are already usefully employed to register with them, as all willing to serve will have to sign a card bearing a simple promise to relinquish any position secured through the Bureau at the conclusion of the war, or at any time if desired for a returned soldier or at the discretion of the executive of the Women's Auxiliary.

To Be Divided Into Departments.

The Bureau will be divided into departments and the applicants can register in the one for which they are best suited and where they can serve most usefully. Women can serve usefully as street car conductors, clerks, sales ladies in dry goods and other stores, bank clerks, bookkeepers, postmen, munition workers, woollen mills, and various other capacities.

The registration office will be the teachers' room in the Public Library and will be open from 3 to 6 o'clock on the afternoons of Monday, Wednesday and Saturdays and on the evenings of those days from 7 to 9 p.m. The following ladies will be in charge:

Miss Archer—Monday afternoons.
Mrs. John Allan—Monday evenings.
Mrs. (Dr.) Young—Wednesday afternoons.
Mrs. Yennie—Wednesday evenings.
Mrs. James Kendry —Saturday afternoons.
Mrs. Reginald Scadding— Saturday evenings.

Roll of Honour.

Peterborough women's roll of honour, up to the present is as follows:

Mrs. John McGee, 421 Chambers street.
Miss Evelyn Jay, 394 Aylmer street.
Miss D. I. Hall, 334 Charlotte street.
Miss A. P. Hall, 334 Charlotte street.
Mrs. C. A. Sherwood, 586 Rubidge street.
Miss Jean Harstone, 565 Water street.
Mrs. (Dr.) Young, 305 Stewart street.
Mrs H. A. Wyatt, 262 Westcott street.
Mrs. H. Wilford, 262 Westcott street.
Miss Pearce, 586 Rubidge street.
Mrs. Yennie, 190 Barnardo avenue.
Mrs. Knapman, 604 George street.
Miss Archer, 300 Rubidge street.
Mrs. Scadding, 273 Charlotte street.
Mrs. Foote, 609 George street.
Mrs. John Allan, 539 Downie street.

Two or three of the married ladies could not give their whole time on account of home duties; but are ready and willing to set aside certain hours for outside work if emergency calls. Will the girls and women of Peterborough remember their sisters in Belgium, Serbia, Poland and Armenia, and think of the delicately nurtured women in Britain and France who are labouring in order to release men for military duty. The opportunity is now given to the women of Peterborough to show their patriotism in a practical manner, in a way that may be difficult, but there must be no holding back.

Will you help to make the women's roll of honour a noteworthy one, so that in the years to come your children's children will point with pride to the fact that your name was on that roll, if you will come to the Public Library and enroll.

It Is No Use, Young Man

It is useless, young man, if you are fit to fight, to hold back. Dodging recruiting sergeants until the 93rd Battalion is organized, in the hope that it will be the last, won't help you. Other battalions will follow when the present overseas units are mobilized. There is a growing feeling in favour of compulsory service. The Speakers' Patriotic League of Peterborough has pronounced in favour of the system. The Hamilton Recruiting League has already gone on record endorsing it. The Stratford Recruiting League has requested both political parties in North and South Perth to call a joint convention and unite in demanding registration to be followed by conscription.

In Peterborough over 300 men are needed and needed in a hurry to fill the ranks of the overseas unit organizing here. They MUST be secured. Are you going to wait to be forced to go when you can walk up like a man and offer your services? Come on and be a sport. Don a uniform and go with the Peterborough Battalion—the 93rd.

AFFIDAVITS AGAINST MILITARY SERVICE ARE WORK OF RUSSELITES

"Pastor" Russell, Head of the Clan, is Billed to Speak Here on Sunday---Montreal News Explains How the Scheme is Worked---Capt. Muir Transferred to Canadian Buffs---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

In view of the visit to Peterborough on Sunday of "Pastor" Russell, the following item from the Montreal Daily News will be interesting reading to the people of this city, especially when it is known that Lt.-Col. Johnston, of the 93rd Battalion, has received one of the affidavits in question from an Apsley follower of Pastor Russell, and a letter along the same lines from a local woman.

The News says:

Investigation into the cause of the remarkable affidavits against military service with which Brig.-Gen. E. W. Wilson has been bombarded during the past ten days, has elicited the information that the whole affair has been instigated by the notorious "Pastor" Russell, of divorce-court fame, through his Brooklyn publication, the "Watch Tower," and with the assistance of one W. T. Hooper, a Russellite worker in Ontario Province. The idea of sending in affidavits to avoid military service is not confined to Montreal, but the Russell followers all over the Dominion have been advised by "Brother Russell," as they unctiously call him, to copy the affidavit form published in the Brooklyn periodical, take it to a justice of the peace and get it sworn to and witnessed, and then send it in to the nearest military headquarters, and it is understood that the advice of their leader is being taken by his followers in all parts of the country.

Brother Russell and Brother Hooper

The method of inaugurating this impudent piece of interference with the affairs of Canadian citizens was quite characteristically Russelite. Hooper, the Ontario lieutenant of the unsavory Brooklynite, writes "Brother Russell" a letter, published in the "Watch Tower," in which the complete form of the lengthy affidavit which has since become familiar at Brig.-Gen. Wilson's headquarters is given in full and the "Pastor" is asked to advise the faithful in Canada, through the columns of the "Watch Tower" as to whether it would not be best for them to send in such affidavits to the military authorities in order to avoid the possibility of becaught by a sudden move for conscription. "Brother" Russell gravely replies that, under Section 41 of the Military Act, it would be necessary for anyone wishing to avoid service on religious grounds to send in some sort of an affidavit, and that the form given by his correspondent would answer as well as any, and that accordingly, "International Bible Students are advised to copy and execute it without delay."

Advance "Dope" on the War.

Most of the Montreal adherents of the sect who have followed their leader's behest and annoyed the hard-working divisional commander with these lengthy documents setting forth their religious views are of the opinion that it does not matter how many people enlist for the war, as the conflict will be settled by the Almighty without regard to human agencies, and one of them, Sidney Nettleton, 2639b Waverly street, went so far as to say that neither the Allies nor the Germans would be allowed to win, but that the conflict was merely the prelude to events which would terminate in the second coming of Christ. Asked if he would be willing to go out in the Army Medical Corps to aid the wounded. Mr. Nettleton said that he did not think he would, since curing up the wounded only enabled them to go on fighting. Asked what he would do if Canada were invaded and an enemy were bombarding Montreal, so that his own family were in immediate danger, the Russell follower answered, "Even in that case, I would not feel I had the right to fight."

Affidavits Are Cheap.

William McPatridge, 2095 St. Hubert street, another person who sent in an affidavit, was not quite so pronounced in his radicalism, but was most obliging in explaining how simple it was to have an affidavit drawn up and how best to do this with the object of avoiding notarial fees to as great an extent as possible.

"You see," said Mr. McPatridge, all you have to do is to copy out that affidavit in the 'Watch Tower' and take it to a Justice of the Peace and give him a quarter or so to have him sign it. Then you send it in."

From the way Mr. McPatridge spoke, sending in an affidavit that one would not take any active part in the present war, is a very worthy act.

"What would I do if Montreal were attacked by an enemy?" Mr. McPatridge seemed displeased at the thought but he replied: "Well that's a hard question to answer, yes, a very hard question," and having satisfied the reporter upon this matter, he left the questioned unanswered. As to

THE REID STORE WILL RE-OPEN TO-MORROW

For the Occasion Special Exhibits of Spring Styles Have Been Arranged

The Reid Store closed by a damaging fire on February 5th, will re-open to-morrow. Although not yet complete in all the elaborate details which are contemplated. Delays have occurred in installing some of the new store features, but when all is perfective, it will be an altogether different store. New fixtures will be installed throughout. Garments hereafter will be displayed on wardrobe hangers, making it very easy to inspect them from all angles with comparatively no handling. On the ground floor there will be three new fitting rooms, a comfortably appointed retiring room, tastefully draped and carpeted, and equipped with telephone, magazines, etc. A private corset-fitting room has been constructed on the second floor

It is now one of the most modern stores in this section of Canada with numerous facilities and conveniences that are decided innovations For the opening there will be entirely new assortments in all departments. Visits to such style centres as Montreal, Toronto and New York, where extensive purchases were made, have resulted in the collection of the best and latest fashions in all such articles of attire as women, misses and juniors will require for spring wear.

No detail has been overlooked in the reconstruction or restocking of this store. Thoroughness and good taste are everywhere in evidence, and it will undoubtedly prove very much of an attraction to women who wish to dress smartly and who prefer to shop where the appointments are perfect.

THE WELSH GUARDS AND THEIR CHARGE AT LOOS

NO BLAME IS ATTACHED TO ST. CAR CREW

Death of Mrs. Michael Burke on Tuesday Morning Declared by Coroner's Jury to Be Purely Accidental

EVIDENCE IS HEARD

A Coroner's Jury found last night that the death of Mrs. Michael Burke of 841 Water Street, who stepped in front of a north-bound street car, opposite her own home, last Tuesday morning, about 7.30, was purely accidental.

The report was signed by the following jury men: J. F Thornton, (foreman); John White, Arthur Mitchell, Thomas Duggan, Thomas Meredith, Martin Leary, Joseph Picard, George Evans, J. W. Johnston, Andrew Graham, Jas. Middleton, and C H. McGee.

Coroner Dr. Greer presided with Crown Attorney Hatton conducting the examination. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the Street Railway Company.

The evidence, which was confined largely to the railway employees on the car at the time of the accident was quite conclusive.

Prior to the session of the inquest the jury were taken up to the Burke home at 841 Water Street, and there they viewed the remains, as well as the scene of the accident, the motorman being present to explain how it happened.

Patrick Burke, son of the deceased, was called for the purpose of identifying the body. His mother was between 68 and 70 years old, and neither her hearing nor sight was very good. She was in the habit of going down town on the street cars and returning, alone.

To Dr. Greer witness said she sometimes took a car when it was going north, even though she intended to go south.

Dr. F. P. McNulty acted professionally for the deceased. He found bruises on the left side of the forehead, and a fracture of the breast bone and ribs on either side, and she never seemed to regain consciousness. In his opinion the cause of death was due to concussion of the brain and shock of the accident.

George Easton, motorman of the car, said the accident occurred between Argyle and King's Crossing about forty yards south of the latter point, which was the regular stopping place.

He first noticed Mrs. Burke when she was coming out through a path in the snow bank to the road. He was then a car-length away from her. He at once put on the brake and succeeded in stopping in about two car lengths, but too late to avoid hitting the deceased. The condition of the street, with its high snow-banks, prevented him seeing her sooner, and as the car was going at full speed it was not possible for him to stop in a shorter distance.

To Mr. Kerr witness stated he had been a motorman three and a half years, and during that time there were no demerit marks against him that he knew of.

To Dr Greer witness said deceased was not more than ten feet from the car track when he saw her first. She was in the habit of taking the car at King's Crossing, and it was necessary for her to cross the track to take the car going north. When the car struck her she was two-thirds of the way over the track. She was hurrying to cross the street, but did not look up.

Fred Rosboro, conductor of the car gave evidence very similar to that of the motorman. There were no passengers on the car at the time of the accident. He said people up in that vicinity were in the habit of getting on the car when it was going north even though their intention was to go south.

To Mr. Kerr, witness stated that the deceased would have boarded the car on the side of the street her home was on if she taken the south-bound car.

To Dr. Greer witness was of the opinion that the shortest distance in Brother of Pte. Burton of 93rd Battalion Vividly Describes the Capture of Hill 70 by the New Guards Regiment Which Lost Very Heavily.

"MEN FOUGHT LIKE LIONS"

The following letter from Pte. C. Barton, of the 1st Battalion, Welsh Guards, and a brother of Pte. Burton, of the 93rd Battalion, is notable for its vivid description of the battle of Loos, and its story of the fighting of the new British army. Writing to his sister, Pte. Burton said:

"I have been hit in the right leg just below the knee The bullet went right through, but I hope soon to be better again. I think myself one of the luckiest ones, for when you come to think of the other poor fellows, it makes one shudder.

"I will try to explain how I came to get hit. We were ordered off in the night to go and dig a trench connecting up the Grenadiers who were holding another which had recently been taken from the Germans. Well we were marching off along an open road which led to a place called Halluch, between the British and French lines. There were three platoons of us. We happened to be the third with Number 4 Company coming close behind. The two platoons in front of use seemed to be quite safe, but all at once the Germans who were on our left sent a shell over, nicely scattering our platoon all over the road. I don't know how many were hit. I heard afterwards about 11, but from what I could see it was many more. After the explosion I looked around, not knowing for a moment that I had been hit. Then all at once I went down on one knee and then I began to feel it. I shouted out to a sergeant and he came and bandaged me up. Then I was taken to the nearest dressing station, and after I was attended to there I was put to bed. The next day I was taken to the base hospital and from there I was sent to England.

"I had not been in France very long but I have seen a great deal more than some of them who have been out all the time. I shall never forget as long as I live our first time into action, when we captured the village of Loos. We were gassed and shelled all the way. Houses were falling into the road as we charged through but we kept on and the Germans fled before us. After we had captured the village then came our chance. We were told to take Hill 70, and were to succeed where others had failed. Well on we went assisted by the Grenadiers with the Scots Guards coming up behind. Over the hill we went. The Germans were entrenched on top and opened fire upon us with their machine guns. Believe me it was a night like being —Hell. They mowed our men down like sheep I lay on my stomach all that night. Bullets were flying over our heads in thousands, and it rained in torrents. How we were not wiped out is a mystery to us all. The groans of the poor fellows dying and wounded, both Germans and ours, were awful. There I stayed until morning when to my surprise I could only see a few of our men. We passed to each other to crawl back, and having done this we came across the Scots Guards. They came up behind up in the night and had dug a trench so then we were safe As each of us came in they gave us a cheer for Hill 70 had been captured, and we had made our name, for being a new regiment, that's what we were out for. Having captured Hill 70 our troops were able to advance 500 yards all along a line which was a credit to the Guards.

"After the war is over the story will be known of this gallant charge, which I feel proud of having been in for our men fought like lions. But I am sorry to say we lost about 480, including nearly all our officers. No mercy did we show the Germans They got what they deserved. It was a fine sight charging with the bayonet We were falling all over them."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, MARCH 10, 1916.

FOR THE ORPHANS.

The calender ticks off the passing days, and it will soon mark the date of St. Patrick's day. This is the time selected by the officials of St Vincent de Paul's Society to appeal for funds in the interests of the forty odd inmates of the Orphanage. This is an appeal to the heart first, and to the purse afterwards. When we consider the claims of orphaned children, with no support but the public liberality, we must see our duty. The way the orphanage and inmates are to be helped on Saturday, the day chosen, is by the sale of Shamrocks, something that will put it in the power of everybody to help. The Saturday next to the date of the festival is selected, and that is next Saturday. Such a work of charity and kindness is a noble and appropriate way of honouring the memory of a saint who, in his life and by his influence since, has done so much to regenerate the heart of man, and bring out its choicest treasure, the spirit of charity. Now-a-days our common task has opened out our hearts in a special way to all good and holy appeals. It is hoped that the shamrocks sold on Saturday will be unprecedented in number.

THE ONE ADMISSABLE ARGUMENT.

There is only one argument used by the opponents of prohibition of the liquor traffic during the war, that deserves attention, has any weight, and that is only a matter of expediency and not of principle. It is the argument, that the present is an inopportune time to divert public attention from the duty of universal cooperation and undivided attention to war work. The taking of a referendum at an early date on the subject, and the incidental excitement will no doubt universally distract public attention from the duty of the hour, which is to lend every effort and direct every influence specifically to the work of doing our duty in the war. This argument has more force since such a measure as a referendum on prohibition is unnecessary. The government, without recourse to such a referendum, might have enacted prohibition of liquor as a war measure and would have been justified as much in doing that as in adopting any other war measure, such as the imposition of special taxes which were levied without the consent of the people by referendum or otherwise. If this had been done the public attention would not have been diverted from undivided devotion to war work by the destruction of a campaign that will involve our whole population. If the government, as it might have justifiably done, had procured the enactment of a prohibition measure as a war measure to apply to the duration of the war, it might, if it found its conscience troubling it over neglect of consulting the people, have provided for a referendum as to its repeal when the war would be over.

THE GREATEST GOOD TO THE GREATEST NUMBER.

The Legislature and a part of the people of the province seem to be obsessed with the Hydro-Electric and Hydro Radial idea. This is a good condition; for both things are closely associated with the promotion of industrial, agricultural and transportation interests. From a popular and provincial point of view their weak quality is their local character, their limited adaptability to the service of public needs.

It is a good thing that our legislators and people are deeply interested in Hydro-radials; the enthusiasm manifested is in a good cause. But it would be an infinitely better thing to see these people get equally interested and enthusiastic in the prosaic, but universally important matter of good roads, good country and city highways. If we could get the same enthusiasm excited in our legislators, government, and people, over the matter of good roads, there would be prospects of infinitely better results.

It is no disparagement of the Hydro-electric and Hydro-radials to say that the possibility of their application to the advancement of popular interests is limited. But both territorially and numerically they can at the best only directly serve the interests of a very small proportion of territory and population. There should, it seems, be some concurrent deference to the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number.

While a comparative fringe in the front of the province gets the benefit of the Hydro-electric enterprises, the great mass of the people are shut out from getting any direct advantage, and their disability in this regard is only emphasized by the great benefits derived by a comparatively few.

It is not argued that less attention should be paid to electric development and extension, but it is strongly urged that the same time, an equally and more important matter, receive greater proportional attention. The matter of good country roads, generally distributed, is of greater moment to the great mass of farmers than electrical development, good as it is, is to the comparatively few. Even in the matter of good roads, the greater part of the attention and enthusiasm is given to trunk lines—a euphemistic term for automobile speed ways. This spirit begets an unsymmetrical development. We have an application to the legislature for a grant of $120,000 to help complete the expensive automobile speedway between Toronto and Hamilton, whose thirty miles will probably cost $800,000. This road, when completed will be a great benefit to autoists and the farmers living contiguous to it. But the benefit would be more equitably distributed, if part of this expenditure or a similar, or preferably, a larger amount, were devoted to the improvements of country highways, the side roads leading to trunk roads.

The farmer living in the back part of a back township, has as much need and more, and as much right and more, owing to disadvantage of location, to good roads as the farmer living at "the front. As much right, for he has as large an interest in the funds of the province as the most favoured resident in the oldest townships. If we had improved, good, highways serving the farmers in the remoter districts, we should have more prosperous conditions of the farmers themselves from easier access to commercial centres; and these centres would have greater prosperity and growth from ease of access; from application of the prime principle of local and national development, good transportation, by road, rail or river.

It needs no fine argument to show that generally distributed good highways are a larger element in provincial prosperity — evenly distributed prosperity—than concentration of effort and expenditure upon limited areas. Build all the trunk lines and radial railway lines our finances will stand, but at the same time let the need of country highways be a factor in determining what expenditure we can stand for such purposes. We should not lose respect for the great principle of the greatest good to the greatest number.

SENSIBLE MEASURE IN MANITOBA.

The Province of Manitoba is to have a Workmen's Compensation Bill, under which the scales of Compensation are practically the same as the Ontario scales. But, unlike Ontario, Manitoba will have no State Fund into which the employers' contribution will be paid. Instead the Provincial measure will provide that all employers take out their workmen's insurance with some approved company, the policies being made out in the favour of a board appointed to carry out the scheme. The Government of the Province will guarantee all claims, and it will require the insuring companies to deposit a reasonable sum with the Board, so that claims will be met. This latter will also apply in the case of big employers, whose financial standing justifies them in carrying their own risks.—Canadian Insurance.

THE MORRISBURG AFFAIR.

A feeling of amazement has been produced throughout Canada by the latest exposure of Government irregularities in connection with the purchase of military supplies. Before the Committee of Public Accounts it has been proved that Mr. A. J. Drury, the Customs collector at Morrisburg, was given instructions apparently to allow all merchandise consigned to Col. Allison and to two or three other individuals to enter Canada duty free. These instructions were sent to Mr. Drury by Mr. MacDougall, the chief of the Customs Department, through the latter's son, who carried a letter which he was ordered to allow Mr. Drury to read and then to bring back.

Conforming to these mysterious directions, of which, apparently, no record was to be preserved, Mr. Drury allowed "tons upon' tons" of merchandise to be imported into the country, without even opening the heavy wooden cases to see what they contained. It is supposed that they contained military clothing, but they might have contained anything for all that our Customs Department knows. It is hinted that millions of dollars' worth of goods were thus brought into the country without paying any duty, and as the instructions do not appear to have been recalled, still more millions of dollars' worth of goods may yet be allowed to enter in the same way.

What is the explanation of this extraordinary proceeding, so unfair to other contractors and would-be contractors for military supplies? Sah! Hush! Listen! It is to fool the United States. As they are neutral, the exportation of these uniforms to Canada might be stopped if the fact became known through their having to pay duty! Of course, the American authorities are perfectly well aware that millions of dollars' worth of rifles, cannons, ammunition, explosives, machine guns, and all that sort of thing are being exported to the British. All this is perfectly legal neutral business. But to export clothing to Canada — that might upset the comity of nations if it became known. So the thing is done darkly. At dead of night, as it were, while our Customs collectors are officially anoring, the minions of Col. W. Allison and the Militia Department are gumshoeing out of sight with mysterious cases. Isn't it a lovely specimen of official—well, what name would you give it? —Montreal Herald.

GERMANY MUST QUIT PULLING UNCLE SAM'S "CHIN WHISKER"

President Wilson and the people of the United States may no longer hug the fond delusion that an attitude of correct neutrality, maintained by a dexterous play on diplomatic verbiage will avail them if Germany triumphs over the Allies. The New York Globe of March 4th publishes the following significant threft from one of the sanest of the German newspapers, the Frankfurter Zeitung:

"With the fall of England, however, Russia and France will automatically collapse like the organs of a body whose heart has been bored through. Then, also, America will remain isolated, and must for her part accept any conditions which we impose, because in the peace treaties with our European foes we can, among other things, also demand the handing over of all large battleships and submarines whereby our fleet would become seven times the strength of the American navy. Then America would be simultaneously compelled to surrender, and, as a matter of course, would not only be compelled to give up all the interned German liners, but also pay all the war expenditures of her Germanic Powers and their allies."

This explains why Germans treat with contempt President Wilson's notes, and why German naval officers are now toasting "the day" when their country will declare war on the United States. The New York Globe points out what it means for the Republic in hard cash, should the threats of the Germanic Press materialise:

"The Entente Allies will be bankrupt, and thus unable to pay. So Uncle Sam will be the indemnity payer. A round bill. Say, $10,000,000,000 to Germany, $5,000,000,000 to Austria, $2,000,000,000 to Turkey and, say, $1,000,000,000 to Bulgaria. In all, $18,000,000,000—a handsome sum."

If anything could stir the Yankee from his engrossing pastime of wealth accumulation and remind him how futile is his faith in the omnipotence of the Monroe Doctrine as a national mascot that wards off all dangers, it is this impudent boast of a responsible and representative German newspaper, which "is not the idle chatter of the street, but of the heads of the German Admiralty—the Admiralty that is responsible for the behaviour of German submarines." The American people now know what to expect were the Prussians to emerge as victor in the European war. Well may The New York Globe exclaim that "gratitude is due to our German friends for this minute description of the part the United States is to play in the grand settlement." The Germans have snatched a brief interval in which to turn from their ghoulish pastime of murder on the high seas to pluck the beard of Uncle Sam.—The Globe.

LITTLE SNAPSHOTS OF OUR LEGISLATORS

BY DON HUNT

Thomas Marshall, M.P.P., for Lincoln—

Introducer of the Liberal resolution demanding provincial rights and fair play for Hydro Radials.

Thick-and thin supporter of Hydro. Six footer.

Not strong on laughing, but chuckles melodiously.

Lives at a Conservative Hotel while in Toronto.

Not that he's tired of his Liberal colleagues.

No!

But he's used to this hotel and says he's getting too old to move.

Specialties in Education and Hydro.

Comes from Dunnville; sells hardware.

Always referred to lovingly as "Tom Marshall."

Not "Tommy."

Just plain "Tom".

Pretty Steady.

Mike Reagan applied to Mrs. Stone for a position as chauffeur and gave the name of a friend as reference.

Mrs. Stone sought the friend and asked:

"Mr. Brady, your neighbor, Michael Reagan, has applied to me for a place as chauffeur. Is he a steady man?"

"Steady?" cried Brady. "Indade, mum, if he was anny steadier he'd be dead!"

Looked That Way.

"I want a man who doesn't smoke or drink."

"What are the wages?"

"Six dollars a week."

"Guess you want a man who doesn't eat, either."

Not Guilty.

"How many times have I told you that you must not answer me back, Norah?" said Mrs. Housekeep.

"Sure, mum, an' Oi ain't answerin' yer back," said Norah. "Oi'm answerin' your face."

Tiresomeness.

"Don't you get tired of playing the same part night after night?"

"I should say not," replied the actor. "What makes me tired is closing shows and learning new parts."

Favors.

"Be careful about asking favors of people, my boy."

"Why?"

"Because once a man does a favor for you you are in his debt for life."

It Makes Tracks.

One day small Harold came running into the house, and, holding up a horseshoe, he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, some poor horse lost one of his tracks, and I found it."

Keeping Company.

"They kept company for an awfully long time before they finally got married."

"Yes, and they've kept it most of the time since. Her relatives seem bound to live on them."

Temptation does not make a man bad. It merely shows him what he is. —Thomas a Kempis.

CITY SHADE TREES SUFFER

Careless Workers and Unfavourable Growth Conditions Cause Much Loss

The protection of trees in cities is rapidly assuming a much more important position in municipal affairs. Twenty years ago, the trees received no special care, and were, as a whole, in much better condition than at the present time. But as a result of the growth of cities and towns, the trees cannot now obtain the pure air, moisture, humus, etc., necessary to their growth, and many beautiful city trees are forced to grow under conditions entirely foreign to their natural element.

Noxious gases from manufacturing processes are poisonous to shade trees. Roadways and pavements are laid entirely regardless of the damage done to tree roots. In some cities and towns, the chief essential is to have a sidewalk perfectly straight, no deviation to save a tree being considered, and the tree is sacrificed to this obsolete engineering theory. Careless teamsters, electric and telephone wiremen and malicious persons are also causes of serious damage to the shade trees of city streets. Many cities engage tree-butchers whose only qualification for the work is the low wage at which they can be engaged, regardless of the great damage they do to the trees.

It is generally admitted that the shade tree is necessary in our cities and should at least receive proper care and protection. Many trained arborists are now available for this work, men who have made close study of the conditions under which city shade trees have to exist. With the growing appreciation of the value of shade trees, there is no doubt that at least the larger cities will eventually have trained city foresters in charge of the trees.—Conservation.

HYDRO RADIAL IN LEGISLATURE

Special to The Examiner:

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, Toronto, March 9.—Enthusiasm for Hydro Power and Hydro Radials, and for the principles of Government ownership underlying these peoples' projects, was marked among the Liberal members in the Hydro debate.

For years a section of the Government members and the Government press charged the Liberals with apathy or opposition towards the Hydro. The charges never were justified as actual records of the House clearly show, and never was the real attitude of the Liberal party towards the Hydro shown better than on the present occasion, when the subject came up under Mr. Marshall's resolution.

Not only did Mr. Marshall himself show once more his interest in Hydro development, but Sam Carter, M.P.P., continued his well-known record on the subject, and Sam Clark, M.P.P. for West Northumberland, and Hugh Munro, M.P.P. for Glengarry, urged particularly the crying need of Hydro development in the eastern part of the province as well as in the west.

Mr. Rowell's contribution to the debate was not only an endorsation of the Hydro movement, but was a scholarly and comprehensive survey of the constitutional relations between the Provinces and the Federal Government under the British North America Act, and a vigorous plea for Provincial rights.

IF YOU NO LONGER USE IT, SELL IT THROUGH AN EXAMINER "FOR SALE AD."

A Bull's Eye.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

ORANGE CAKE

1 cupful sugar
3 egg-yolks
Juice of 1 orange
1 cupful bread-flour
1½ teaspoonfuls baking powder
2 egg-whites
Few grains of salt

Beat the egg-yolks till creamy, add the sugar, and blend thoroughly. Measure the orange juice and add water, if necessary, to make a half-cupful of liquid. Mix the baking powder with the flour, and add alternately to first mixture with the orange juice. Fold in the egg-whites beaten stiff. Bake in layers about five minutes in a hot oven; reduce the heat and cook more slowly till the cake is done—about fifteen minutes in all. Put together and ice with orange frosting, or use a jelly or whipped cream filling, and sprinkle powder sugar over the top. This cake will keep moist for several days.

THE FUND MAY BE INCREASED

Council Propose to Add One Thousand Dollars to Civic Compensation Fund

It is the intention of the City Council to add another one thousand dollars to the compensation fund that has been set aside in accordance with the act. This will make a fund of three thousand dollars which will be at the disposal of the city for use in case of accidents resulting to civic employees. The case of Gordon Hewson, who a few days ago was killed while working for the Utilities Commission, has been submitted to the Workmens' Compensation Board. The Board will in all probability award Mrs. Hewson the sum of twenty dollars a month.

THE RELIGIOUS SIDE OF THE QUESTION

Mr. F. A. Conners Believes the Time is at Hand When We Should Strike Germany From Our Pulpits

Mr. F. A. Conners of this city contributes the following, together with the appended letter taken from the Montreal Witness:

German Kulture.

We have been striking at Germany in the various phases of our national life. Politically, socially and otherwise, it is about time we turned our attention to the religious side of the question and strike Germany from our pulpits.

Where have the doubts regarding God's Word come from, that fill the minds of the people to-day? The common people would never have thought of doubting the Word of God, had these suggestions not come to them through the pulpit. Strange is it not that those posing as leaders of God's people should cast reflections on the Word of God and poison the minds of the flock with their damnable heresies. This state of affairs calls for a stern rebuke and a vigorous protest on the part of those who hold to the Inspired Word of God. Scripture References I. Tim. 4:1-2; II Tim. 3:9; II Tim., 4-1-5; II Peter, 2:1-4; Jude, 1-4; II John, 9-11.

German Theology.

(To the Editor of the "Witness.")

Sir,—Permit me through the columns of the "Witness" to call the attention of its readers to a fact all will agree to, that a very large space is given in the newspapers to "German militarism and Kultur" and their effects, but very little notice is taken of "German Theology," although its influence has been as greatly vaster as the spiritual realm is greater than the natural or material, especially that phase of it, the "Destructive criticism of the Bible."

The Bible when used for the purpose for which our Maker has given it to man, creates and nourishes a spiritual atmosphere, and atmosphere determines the development of life. Now, German theology has antagonized spiritual life in all Protestant countries for a considerable period of time. Take the case of Scotland, where the spiritual atmosphere has vastly chilled during the last sixty years. Why? Because her ministers and religious leaders so often finished their education in Germany, and the same leaven has been working in England, Canada and the United States in their universities and colleges.

Now, take the case of two societies, one in England and Canada, one in the United States, in which the spiritual atmosphere has been phenomenal, the "China Inland Mission" and "The Moody Bible Institute," both of which has given "German theology" to a wide berth. I will now conclude by referring to four passages of Scripture: Psalm 12:6; Psalm 138:2; Jer 23:29; Mark 8:5-6.

THE LONELY BATTERY

A Handful of Men Stuck to Guns and Won the Day

Yet another great feat has to be added to those performed by the Royal Field Artillery, the heroes being the men attached to the 16th Battery. In a certain battle when the Prussian Guard opposed the British, the Germans concentrated their guns on the 16th Battery. Lieutenant Anne says that suddenly he found himself alone, with the exception of two or three Highlanders. A major came up and said, "We are surrounded by Germans. The infantry have gone." But the battery stuck to their guns until they had only one working, and held on till supporting infantry came and threw the enemy back. At 5.30 in the evening word was passed down the line that they had won a great victory. Of 2,000 Prussian Guards only fifty were left alive, and these were wounded.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixtures of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Dr. Kelly Writes Interestingly of His Work in France

Letter From the Front to the Members of the Local Medical Association—With a Field Ambulance

Dr. B. Kelly of this city, now with the Army Medical Corps in France, writing to Dr. Morgan and members of the Medical Society, says:

Dr. Morgan and Members of P. M. Society:

Gentlemen,—As this is the Sabbath day and I have just opened a tin of Hyman's tobacco and have a well broken in B.B.B. pipe, I thought I could do worse than write you a few lines of the medical end of the work at the front. Well, I am comfortably installed in a field ambulance, which is the medium between the regular aid posts and the clearing hospitals. We have, as I suppose you all know, about 250 men and 10 medical officers. We have our headquarters back about three miles from the firing line and then have an advanced station in which we have about 30 men and 2 officers. The duties of the advanced station is to clear the aid posts. W keep two bearers at each and they have 24 hour shifts. In these quiet times we are able to clear them at any time of the day as the country is pretty well screened from the enemy. There are times when the battalion can't get their wounded out of the trenches until night. We always try to get our advanced dressing station as far away from batteries as possible. Of course beggars can't be choosers and usually have to take what is left for us. At present, thanks to the thoroughness of the Belgians in building their homes to last for centuries we have a bomb proof, cow stable which will hold nearly 40 stretcher cases. It is built of brick and has a brick ceiling, reinforced with steel girders, a loft and tile roof which we hope will detonate any ordinary shell before it comes to the ceiling. The last dressing station we had was isolated and never touched for six months and then one day Fritz got more active than usual and dropped 30 or 40 shells around it (5.90) and made 6 direct hits altogether, breaking up our happy home—fortunately we had no cases in and we took advantage of the good brick ceiling cellars which were provided. No one was hurt but when we came up to earth again, found a shell nose in the middle of one of the officers' beds. All cases are dressed at the aid posts: Iodine and usually first field dressing; we do as little dressing as possible. But all field dressings must be changed at the field ambulance and dressed for shipping; 1,000 units of antititanic serum given to all wounded. In our main dressing station we usually try to get a place well sheltered in which we can store quite a number of cases. We have seven motor ambulances, but where we are now can only use them at night. Have to carry any badly wounded nearly a mile. We keep all cases except bad ones at our Headquarters until the motor ambulance convoy, belonging to one of the clearing stations calls every evening to evacuate us.

We have three clearing hospitals within reach and in the ordinary case we can get the wounded to them in the course of 3 or 4 hours. In the Book, a Field Ambulance is fixed to one Brigade, but in this trench warfare we clear two and all another F. A. 1 Brigade, leaving one free to run a rest station for the Division. To this we send the sick which we think will be better in the course of a week, also the slight wounds; for if a man is sent down the line he is lost for a period of a few weeks to months.

The general health of the troops is excellent, which is attributed to three things, sanitation, inoculation and chlorination of water. Everything is kept scrupulously clean, billets and labrines, etc. and one unit following another goes over the place with a fine comb and flash light trying to pick a complaint. We are being inoculated (typhoid) the second time now, and I think it has proved its worth. Anyway there are no complaints against it and anyone who comes out here and is not, deserves the iron cross. These civilians, I suppose, are immune to it for generations. They have no idea of sanitation whatever. All farms are built around the common manure pit, on the square, all doors open to it, and the well is usually sunk beside the pit.

We get our water for our carts at various points all through the country, usually on a hill if possible. The wounds we get are many and varied, shrapnel and rifle grenades, mostly.

I hope you will excuse this disconnected letter and scribbling, but have just written it as it came into my head.

Yours truly,
B. E. Kelly.

Turk Peace Move Hinges on Verdun

LONDON, March 10.—A report of one of the peace discussions held by the Turkish Government is contained in a despatch from Athens, dated March 7, forwarded by the correspondent there of The London Daily Chronicle. He says:

"Before the attempted assassination of Enver Pasha (it is reported in some quarters here that the Young Turk leader has since died) the whole new Turkish Commission met with all the Ministers present. The Grand Vizier upheld the contention that immediate peace should be concluded with the allied great powers, but in the end the committee decided to await the result of the present fighting on the French front. It was in view of certain potential eventualities that the Ottoman Government instructed the local authorities to carry out the clearance of mines from the Dardanelles."

SAVED TRAIN OF MUNITIONS

Plucky Frenchman Foiled Zeppelin Raiders at Revigny.

PARIS, March 10.—Zeppelins are active behind the French lines endeavoring to strike at communications. On Tuesday they appeared over Revigny station, with the evident intention of destroying a train load of munitions.

The station agent, named Plaom, with the help of a station hand, with great coolness and dexterity, coupled up the seventy cars composing the train and got them off to a place of safety, bombs exploding all round but none striking the target.

For this the station agent was decorated with the Military Cross.

SECOND STORM OF THE SEASON

Snow Was Heavy and Was Accompanied by a High Wind

The second big storm of the season broke over the city during the night. It started at a late hour last evening and blew itself out about ten o'clock this morning. The snow was accompanied by a high wind, which found the weak spots in many a poorly constructed dwelling. Citizens awoke this morning to find the city encompassed in a blanket of snow through which many of them waded in order to get to work. The street railway and other public utilities struggled with the elements in an effort to maintain their respective services. Many of the trains were late on both lines, likewise some of the snowplough men.

Berliners Bring Petitions to Toronto

Bill to Change Name of City is Expected in a Few Days.

BERLIN, Ont., March 10.—City Solicitor H. J. Sims and Aldermen W. H. Cleghorn and J. A. Hallman took to Toronto the various petitions signed by the manufacturers, business men and ratepayers of this city favoring the changing of the name of the city, and submitted them to the Attorney-General's Department. The special act to change the name of the city, it is expected, will be introduced in a few days. One of the petitions contained the signatures of 116 manufacturing concerns in Berlin out of a total of about 125. The other petitions were very largely signed. Despite steps to decide on the future name of this city will not be taken until the result of the amalgamation negotiations with Waterloo are known.

BROCKVILLE, March 10.—A woman whose maiden name was Jennie Flynn of Gananoque has pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy. Though only 29 years of age, she has had three matrimonial ventures and is the mother of eight children, now in different parts of the country. She first married Joseph Bryan, of Belleville, in 1902, living with him eight years. Eligh who had enlisted in a Peterboro' Battalion, was transferred to the 59th here, but failed to report. He was arrested at Prescott with the woman and handed over to the military authorities to-day.

Offensive Language Over Telephone

Precedent Established in Toronto Police Court

When charged in the afternoon Police Court with using indecent, obscene, blasphemous or grossly insulting language over a telephone G. C. Meyer, through counsel, pleaded not guilty.

Maggiorino Olivetto, a chef, told the court that he had been called up to the Prince George Hotel by a woman, who said that Meyer had taken the phone, he said, and had called him names. Arthur Gagnier also gave evidence that a name he had been called by someone he alleged to be Meyer, was not desirable.

Meyer, however, positively denied using the language charged over the phone. He was angry, he said, and had used some unconventional language while stading near the phone. He also denied having any conversation with Gagnier.

"This will have to be $5 and costs," decided Magistrate Kingsford. "It might have been $25 and costs."

This conviction is the second of its kind in the province, under the recent admendment to the Telephone Act.

A JOLLY CARNIVAL IN THE WEST END

The Belgium Relief Fund Receives Another Donation

The juvenile population in the vicinity of Homewood avenue, had an enjoyable time Wednesday evening on the improvised skating rink adjoining the residence of Mr. H. M. Bishop, 560 Homewood avenue. The Belgium Relief Fund is a popular scheme in this neighbourhood, and at the suggestion of Miss Maud Bishop it was decided to hold a fancy skating carnival for the benefit of this Fund. It was arranged that an admission fee of five cents be asked from every skater. The attraction was well announced a week ahead, with the result that over half a hundred costumed skaters appeared in gay and gaudy make-ups. They cut fancy figures on the ice to the enjoyment of themselves and an admiring crowd of adult outsiders during the evening. The little rink was tastefuly illuminated for the occasion, while the pretty costumes of the young skaters were quite creditable to all concerned. The receipts of the evening were handed over to Mrs. Dr. Morrison, one of the treasurers of the Belgium Fund.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Rev. C. R. Tappert Cynosure of All Leaving Berlin

"Understood" He Will Go to Fashionable New York Suburb.

SYMPATHY FOR SOLDIERS.

Many Offers From all Parts of the Province to Pay Their Fines.

BERLIN, March 10.—Rev. C. R. Tappert, wife and family took their departure from the city in a quick manner, leaving by Grand Trunk for Buffalo, N.Y. which is to be a temporary home for the family, who will visit relatives until the pastor is settled in his new charge.

It is understood that he has received a call to a fashionable suburban town church out of New York city. The going away of this family naturally created considerable interest, especially at this time, as about two hundred hockey rooters were going to Toronto on this train, and this family party with a dozen or two of their friends were soon in the gaze of all eyes, and it bore hard on Mrs. Tappert, who has suffered from a nervous breakdown since the fracas last Saturday. The pastor with his black eye was conspicuous among the crowd.

The trial of the two soldiers have evidently created some interest throughout the province, as offers to pay their fines were numerous, among these being one from a man in Kingston, who offered to pay their fines up to one thousand dollars.

A local subscription list showed that there was five hundred dollars ready locally to help them.

Declares United States Could Not Check Invader

NEW YORK, March 10.—"If war should be declared to-morrow morning, our navy, under Josephus Daniels, would be absolutely impotent to check the invasion of our coast," declared former Secretary of the Navy George Von L. Meyer.

"Congress is talking war," continued Mr. Meyer. "Thanks to Mr. Daniels' incompetence, war to-morrow with any one of four European nations would find the way open to the enemy.

"Let us draw the indictment.

"Our navy has no organization prepared to act on a war footing.

"It has no tested war plan.

"It has no tested mobilization plan.

"It has no general staff.

"It has no national council of defence.

"It has a small supply of ammunition, a shortage of enlisted men and officers on practically every fighting ship.

"It has no enlisted reserves.

"We have no fast cruisers except three that are obsolete.

"We lack armed hydroplanes, and the lamentatir adti oltf ofwyoddilddowodd lamentable conditions of our submarine flotilla was demonstrated in the fall manoeuvres.

"We have fewer torpedo destroyers in commission than in reserve.

"Our battleship fleet numbers fifteen. It was twenty-one when Daniels entered office.

"Five of the Connecticut class of battleships have demonstrated that they cannot exceed a speed of twelve to fifteen knots an hour without danger of breaking their drive shafts."

WAY TO GAIN FLESH

Conductor Tells How He Gained Flesh and Strength.

So many cases like the following are continually coming to our attention we want everyone in Peterborough to know that our offer still holds good to return money in every case where Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, fails to create strength and build up weak, run-down, nervous, overworked men and women.

"I am a conductor on the Scranton Ry., and became run-down and tired out, lost my appetite, flesh and strength, so I had to lose a good deal of time from my work. A friend told me to try Vinol. I did so and rapidly regained health and strength, and yesterday I was weighed and it showed I had gained 26 pounds since taking Vinol. I cannot say enough in praise of Vinol, for what it has done for me." G. B Sorber, 1513 Vine St., Scranton, Pa.

About every other day we are publishing letters like this in Peterborough newspapers, about Vinol. They are guaranteed to be truthful and genuine, and show the good Vinol is doing all over the country.

A Waif From The Trenches

Romantic Story of An Unknown Child—Adopted and Named by the Bedfordshires

The newspaper man was travelling from Manchester to Northampton, England and at Leicester there entered the train a sergeant-major, with a bright little girl about four years old. Asked if she was his daughter, the soldier replied, "She is and she isn't; she belongs to our company."

"About eight months ago," he said (the story is told by the "Northampton Daily Echo") "the company were trudging along for the first line of trenches when one of the men—his name was Philip Impey—found the child in a ditch by the roadside. No one could go back, and the soldiers took the girl into the trench and made her as comfortable as possible. In a few days she had recovered from the ill-effects of the wet and exposure, and was running up and down the trench, the pet of all the officers and men.

"One day a bomb nearly filled in part of the trench. When the men had recovered from the shock the sergeant-major asked a man to go and see that the child was safe. They had left her asleep in a snug corner, and there they found her, still sleeping!

The Enemy and the Child.

"The German trenches were about 150 yards off, and the level, open space between the two lines wasn't healthy. No man who valued his life would go there unnecessarily or recklessly put his head above the parapet. One morning, to their horror, the men, through the periscope, saw the child standing above the trench on the German side. Cries came from the enemy, but they were not hostile. The sight of the girl, little more than an infant, had touched their sentimental side, and she had offers of chocolate and invitations to go and see them.

"After that the girl went over the parapet quite often. She was as safe in that danger zone as if she had been behind the lines. No German would harm her, and once she went close up to their first-line trench."

The eight days' trench duty ended, the little daughter of the company was taken back, and was not allowed to get between the lines again. She was taken charge of by the company storekeeper, who had children of his own, and was mightly proud of his skill in dressing and undressing the child, and his strictness about the morning bath. All the men made a fuss of her—and she of them. The boys in khaki are her playmates, and she goes up to any Tommy with a smile of complete trust.

Finding a Name.

A month after she was found the men thought that she ought to have a name. Philip Impey, who found her, was now dead, and they gave her his surname, with Phyllis as the nearest approach to Philip. After she had been six months with the company the sergeant-major was wounded, and came to a hospital at home. The girl came with him, and stayed in hospital, too, the pet of patients and nurses.

She has now been taken by her adopted "daddy"—the sergeant-major—to Bedford, where she will have a woman's care and still be attached to the regiment.

The parentage of the child, and how she came to be deserted in the ditch at La Bassee, remain an unsolved mystery. She was too young to know her name, or to give any account of herself. There is a suggestion of terror-stricken flight from somewhere in the fact that she is afraid of a German helmet. For the khaki and becapped soldiers she has an affection, but if a Tommy puts a helmet on she shrinks away as in fear.

She is a rosy-cheeked, chubby child, with white flaxen hair. When found she was well clad, but there was no clue to her identity. Whether her mother is alive or whether she was a victim of the Huns is not known, but it is certain that if the child does remain orphaned she will be well cared for by the officers and men of the Bedfordshires.

FEW GRAVES IN VERDUN

How German Correspondents Decide Losses Have Been Light.

METZ, March 10.—Via Berlin and London.—Judging from close observation of the fields of recent battles on the east and northeast sections of the Verdun front, the Associated Press correspondent sees no reason to question declarations of officers from German headquarters and from units engaged that the German losses in these operations, and particularly in storming Fort Douaumont, were by no means high.

Graves of soldiers usually furnish fairly accurate indication of the extent of casualties in a given action or series of actions. For one not actually present during the battle, before the bodies of the dead are interred, no better evidence of the number killed can be obtained than from the rude crosses which the German soldier usually places as piously and conscientiously upon the graves of his enemy as on those of his own dead. He even thus marks the grave of the outcast Franctireurs.

In the advance across the Woevre plain t ward the foothills of the fortress the losses seem to have been almost insignificant. Very few graves, either French or German, were seen around Ornes, Maucourt, Fromezey, Etain and other points over which the Germans swept.

Many of the largest Japanese warships have been equipped with wireless telephones which operate successfully for distances up to 100 miles.

Translation of a Pathetic Letter Written By a Turkish Officer

Writing to his Wife, Infantry Captain Says English are Persistent, and Have no Fear of Death.

TORONTO, March 10.—Writing to a friend here Captain Vaughan Bateson, R.A.M.C., who was attached to the Dardanelles expeditionary force, states:

"I have just received the translation of a letter written by a Turkish officer, Captain Musta Mahomet, 13th Turkish Infantry Regt. It was found on his dead body addressed to his wife. He was killed in an attack on our trenches. This is a most interesting human document and deals with the evening prayers of the Mahometan and he evidently has more regard for our soldiers than some newspaper critics as a sequel to Sir Ian Hamilton's despatch. The pathos is genuine, the facts tragic, and in spite of the Oriental language it is not play-acting."

The letter is as follows:

Gets No Rest.

"To my Highborn Royal Wife:—

"Ayesha: the angel of beauty. How pleased I am with the Gods of Allah for the letter which I received from you, my dear, and also that my two smaller angel darlings are happy and well.

"Eh! Oh! Ayesha, My Morning Star, what reply can I give you? God has so far granted me health and strength and has brought me through so far safely. But when can it possibly end? We are bombarded here by the English. No rest we receive and very little food, and our men are dying in hundreds from disease. Discontent is also beginning to show itself among the men.

English Have no Fear.

"I pray God to bring all this to an end. I can see our lovely Constantinople in ruins, our homes burned to the ground, our wives and children put to the sword. Nothing but some great favour from Allah can protect it. These English are very persistent, and they have no fear of death in them. Apparently they are very cruel; they watch us like wolves in the night and are upon us like the Devil. Oh! why did we join in this wicked war. England has been very partial to us in the past and we may, therefore, expect no mercy from one we have so badly injured.

"Ayesha, My Morning Star Star of My Sight. Call on Maker, the Magician, and see from him what my future holds. Prior to this kiss my two little angels, Hesta Inas and Ayas, eyes, mouth, ears, hands, feet and pray that the good God may keep me safe.

"Now, Ayesha, I must take leave of you as the sun is sinking and I must away to my devotions, in which I always pray for you, My Morning Star, and for my two Angels of Light, Allah bless you, Ayesha. I wish I were at home to give you my adoration.

"From your husband,

Musta Mahomet,
13th Turkish Infantry Regt.,
Acelia Baba."

Spies Fear to Use American Passports

Stringent Regulations at Washington Are Proving Effective.

LONDON, March 10.—The stringent regulations put into effect by the American Government to prevent the issue of fraudulent passports has been so effective that the use of American passports by spies in England has practically ceased.

At the present moment not a single person held in England for espionage is the possessor of an American passport.

Not only has it become extremely difficult for an American without legitimate business to secure a passport, but such close touch is kept on those already issued that spies are unlikely to take the risk of attempting to enter England with a forged American passport.

NO BLAME IS ATTACHED

which it is possible to stop a car is about two-car-lengths.

John McCann, Superintendent of the Street Railway, reported the car to be in good condition; in fact it is the newest one they have, and pointed out that the pea-cock patent brake with which it is equipped, is the best brake obtainable for cars not fitted with air brakes. He considered the motorman and conductor very careful men. His estimate of a good stop was the same as the motorman—two car-lengths, but it largely depended upon the condition of the rails.

Motorman Eason, on being further examined by Dr. Greer, said it was the custom to ring the gong to warn any person of the approach of the car, but in this case he was so close to the deceased before he saw her that he had no time to sound the gong, nor would it have been a wise thing to do, as it meant raising the foot to ring it, which would mean loss power on the brake.

Detective Maughar went with Detective Newhall to see if they could find any eye witness of the accident, but were unsuccessful.

This, with the jurors' decision, closed the case.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M. P., Addresses Letter to Mayor Duffus re Trent Water Powers

Mayor Duffus has received a letter from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M P., stating that further developments are expected in connection with the Trent power policy. The matter is now before the legislators in Ottawa, and some definite statement as to what steps may be adopted to develop the water powers along the Trent Canal, is expected in the course of a few days. Capt. Burnham concludes his letter by enumerating some of the advantages that will accrue to Peterborough in consequence of the development of the Trent water powers.

THE MARCH NUMBER OF ROD AND GUN

March Rod and Gun has an interesting table of contents for the lover of outdoor life. Bonnycastle Dale contributes the leading article on "The New Sport for the Spring Duck Shooter;" F. V. Williams writes of "Jim's Fox"; R. J. Fraser of "The Men Who Cant Come Back." Norman Lett describes a "Three Weeks' Canoe Trip in Algonquin Park;" and E. O. Perrin contributes the story of "Blanchard's Trap," the hero in which sets out to capture a bear and succeeds in landing an even more valuable and quite unexpected prize. There are other stories as good as these and besides the regular departments devoted to Guns and Ammunition, Fishing Notes, The Trap, The Kennel, etc., are calculated to attract sportsmen who are interested in matters of this kind. Rod and Gun is published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont.

Were Fined One Dollar Each

Quartette of Local Citizens Forget How to Use a Snow Shovel

Fines of one dollar each was imposed on four citizens who in this morning's police court were charged with permitting snow and ice to accumulate in front of their premises. The by-law relating to the removal of snow concerns that part of the city known as the fire limits. It is bounded on the south by King street; on the east by the eastern limits of lots four on the east side of Water street; on the north by McDonnel street, except on George street, the west side of Water street and those streets to Dublin street; and on the west halfway between Aylmer and Bethune streets.

It is the intention of the authorities to enforce this by-law as many complaints have been received of late concerning the accumulation of snow and ice.

Good For Children.

Mothers! Physicians agree that flavour and the body building elements of grains lie in the dark parts usually thrown away. So also do the lime salts which your child needs to harden bones and teeth. Children fed upon coarse dark cereals develop greater resistance. Witness the Bulgars and Serbs. Roman soldiers who conquered the world fed upon two brands of entire grain food a day. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a scientifically balanced ration made from several entire grains. It's delicious, easily prepared in a variety of ways and nourishes better than meat. It's a natural laxative. Most grocers sell it.

40,000 GRATEFUL LETTERS RECEIVED IN A SINGLE MAIL

Work of the National Service Committee in Supplying Field Comforts For the Canadian Soldiers is Thoroughly Appreciated By the Men at the Front

In this period of war, the nation at home communicates with the nation in arms, our representatives on active service by means of two organisations, the Red Cross and Field Comforts Societies. The Red Cross makes provision for the soldier who is sick, wounded or prisoner. The Field Comforts Society has ever a larger task, in keeping up means of suitable supplies, the health and spirits of the soldier in the field.

Gifts have been given by the Canadian public for this latter purpose and it is gratifying to know that these comforts are being distributed promptly and efficiently and are received with great gratitude and pleasure in the trenches.

The activities of all the women's organizations in such as the Women's Institutes, the Daughters of the Empire, etc. Canada are co-ordinated in the National Service Committee.

Goods collected on this side of the ocean are shipped to a warehouse in London, from which they are sent to France by the Canadian War Contingent Association, which is composed of Canadians and acts in close conjunction with the anadian Army and the Canadian Red Cross.

Mr. J. C. Colmer, the Secretary, is constantly in touch with the commanders of Canadian battalions. When they are in need of anything they write to him and he supplies their wants so far as the supplies sent from Canada permit. There is no conjestion of supplies. There is no favouritism or waste in their distribution. Field comforts are apportioned economically where they are most needed, according to the advice of the officers on active service with their units.

The proof of this is the thousands of grateful letters received from the front. 40,000 for instance were received in one mail by the National Service Committee on the occasion of their Christmas gifts to the troops.

The uniform testimony of these letters is that field comforts are a great boon and are very gratefully received. These thousands of warm-hearted acknowledgments should give a quietus to all rumours that the soldier does not get field comforts.

France, Feb. 1st, 1916.

These towels are very much appreciated by the men of this Unit, as towels are scare articles out here. Additional towels will also be appreciated.

You were good enough to send to this Division a gift of twelve cases of curry powder, and now I want to tell you how the troops enjoyed the additional relish to their food through your kindness.

In order that they might all know the donor, notice of the gift was placed in Routine Orders of 23rd December, 1915; and I want to again thank you on behalf of the Division

France, Jan. 17th, 1916.

5076, 6 containing 510 body belts.

The tobacco has been distributed, and is much appreciated. The socks are extremely useful to replenish our constantly diminishing supply. Please accept our thanks for these most welcome gifts.

France, Dec. 27th, 1915.

I wish to thank you for the splendid gift of gloves and mufflers sent to my men. The gloves proved especially useful, I take this opportunity of thanking the ladies who are members of your Association for the kind thought that prompted the gift and the amount of hard work entailed in making these comforts. With all good wishes.

France, Dec. 29th, 1915.

We have received your consignment containing mufflers, helmets wristlets, chewing tobacco, smoking tobacco, cigarettes. The Divisional Sanitary Section, 1st Canadians, is delighted with the comforts and wishes to thank you sincerely for same.

The Lifebuoy soap was received and distributed to the men. It was appreciated by the men as a very useful and acceptable remembrance.

The best thing to send is socks. The two packages have arrived and I wish to thank you very much for same.

I voice the feeling of this Brigade in thanking you for a CINEMA apparatus, lately placed in charge of Capt. Archibald, Y.M.C.A. It is immensely popular.

CRYIL MAUDE IN "GRUMPY"

An Extraordinary Attraction—Here Next Wednesday

At The Grand theatre on Wednesday next, Mr. Cyril Maude, one of the foremost actors of the English stage, and now securely fixed in the regard of the theatre patrons of America, will be seen for the first time in this city in the four-act play, "Grumpy," one of the chiefest successes of his notable career; and probably the most talked about play, now before our public. The comedy was written by Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percyval, and has to its credit an entire theatrical year in New York; a London success, at the New theatre, that even the beginning of the European war, could not interfere with, for "Grumpy" ran on playing to capacity audiences, all through the first months of the conflict, and was not withdrawn until it became time for Mr. Maude to sail for America to fulfill contracts made for Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, where he was last season. Also star and play have the unusual distinction of a second New York triumph, obtained at a Broadway theatre, the Empire, early in the past autumn. Mr. Maude brings to this city the same cast and production seen in his recent New York engagement.

NEW MURDER MYSTERY FOR NEW YORK POLICE

Woman Found Dead—Companion Becomes Unconscious When Questioned.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Policemen summoned to an apartment house in West Eleventh street to-day found the body of a woman supposed to have been Nellie Kiernan, 35 years old, who apparently had been beaten to death. In the apartment was D. Benjamin F. Soaring who, according to tenants in the building, had introduced the woman there two weeks ago as his wife. The only explanation given by the physician, who was said to have been found pacing the floor apparently dazed, was that the woman had fallen from a chair and been mortally injured.

An examination of the apartment indicated that there had been a struggle. Many bottles were strewn about the rooms. Coroner's physician Lehane said the woman had been dead from eighteen to twenty-four hours.

Dr. Soaring was taken to Bellevue Hospital under guard, but lapsed into unconsciousness when the police tried to question him.

AMERICAN TROOPS ORDERED TO MEXICO

Will Punish the Mexican Bandits Who Attacked Columbus, Killing at Least Sixteen Americans--Cabinet Held a Meeting To-day---Secretary of War Baker Receives Instructions to Order an Expedition Into Mexico.

WASHINGTON, March 10. — The Cabinet to-day decided to authorize Secretary of War Baker to order a punitive expedition into Mexico to capture the Mexican bandits who attacked Columbus, N.M.

Secretary Baker left the Cabinet huddledly at 12.10 to-day and went directly to the War Office before the other Cabinet Ministers left. He is said to have followed instructions, and it is understood that a message was to be sent to General Funston to order troops over the border.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Tense with suppressed indignation, the Senate this afternoon postponed action of the Columbus, N.M., outrage, despite resolutions of war by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota and Senator Fall, of New Mexico, and a bitter speech by Senator Ashurst, of Arizona. General Funston's advance guard is already in Mexico with the full consent of President Carranza.

COLUMBUS, N.M., March 10. — Francisco Villa, outlawed Mexican bandit, raided United States territory yesterday. With 800 men he attacked Columbus, killed at least sixteen Americans, and fired many buildings before he was driven back across the international border.

At least 250 troopers of the Thirteenth United States Cavalry followed the Villa band into Mexico. Reports to Col. H. J. Slocum, commanding the United States troops at this point, late yesterday stated that Villa had made a stand five miles south of the border, where spirited fighting ensued. In this engagement an unnamed private was killed and Captain George Williams, Adjutant of the 13th Cavalry, was wounded.

TROOPERS HOLD GROUND.

The small detachment of troopers under Major Frank Tompkins and Elmer Lindsley, fighting dismounted, made a determined stand against the renewed Villa attack, and at last reports were holding their ground.

The bodies of eighteen of the bandits, including Pablo Lopez, second in command, had been gathered and burned before noon and troops reported an undetermined number of dead still lying in the brush. Led to the attack under the slogan, "Death to the Americans!" Villa's followers fought with desperation. Just before dawn they crept along ditches skirting the United States cavalry camp and rushed the sleeping town, firing heavily.

The first volley brought American troopers into almost instant action. While a portion of the raiders engaged the cavalrymen, others began applying the torch and shooting American civilians who ventured from the buildings. Lights in homes and public buildings immediately became targets for snipers posted at Villa's direction. Other bandits, creeping close to American homes, enticed a number of civilians into the open with English-spoken invitations. A number of fatalities are attributed to this ruse.

Stores and the post office were looted, oil was poured upon frame structures and the match applied by still other bandits.

Many civilians barricaded themselves in their homes and fired at the Mexicans as they darted through the streets. The firing in the town ended almost as suddenly as it began. Less than two hours after the first shot was heard Villa's buglers sounded the retreat and the raiders began a disordered flight, closely followed by American troopers.

AMERICAN WOMAN FREED.

Mrs. Maud Hawl Wright, an American woman, held captive by Villa for nine days, was liberated in the midst of yesterday's fighting. She declares that Villa announced on March 1 his intention of attacking Columbus.

His men, with scant supplies of water and meat, suffered severely, she said, but Villa ruled them by fear, and his officers with the flats of their swords beat the soldiers into animation sufficient to reach Boca Grande, where they appeared for the raid.

Wednesday, Mrs. Wright related, Villa bandits attacked the employees of the Palomas Cattle Company ranch and killed four Americans.

Mrs. Wright said her husband, Edward John Wright, formerly of Houston, Texas, and Frank Hayden, a youth, were taken from the Wright ranch March 1 and presumably killed. When she was taken prisoner and forced to ride away with a detachment of Villa's men under Col. Nicholas Servantes, she said, a bandit gave her baby to a Mexican family.

Just before she and her husband were taken prisoners with the Hayden boy, Mrs. Wright said, the Villa men told her they had raided Colonia Juarez, an American Mormon settlement west of Pearson, looted all the stores and had killed some of the foreigners.

GUARD ARIZONA BORDER.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., March 10—With United States troopers stationed along the border east of here entrenched for the purpose of repelling a possible night attack by Mexican bandits, and other infantrymen entraining to move eastward for guard duty along the New Mexico border, the situation assumed a war-like aspect late yesterday.

A volunteer automobile company was formed by citizens here yesterday and a large number of machines were placed at the disposal of army officers for use in transporting soldiers to any point if they desired.

By turning the shade on a new electric light fixture four degrees of illumination can be obtained or it can be extinguished.

J. H. EASTWOOD, Lieut.
Assistant Adjutant for Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

Mrs. Wm. Kenneally, 209 Thomas street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Corp. Kenneally, of the Canadian Field Artillery, who recently went overseas:

Somewhere on the Ocean.
Friday, 11 a.m., Feb. 11.

Dear Mother,—Here we are on the vast ocean with nothing in sight but rolling waves. We left St. John Harbour at 11.25 p.m. Saturday night. We stole out in the silent night in a drizzling snow storm. I stayed on deck until they let off the pilot and then went below to bed next morning Sunday), when I came up we were out of sight of land, and we haven't seen anything that looks like it since. The voyage so far has been uneventful. We have passed quite a number of ships, one every day, and some days two or three. Sunday we passed a fishing smack with a dozen or more small boats out. Monday I was sea sick. I wasn't real bad. I managed to eat my supper Tuesday night, and have been fine ever since. I can't say I enjoy a sea voyage very much. In fact I enjoyed the trip from Toronto to St. John far more than I have since. After you are at sea a couple of days the novelty wears off and then you can't get to land too quick. Every morning you get up you go on deck and see the same thing—nothing but water. To all appearance you haven't moved an inch.

There are Marconigrams issued every day giving us the latest news of the world. We get all the war news over the wireless. One man died Tuesday night and they held a burial at sea yesterday. The man was struck over the head by a policeman in Toronto. His skull was fractured, but we did not know it until after we had sailed. The doctors operated on him but couldn't save his life.

The ship we are on is the "Metagama," a C.P.R. liner, the latest boat built, and supposed to be the most modern. However, it is by no means the largest. There are 1,600 troops on board including all the artillery from Kingston.

There are quite a number of Peterborough men on board with the 93rd Battery. I ran into Mel Kidd, Phil. Patrick, Jimmie O'Shea and Harold Knapman on the boat, and I guess there are quite a few others on that I haven't seen yet.

A large and interesting meeting of the Soldiers' Club was held last evening in the Recreation Rooms at the Armouries. It partook of a religious nature, and the instructions given by the Chaplain of the Battalion promoted a fruitful discussion, which evinced a great interest by those present. Miss Dorothy Allan sang two religious solos to the delight of all, and a most enjoyable and profitable evening was spent.

At the close of the meeting new officers were chosen for the immediate future as follows:

Patron—Lt.-Col. Johnston.
Hon. Pres.—Major Davidson.
Pres.—Drum-Sergt. J. Miller (re-elected).
Vice-Pres.—Corp. J. Haw.
Secretary—Corp. Vollans.
Executive Committee — Corp. H. Wood, Corp. Giles, Pte. Parker, Pte. Dunk, Pte. Scanlon, Pte. Camm.

The new executive met immediately after the meeting, and arranged programmes for next Monday and Thursday meetings.

The scope of the society has been enlarged and new blood introduced, and it is expected there will be a corresponding increase in interest shown in the club.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results From An Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydro-chloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest we belch up gas we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

UNION WITH JAMAICA?

KINGSTON, Jamaica, March 10—The heads of the Royal Bank of Canada and of the Bank of Nova Scotia are in Kingston. They say their mission is one of combined business and pleasure. The nature of the business is kept a secret.

A movement is starting here looking toward a confederation between Jamaica and Canada. The plan is said to have strong backing in Canada.

Freight rates between Jamaica and New York have just been raised 25 per cent. Shortage of tonnage is seriously handicapping the export and import trade of the colony.

Strong Line-ups for To-night's Soldier Game

109th Battalion of Lindsay Will Clash With 93rd at Brock Street Rink To-night---Ice in Good Shape and Two Khaki Teams Should Play Fast Hockey.

The 109th Battalion team of Lindsay, which meets the 93rd Battalion at Brock Street Rink to-night, is a sturdy, clever team, which would have made a good showing in the O. H. A. this season. The 109th won the Hughes' Cup, emblematic of the championship of Victoria and Haliburton, and has a number of well-known O.H.A. men in its line-up including Sandercock, Captain of last year's Lindsay's Juniors, and Mills, the centre of this year's Juniors. The 93rd will have their strongest available line-up and the game should be one of the best of the season.

AURA LEES WIN THE FIRST JUNIOR FINAL

BERLIN, March 9.—Berlin Union Jacks, weakened by the absence of Schnarr, one of their star players, who was unable to return from Montreal, where he is on military business, lost to Aura Lee by the score of 4 to 2 in the first of the home-and-home games for the junior O.H.A. championship here to-night.

Schnarr was replaced by Herb Schell, a City League player, who put up a good game for his first league match. He checked steadily and played more of a defensive game than Schnarr who is a live wire man every minute of the game.

The Aura Lees had it over the Jacks in team work, and followed up well. The locals, on the other hand, lost many chances by letting one man do it alone. Gouinlock was the star of the Toronto boys, and played a hard, steady game He had to be to have anything on Shirk, who is noted for sticking with his man and checking him hard. Little rushed well and his playing worked in well with the three-man rushes of the visitors. Wilkinson in goal created an impression on Berlin fans, used as they are to high-class net tending, by his easy style of turning away the fast ones.

Master put up his best game of the season to-night. Brown, who is noted for his speed was right there, but had nothing at all on his side kick, who checked persistently when it counted most and helped to advance the puck outside the danger zone. Krug and Erb, on the wings, got away with lots of speed, but never together. Erb did some shooting that would have counted on ordinary occasions, but Wilkinson turned them aside.

For the first nineteen minutes there was not much choice between the teams, if anything, the locals had the better of the play, Brown repeatedly getting the puck away up and the forwards seeing that it stayed there. Little's lone tally of the period did not show any exceptional skill, it going in off Childs' skate in a mix-up beside the net.

Aura Lee ended the session with their goaler on the bench. Wilkinson taking a minute's rest for hugging Shirk when the latter carried the puck right into him. He was still on the bench when the puck was faced but the Jacks were unable to take advantage as the defence proved a stone wall. Gouinlock only took two minutes to find his stride, carrying the rubber clean through and notching a well earned counter.

Schell got Berlin's first sight minutes later on a rebound from Shirk's hard try. There was not much choice between the teams at this stage, though the Lees had the combination throughout.

The Jacks opened the last period with heavy artillery, but could not budget the defence. Sheldon went it alone and took a try from left ice for the opener. Gouinlock followed on a clever shot from the corner with only two minutes to play and the game was won. The locals were not through till the last, however, and rushed back with a hard bombardment in which Krug slid the rubber through a forest of sticks and skates.

The game was fast and clean, the good feeling between the teams being well shown by Wilkinson's act in lending a good stick to Childs when the latter smashed the only one he had in the rink. After the game the boys shook hands all round and gave each other three royal cheers. The teams:—

Referee—Lou Marsh.

Good and Bad Points.

A man entered a famous restaurant and asked for coffee. After he had finished his repast he called the waiter and said: "Waiter, this coffee has its good points and its bad points. One of its good points is this—it has no chicory in it." "Yes, sir," replied the waiter, quite gratified. Visions of a handsome tip floated before his mind's eye, and he rubbed his hands gleefully. "But," resumed the customer, "its bad point is this—it has no coffee in it."—Argonaut.

Treat Ulcers With Sugar.

Sugar as a dressing for ulcers is advocated by Dr. F. M. O'Brien of Bradford, England, in a letter to the London Lancet. He says he has used it in medium sized crystals for many years, having learned of it from an old woman who was treating an ulcer on her own leg in this manner, and has found it most effective. The New York Medical Journal says that Dr. Magnus of Marburg, Germany, also uses sugar and has found it invaluable as a dressing in all save tuberculous lesions.

Clever Chap.

When I had a caller one day my little son came into the room with his cap on. I said, "Why, John, don't you know you should take your cap off when you come into the house?"

Quickly taking it off, he said, "Oh yes, I know that I left it on so I could lift it to the lady."

FINALS IN THE NICE-SKIP'S BONSPIEL

Monday and Tuesday Nights Will See a Skirmish Between the Grits and Tories

The vice-Skips' bonspiel which opened on the first of March was brought to a close last night when L. Bowe's rink lined up against that of P. D. Fitzgerald, with the following score:

J. H. Connal	T. Brightman
A. McNab	C. B. Brown
J. Allison	W. B. Warne
P. D. Fitzgerald	L. Bowes
Skip 5	Skip 21

Three rinks were ready to proceed to Keene this morning, but before embarking a telephone message was received not to go, as the storm had prevented several of their players getting to the village.

Grits Vs. Tories.

On Monday and Tuesday nights, weather permitting, games will be played between the Grits and Tories as follows:

Monday Night.

Ice.	Grits		Tories
1.	Connal	vs.	Foote
2.	Davidson		Giroux
3.	Harstone		Dela Fosse
4.	Lang		Waddell
5.	Brightman		Neill
6.	Morrow		Matthews
7.	Sturgeon		Hamilton

Tuesday Night.

Ice.	Grits		Tories
1.	Wightman	vs.	Campbell
2.	Ferguson, W.G.		Stubbs
3.	Martin		Best
4.	McDermid		Kay
4.	Moore		Green
6.	Kenner		Denham
7.	Hicks		Ferguson, J. H.

Skips are allowed to select their own rinks, but are asked to play members in the same position as noted in the schedule.

The skips for Tuesday are asked not to play any person who played on Monday if they can avoid it. This is asked so as to give all the members a chance to take part in the games.

Some of the local fans are wondering if the above groups are listed according to the last election.

The rink closed last year on the 19th of March, while six years ago there was curling on the 19th of April.

A MEMORY OF RACHEL.

The Great Actress After a Night of Triumph on the Stage.

Lord Glenesk gave me an account of his first meeting with Rachel. He had gone to Paris for the first time as a youth, and for the first time his father had taken him to the Francais to see Rachel act. The entire audience had been stirred to the wildest pitch of enthusiasm and excitement. The next morning early he had ridden to the Bois with his father, and on the way his father had said, "We will turn out of the avenue a moment, down this street; I want to show you the house of the marvelous woman we saw act last night."

It was barely sunrise, and as they pulled their horses up outside a high wall inclosing a small villa they were astonished to hear, proceeding from within, what appeared to be the reacting of the very scenes they had witnessed the night before at the theater, but spoken in dead tones, as if by a somnambulist. Dismounting from their horses, they entered the garden. There they found Rachel, clad in loose garments, dull eyed, with disheveled hair and wan face, utterly void of all the flaming magnetism that a few hours earlier had filled her frame.

To the questions of Lord Glenesk's father she answered wearily that she had been rehearsing there under the trees since it was scarce day, trying in vain to find means of expressing certain passages in which she had "failed at the night's performance"—that performance which had so thrilled those who witnessed it, marking an epoch in their lives.—Princess Lazarovich in Century.

The Daughter's Idea.

Mrs. Brown was in the habit of introducing her big daughter as: "This is Jane. She's only fifteen. You'd never think it, would you?"

At last the girl protested. "It's mean of you to tell everybody how young I am. I could have a lot better time if you didn't."

"Perhaps you could. But I don't propose to have people saying after you've been out in society a couple of seasons: 'Don't tell me Jane Brown is only twenty. Why, she was a grown girl years ago.'"

"Just the same," retorted the daughter, "you wouldn't like it if I introduced you to my friends as: 'This is my mother. She's only forty-eight. You'd never think it, would you?'"

Shooting Humming Birds.

To shoot a humming bird with the smallest birdshot made is out of the question, for the tiniest seeds of lead would destroy the delicate plumage. The only way in which the bird can be captured for commercial purposes is to shoot it with a drop of water from a blowgun or a fine jet from a small syringe. Skillfully directed, the water stuns him. He falls into a silken net and before he recovers consciousness is suspended over a cyanide jar. This must be done quickly, for if he comes to his senses before the cyanide whiff snuffs out his life he is sure to ruin his plumage in his struggles to escape. Humming birds vary in size from specimens perhaps half as large as a sparrow to those scarcely bigger than a bee.

Belgians Sent To Prison By Ruthless Germans

AMSTERDAM (via London, March 8.—The Echo Belge says that so many Belgians have recently been sentenced to terms of imprisonment with hard labor, many for life, by German courts martial at Antwerp, Ghent, Liege and Namur, that, while it declares the list too long for publication, even a partial list of 40 names must make a serious impression on all persons interested in the fate of Belgium, as it includes many women and prominent persons. In the list given is the name of Count Pierre De Lieder-kerke, member of one of the leading families of Belgium, closely associated with the royal house.

HUSBAND WAS TOO KIND.

Wife Tells Cincinnati Court She Preferred Bullying.

Cincinnati, March 10.—A seventeen-year-old wife astonished officials of the Hamilton County Domestic Relations Court by saying that she had left her husband because he was too kind to her.

The young wife had been called into court to explain her departure from home.

"He is too nice," she told Miss Edna McChristy, the court's "woman judge." "I know he is a model husband. He has no bad habits and always is home at nights. He treats me just beautifully, just smiles and kisses me when I say anything mean. I can't stand it. If he would bully or abuse me I would like him better."

Miss McChristy advised the husband to bully his wife for a while and all the trouble would end.

American issues showed greater strength than at the opening.

In later trading Mexican issues again dropped back and Southern Pacific which held soldidly through the early hours and fell off slightly. War industrials turned and took an upward trend. CHARGES AGAINST TRAINMEN ARE BEING HEARD

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, March 10. — The preliminary hearing of the charges of conspiracy to defraud the C.P.R. brought against seven conductors and three Ottawa men began in the Police Court at Ottawa yesterday and was continued this morning. The men accused are Silas Alexander, Mark Baker, Thomas Carter, Harry Dunham, Chas. A. Morrison, Francis Nelson and Robert J. Willoughby, conductors, and Clarence Borts, Harry Merson and Abraham Pince. The prosecution is seeking to prove that there is a conspiracy between Harry Merson and some of his friends with a number of conductors running out of Ottawa, whereby the conductors would not turn in to the company all the tickets collected from passengers, but would instead sell some of them to Merson, who would re-sell the tickets. Sam. Rochel, of Montreal, a C.P.R. detective, resumed his evidence this morning

CRUISERS BOMBARD BLACK SEA CITY OF TREBIZOND

Growing Disposition on Part of the Turks to Surrender Without Fighting

PETROGRAD, March 10.—The activity of Russian torpedo-boats in the Black Sea against coast towns east of Trebizond is continuing with success According to recent despatches from Sebastopol the Turkish coast defences are crumbling up before the intensity of the Russian bombardment

There is apparently a growing feeling on the part of the Turks along the Anatolian shore to surrender with out fighting. In many cases, according to reports received here, the Turkish population have sent out emissaries in boats to the Russian fleet, offering submission to Russia. Russian cruisers continue to bombard Trebizond.

Rumours of Turkey's willingness to enter into peace negotiations with Russia are increasingly current here, but there is no official confirmation that Turkey has up to the present made actual overtures to the Russian Government.

Riza Being Taken by the Russians.

Russian troops have captured the town of Riza (Risheh), on the Black Sea, 35 miles east of Trebizond. This announcement is made in the official statement issued from General Headquarters, which adds that the Russians have occupied the town of Sehna, north of Kermanshah, in Persia.

LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED.

BELLEVILLE, March 10.—John Arie a well-known lineman in the employ of the Trenton Electric & Motor Company, was electrocuted yesterday afternoon. He was on an electric light pole when a pilot engine passed by. It is thought that smoke obscured the wires. He came in contact with a wire carrying about 2,200 volts and his body was hurled to the ground. To all appearances life was extinct and efforts at resuscitation with a pulmotor were of no avail. He leaves a family, and was about sixty years of age. He was considered a very careful workman.

The German Casualties in February Numbered 35,000

FIGHTING IS VERY INTENSE AROUND THE RIVER MEUSE

Germans Are Wasting Lives Recklessly in An Attempt to Reach Forges-Cumieres Road

Crown Prince's Sudden Thrust Into the Carbeaux Woods, Northwest of Verdun, Has Imperilled French Positions on a Five Mile Front West of the Meuse.

LONDON, March 11.—The Crown Prince's sudden thrust into the Carbeaux woods, northwest of Verdun, has imperilled French positions on a five-mile front west of the Meuse, according to despatches received here to-day.

The Germans are wasting lives recklessly in an attempt to press forward a mile to the Forges-Cumieres road. Their success would force the French to evacuate the strongly fortified Goose Hill position and compel the surrender of Bethincourt village, five miles west of the Meuse.

The latest official despatches from Paris admit the German gain, but the French are counter-attacking heavily in an attempt to drive out the invaders. The Germans are under terrific cross fire from Dead Man's Hill to the west and Goose Hill, to the east. This deadly artillery fire earlier in the week forced the Germans to relinquish the forest after they had suffered a loss estimated at 5,000.

East of the Meuse the battle around Douaumont, the village of Vaux and Fort De Vaux, grew more intense yesterday afternoon. Berlin and Paris advices are still contradictory on the situation at Vaux village and the fort, though the German War Office admitted a French counter-attack drove the Germans from part of the fort.

British Aeroplanes Make Destructive Raid on Enemy Positions

PARIS, March 11.—Total German casualties for February were thirty-five thousand, making a total to date of two million six hundred thousand in addition to recent losses around Verdun, estimated at two hundred thousand men.

PARIS, March 11.—Intense fighting is continuing around the River Meuse. Germans have made no headway recently.

LONDON, March 11.—British aeroplanes made a very destructive raid on German positions and railway stations near Lille.

PARIS, March 11.—President of France has conferred the cross of the Legion of Honour on Captain G. T. Sutherland, of Kingston.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Seven thousand five hundred United States troops are now chasing Villa.

TORONTO, March 11.—McCutcheon Brothers are out on bail till Tuesday when they answer five other indictments.

HAVELOCK HAS AN EPIDEMIC

One Death Has Already Resulted From Measles—Parents Neglect to Report Cases

HAVELOCK, March 10.—An epidemic of measles has apparently broken out in town, and only strict measures of quarantine will remedy this serious situation. The Medical Health Officer wishes to direct attention to the urgent necessity of reporting all cases under suspicion, in order that the lives of little ones be not endangered. Parents are too apt to make light of an attack of measles, but is an incontrovertible fact that more children die from this disease than all other communicable diseases considered far more deadly. Apparently the disease is spreading in Havelock, owing to the fact that certain parents do not call in a physician when their children are attacked by it, and the little ones come and go among other children unhindered One death has already resulted in Havelock due to this disease and that fact should be sufficient warning to all to observe every precaution.

ROMANCE BRINGS DOUBLE KILLING

MATAGORDA, Texas, March 10.—A newspaper advertisement that caused Ludvicka Ginetis, sixteen years old, to become the bride of Sebastian C. Braganza de la Coralia, seventy-four years old, said to be a Spanish count and owner of a large ranch near here, could not bridge the difference between the Greek and Roman Catholic churches, and as a result the girl bride's father, P. Ginetis, shot and killed her mother at the ranch yesterday and then ended his own life.

Several months ago, when the Ginetis family lived in Chicago, the father advertised that Ludvicka wished "a good wealthy husband of high education" and that she could be seen at Grace street and Sheridan road, "wearing a white and black ribbon."

The girl was compelled to be at that corner day after day, standing the jeers of the crowd, until the aged Spaniard came along and claimed her. After their marriage they and the girl's parents came to Texas and lived at the ranch.

The girl wife is a Greek Catholic. Her husband is a Roman Catholic. Her mother upbraided her father for interference in religious matters, and in a quarrel he killed her and then shot himself.

Calis Victory Over Drink A Great Victory

LONDON, March 11.—Replying to a deputation of the Temperance Council of Christian Churches, Mr. David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, said that the police records showed a reduction of something like forty per cent. in drunkenness throughout the country. He hoped the nation would be convinced that success in war largely depended upon removing the drag upon its efficiency caused by drink.

However successful in war the country might be, he added, he was convinced that victory in this matter would be the greatest triumph of all.

"During last week," said Mr. Lloyd George, "I have found it my painful duty to become the greatest spirit distiller in the world. I have taken over the whole of the patent still distilleries in the kingdom and as many pot still distilleries as I can make use of. So you will find that there will be very few distilleries during the period of the war available for distilling spirits.

"I am doing my best to provide whiskey for the Germans, and if the whiskey pellets which I am distilling do half as much harm to the Germans as the alcohol would have done to the people of this country I will be satisfied.

"To what extent I am going to draw on the store of whiskey of the country depends largely on the experiments we are now making in the laboratories."

Russian Troops Reported To Be Landing On The Black Sea Coast

The German consul is leaving.

OTTAWA, March 11.—Canadian casualties to date number fourteen thousand, of which two thousand were killed, and nine thousand wounded.

Great Slaughter of American Colonists the Object of Villa

EL PASO, Texas, March 11.—While American troops were expecting to cross into Mexico in half a dozen places before night to avenge the Columbus and Santa Ysabel massacres, [illegible] country feared a renewed slaughter of Americans to-day.

The greatest slaughter of American colonists in Mexico's history was reported to be the object of Francisco Villa's race to-ward a train of Mormons due this afternoon at Guaman, Mexico, a small town about fifty miles southwest of here.

Villa, who publicly announced he would annihilate the entire trainload of Mormons if he intercepted them, was last reported at La Ascension, thirty-six miles west of Guaman.

GIRLS' KISS FOR RECRUITS

Gen. Hughes Says Montreal Young Ladies Could Boost Enlistments.

MONTREAL, March 11.—Repetition of the method by which Lady Gordon raised the Gordon Highlanders in Scotland in the old days—by giving a kiss to every recruit—advocated by Major-General Hughes, Minister of Militia, at the Board of Trade meeting yesterday to consider ways and means of increasing Montreal's contribution to the Canadian army, is being considered by women's organizations here.

General Hughes contended Lady Gordon's plan might be effective here. He was satisfied that if the young ladies were up and doing they could get thousands of names of eligible recruits and find out why they had not joined the colours.

STOUT-HEARTED STRIVING.

One real estate man in Toronto has been earning commissions during the past few months at an average rate of $1,000 a month. He has no partner, and no stenographer; which means that outside of $30 a month rent, stationery and a few postage stamps, his earnings are "velvet." Among the hundreds of real estate men in Toronto, great and small, he alone, it has been said, is prospering.

When the war broke out and for six months afterwards, this man did not earn enough to pay office rent, but unlike many of his brethren, he never relaxed his energies and never threw overboard his enthusiasm and confidence. The majority of the others in his line of business took the blow of the war "lying down."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"Dr. Garnier has set the broken arm and bandaged the sprain. He gave Mrs. Carmac a stiff dose of bromide, and she is asleep. She will recover, if her nervous system withstands the shock."

"It was an extraordinary misfortune that the owner of the yacht should be the one to have his head battered in. His wife realizes now that he is dead, I suppose?"

"Yes, she knows."

They crossed the square together. To reach the Rue Mathias they had to go round by the bridge and return by the right bank of the Aven. The hour was not late, and many of the inhabitants were astir; but none gave heed to the unusual spectacle of a Breton girl and a young man walking in company, because both were recognised instantly, and in such matters the American and English residents were a law unto themselves. Had they been bred and born in the place, such a thing simply could not have happened.

Somehow Tollemache felt a restraint that night that was both novel and unpleasing. A barrier of some sort had been erected between Yvonne and himself. He cudgeled his wits to find words that would break down the obstacle, whatsoever it might be. "We've had a lively evening at Madame's thus far," he said. Rive and Nevez shared the honours in the gavotte; but everybody agreed that Pont Aven would have scored if you had been there."

"I couldn't have danced to-night, Lorry, on any account."

"I don't see why. Your father took a very sensible view. "Why shouldn't twenty hop because one has hooked it?' he said."

"Did he really say that?"

"Well, something to that effect."

"Poor old dad! He has had to sacrifice himself all his life."

"Don't you think you're making too much of the death of one man? Suppose we hadn't taken Peridot with us? We couldn't possibly have approached the reef, and twelve people would have gone under."

"Ten were strangers, and one cannot grieve for all the people who die around us. But father knew Mr. and Mrs. Carmac years ago. Didn't he tell you that?"

"Yes."

"Then you may be sure he is greatly upset. Now, Lorry, if there is any talk of dancing when I appear, help my excuse by saying that I ought to rest. In one sense I'm not really tired; in another I could fling myself down in a dark corner and weep my eyes out."

"Your eyes are too pretty to spoil in that way," said Tollemache. "I'll give Mere Pitou the tip, and she'll fix things, I have no doubt."

But Yvonne was not pressed to dance. She was so pale, the eyes that Tollemache deemed too attractive that they should be marred by weeping were so dilated and luminous with unshed tears, that these big-hearted Breton sympathized with her, and she was soon permitted to escape to her own room.

Father and daughter exchanged few words. She supplied a brief account of the doctor's views of the injured, and he only said:

"Thus far things are progressing well. To-morrow morning I'm going to Forbes's place, at Concarneau, for a few days. Tollemache and you can help Mr. Raymond in his negotiations with the authorities. Mr. Carmac was an American by birth, if not by domicile; so it is probable that his relatives will wish the body to be embalmed and taken to the United States. I would advise Mr. Raymond to consult a notary, because French procedure differs essentially from American methods. I've told Lorry about our altered plans. Perhaps we three can take a combined trip to Paris after Christmas. Good-night, Sweetheart. Sleep well, and don't meet to-morrow's cares halfway."

Tollemache heard all that passed. Why, he knew not, but he found himself regretting that they were not leaving Pont Aven by the first train in accord with Ingersoll's original intent. He was more than ever conscious of that invisible wall which was now casting its shadow on their cheery intimacy. Yvonne would never again be a demure Breton maid or straight-legged, long-haired schoolgirl. She had become a woman in an hour. Life had flung wide its portals, and the prospect thus unfolded had saddened her inexpressibly.

What sinister influence had brought about this change? Could there be any actual foundation for Peridot's vaporings? As he walked back to the hotel through darkened streets he recalled certain vague rumours that had reached his ears in early days. Ingersoll had always posed as a widower; but someone had said that his married life was rather mysterious, since there was no record of his wife's death or place of interment. It would indeed be passing strange if the wreck of the Stella had brought to Pont Aven the woman who was at once Yvonne's mother and the wife of a complete stranger.

Tollemache buttoned the deep collar of an overcoat round his ears as he crossed the river, because the wind was still bitingly cold. He caught a glimpse of Mere Pitou's cottage on the opposite bank of the Aven. There was a light in Yvonne's bedroom. Frankly in love, he threw her a kiss with his fingers.

The action did him, in his own phrase, "a heap of good." After all, such displays of emotion come naturally in France.

"I don't give a red cent who her mother was, or is, or what she has been, or turns out to be," he communed. It's Yvonne I want. If Yvonne marries me some day, I'll be the happiest man who ever lived, and the most miserable if she doesn't. So there you are, Lorry, my boy! You must make the best of it, whichever way the flag falls."

Memories of peaceful and contented years flitted through Ingersoll's mind while the setam tram lumbered next morning through tiny fields and across rambling lanes to the quay of Concarneau. Other memories, vivid and piercing, came of the period of love and dreams in Paris. Lithe and graceful and divinely beautiful as her daughter was now, Stella Fordyce had been then. An artist to her fingertips she came to the studio where Ingersoll was working, turning readily to the palette after some slight defect in the vocal cords had put difficulties in the way of an operatic career.

It seemed to be a genuine instance of love at first sight, and they were married within three months of what was practically their first meeting; though Ingersoll had seen her as a girl of fourteen several years earlier. This step was not so foolish as it might have been in the case of two young people without means. Ingersoll had an income of three thousand dollars a year, and complete devotion to art in his student days had enabled him to save a small capital, which he spent on an establishment, and particularly on adorning an exceptionally handsome and attractive wife.

It had been far better were they poverty-stricken. Mutual privations and combined effort to improve their lot would have bound them by insoluble ties. As it was the taste for pleasure and excitement crept into Stella Ingersoll's blood. The first tiff between the two was the outcome of some mild protest on Ingersoll's part when his wife wished to increase rather than diminish her personal expenditure after Yvonne's birth. There were tears, and of course the man yielded: only to raise the point again more detreminedly when an absurdly expensive dress was ordered for a ball at the opera.

Thenceforth the road to the precipice became ever smoother and steeper; though Ingersoll did not begin to suspect the crash that lay ahead until his wife left him and fled to her relatives in America. Her callous abandonment of the baby girl not yet a year old crushed to the dust the man who loved her. She told him plainly why she had gone. She was "sick to death" of petty economies. Indeed, her letter of farewell was brutally frank.

"I think I have qualities that equip me for a society that you and I together could never enter," she wrote. "Why, then, should I deny myself while I am young, so that I may console vain regrets with copybook maxims when I am old? I see clearly that I would only embitter your life and spoil your career. Be wise, and take time to reflect, and you will come to believe that I am really serving you well by seeking my own liberty. Meanwhile I shall do nothing to bring discredit on your name. I promise that, on my honour!"

Her honour! All his life John Ingersoll had hated cant, either in dogma or phrase, and this ill judged appeal stung him to the quick. He threw the letter into the fire, left Paris next day, and his wife's strenuous efforts to discover his whereabouts during the subsequent year failed completely.

Then he heard by chance that she had divorced him, and married Walter H. Carmac in her maiden name, and the tragic romance of his life closed with a sigh of relief, because, as he fancied, the curtain had fallen on its last act. He little dreamed that an epilogue would be staged nearly nineteen years later.

He was in such a state of mental distress that at Concarneau he sat a whole hour in a safe opposite the station, meaning to return to Pont Aven by the next train. But the man's natural clarity of reasoning came to his aid. He forced himself to think dispassionately. Two vital principles served as rallying points in that time of silent battle,—Yvonne must not be reft with crude violence from the grief-stricken and physically broken woman who claimed a daughter's sympathy, and he himself must avoid meeting this wife risen from the tomb. He had acted right, after all, in seeking refuge with his friend.

Yvonne that same morning found her mother sitting up in bed, siping a cup of chocolate. The nurse, a woman from the village, hailed the girl's presence gleefully.

"Will you be remaining a few minutes, Mademoiselle?" she inquired, seeing that invalid and visitor were on terms of intimacy.

"Yes, as long as you like, or will permit, Madame Bertrand," said Yvonne.

"That is well, then. I can go to my house for a little half-hour. There are only two instructions. Madame must remain quiet. If she shows any signs of fainting, send at once for Dr. Garnier."

"I shall be strict and watchful," smiled the girl, and the two were left alone.

Her mother's first question threatened to disobey at least one of the doctor's instructions. "Does your father know you have come here?" she asked, and her voice trembled with foreboding.

"Yes, Dear. Now if you excite yourself in that way, I shall be expelled by the doctor," for the graceful head collapsed to the pillow in sheer gratitude, and the chocolate was nearly spilled.

NEGLECTED COLDS
VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

Wonderful Plants.

There are many strange species in the vegetable world, and among some of the queerest may be mentioned what is called the telegraph plant. This plant hails from India, and each of its large leaves is composed of three portions.

During the day the largest one stretches out towards the sun, so as to catch the full warmth and brightness, but when night comes on the big leaf turns down, while each of the small petals works day and night, moving as it were independently.

They describe, in somewhat jerky movements, complete circles, thus deriving their name. Then there is the strange fishing plant, under the sea, which opens and shuts periodically, like a big mouth. When fishes are near enough to this wonderful plant, all of a sudden it closes its "mouth" and swallows them. In that wonderful land, South America, there is a terrible bush or plant which is like an octopus. An explorer not so very long ago was in the district where this plant grows. Suddenly he heard a howl of pain and terror from his dog. He rushed to the rescue and saw that the animal was firmly caught in the rope-like meshes and tentacles of a big plant, which were wrapped round its body. He had to cut the dog free, and when his hands came in contact with the fibrous meshes they became very blistered and red.

Would Wake Up
With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHAT THE GREEN BOX CONTAINED

The Explanation That Came Out With Its Contents.

By INA WRIGHT HANSON.

This is the letter that I wrote:

Dear Mrs. Hynes—After you had left my brother's office I went to the corner table, over which hangs a mirror, to get my hat. Near the hat I found a nickel, which was not there when I laid my hat down. Therefore I conclude it is your property and am inclosing its equivalent in stamps. Yours most faithfully,

WILLIAM BEATTY.

This is the letter that she wrote:

Dear Mr. Beatty—The nickel, as you surmised, belonged to me, and I thank you for your thoughtfulness. But as its loss was the result of my own carelessness I feel that no more than 2 cents is my due, and I return herewith one stamp. Again thanking you, I am yours sincerely,

L. M. HYNES.

I had several times from my studio observed Mrs. Hynes enter my brother's law office. The rather sad brown eyes, shining rolls of dark hair and unusual grace of carriage attracted me. So, on the morning of the letters, I happened to be in the office when she came. I was presented and allowed to remain.

Back in my studio again, I was in possession of these facts concerning her: Left penniless by an invalid husband, Mrs. Hynes was about to seek some employment when her only relative, an uncle, died. There seemed to be no will, so she had come here from a distant town to reside in her uncle's handsome home and enjoy his ample fortune. Then she had discovered the will, which gave everything to one Harry Armstrong, whose father had been a friend of the deceased. She had laid the matter before my brother, bidding him search for Armstrong. My brother censured her for her exaggerated sense of honor, but to me there was something splendid about it. Then followed the answer to my letter, which showed that under her serious demeanor there ran a vein of fun.

Soon came a happy evening, when I was invited to call upon her with my brother, who had something to report concerning the unknown heir.

We found Mrs. Hynes looking rather frail in a delicate green gown—frail, but charming. I had been wondering what her name was, and I did not like to ask Jim.

"Her name is Lillian," I thought. "Was ever name so fitting?"

Then as she and my brother discussed their business affairs I took in the surroundings. We were in the library, furnished in green, with daring dashes of crimson. The mantel pleased me especially. It held but two articles—a vase of autumn leaves and a small green box. The latter seemed familiar to me somehow. As we were bidding her good night after a very pleasant evening I observed the box more closely. It bore a padlock about as big as the width of my knife blade.

"You would like to see the contents?" queried Mrs. Hynes. "Some time, perhaps. But if you would see them aright your eyes must be anointed with the salve of fancy."

There were other evenings after that when I visited Mrs. Hynes alone, and each time I went away determined that at the next visit I would disclose to her the state of my feelings. Each time I was deterred by circumstances. As with a breath my heritage had been blown away, and at something more than thirty I was beginning life anew. I was prospering, but should no Harry Armstrong turn up Mrs. Hynes was a rich woman. On the other hand, if Armstrong did appear and took her wealth away from her her proud nature would refuse my advances, thinking that I tendered them through sympathy; consequently I was not entirely happy.

One evening as I waited in her library, turning the matter over again in my mind and gazing at the green box, I suddenly discovered of what it reminded me, and at the same time I knew whom Mrs. Hynes herself was like.

"I've found out about the green box," I observed when she was seated near me.

Into her face flashed a startled expression. "You opened it!" she exclaimed.

I looked at her reproachfully. "Do you think I am without honor?" I asked. "Besides, I had no key."

There was a strange note in her soft laughter.

"When I was a boy," I began, "I went to school at Glenbrook, where my parents lived, not many miles from here. We moved away from the place when I was fourteen and my chosen playmate, Ludema Sears, was twelve. Your eyes are exactly as I remember hers to have been, except yours look the experiences of a none too happy maturity. She had the palest yellow hair I ever saw. One day she brought to school a little green box. This one looks like it, though if we had the other one to compare with this there would possibly be quite a difference. Well, she opened her box when the teacher's back was turned, and I saw inside two small but very red apples. Of course I supposed one was for me, but at recess she gave it to Willie Henderson. I feel quite angry and reckless now when I think of it."

The firelight was bringing a most becoming flush to Mrs. Hynes' rather pale cheeks.

"And what happened then?" she asked softly.

"Willie Henderson got licked, and the teacher settled with me quite abundantly later," I added.

"What became of Ludema?"

"She has been dead a good many years."

"Shall we try that new duet now?" she asked, springing up. "Do you know, I'm glad you licked Willie Henderson."

Next day was Sunday, and over a very late breakfast my brother imparted to me some news which sent me into the street, walking rapidly, but with no thought of my destination till I came to the power house. A car was just pulling out for Glenbrook, and a whim possessed me to get aboard and visit the scenes of my schooldays. I must get through an interminably long day somehow till I could see Mrs. Hynes again.

I sauntered through the once familiar streets till I came to the grove of pines where I had enticed Willie Henderson and drubbed him. I was smiling at the recollection when I noticed that some one was in the grove. As I hesitated the figure turned, and I saw Mrs. Hynes.

"Why, Lillian!" I exclaimed, hastening forward. "How came you here?"

Over the whiteness of her face rolled a wave of cardinal; from the brown depths of her lovely eyes looked the sweetest expression I had ever seen there; then she clasped her little hands nervously.

"I am keeping tryst with a ghost," she said. "How dare you, a mortal, interrupt?"

"Grant me pardon," I begged, bowing low before her. "I bring news from the world."

Her manner changed. She was a practical woman again, with a possible poverty staring her in the face. Her lips lost color, but she said steadily:

"Harry Armstrong is found."

"Found—and a gentleman. You are neither a rich woman nor a poor one. He will take but half, and he is handsome, and he wants to meet you."

As I repeated my brother's words she burst into passionate sobbing, but in a moment had controlled herself and was smiling at me.

"You didn't suppose I was such a baby, did you?" she asked. "But you have no idea what a relief it is to know that—Harry Armstrong is a gentleman."

"Lillian," I said, sitting down by her, "will you marry me?"

I thought at first she was going to cry again, but instead she laughed and took from the cover of her cloak the green box. She fitted the key to the absurd little lock and took out the first article.

"What do you see?" she asked.

"A bead ring," I answered.

"A hoop of diamonds," she corrected. "Your eyes have not been anointed. And this?"

"A faded flower," I ventured.

"An Eden rose."

Then without comment she took out a red fringed Christmas card, a diminutive valentine and two candy mottoes.

"And what manner thou this?" she added, holding up the last article.

I say I should have forgotten the others and remembered this wooden heart marked with purple ink, "To my love" I know not, but instantly I recognized it as the heart I had given to little Ludema Sears. Then I looked into the brown loveliness of this smiling woman's eyes—and understood.

"I thought 'L' was for Lillian. I never thought of Ludema," were my first words.

"And you didn't die after all?" was my next brilliancy.

"Ludema's hair was the palest yellow I ever saw," I was beginning, when she spared me further foolish speech.

"I've always thought it a pity that my hair grew dark," she said. "Had it escaped your inconstant memory that you promised to meet me here when you were twenty-one and marry me?" she asked serenely.

"I remember—now," I answered meekly. "Did you keep the appointment?"

It was her turn to blush, while I laughed comfortably.

"So we're even on that score. But there is still the affair of the red apple."

"Perhaps we had better call it square," she suggested. Then impulsively she laid her head on my shoulder and whispered:

"Oh, Billie, dear!"

Can Life be Lengthened?

THIS is a problem that for centuries have engaged the attention of the world's greatest thinkers. Recent research and experience have conclusively proved that Total Abstainers Live Longer than non-abstainers. The reason for this, and the consequent reduction in rates of insurance extended to applicants of this class by that old-established Company, THE MANUFACTURERS LIFE, is well explained in an attractive little booklet issued and entitled "Total Abstainers vs. Moderate Drinkers." This may be had on application. A Famous Pie.

Of all the pastry ever cooked none has attained the magnitude of the pie ordered by Frederick the Great for a feast given in honor of 30,000 soldiers at the end of a campaign. The pie was brought to the table in the most dramatic manner. Toward the conclusion of the meal a strange vehicle drawn by eight horses drove into the camp grounds. The load seemed heavy, and every one was consumed with curiosity to know the nature of his majesty's "surprise." The pie, which completely filled the vehicle, contained a ton of flour, 5,000 eggs and 900 quarts of milk. It was cooked in an oven built for the purpose in the woods. After the soldiers had partaken of the pie enough was left over to give a portion to every one in the village near which the army had been quartered.—Harper's.

"Through Fire and Water."

A glance into the past is furnished by the words: "I would go through fire and water to serve you." The old trials by ordeal, once the custom in England, are here referred to, when the ordeals both by fire and water could be performed by deputy. Often this was the service of friendship, but just as often done for a certain sum. In the one ordeal the person passed through a place where red hot plowshares were set up at irregular intervals, the man or woman being blindfolded and barefooted. In the other the person, bound hand and foot, was thrown into the water; if he swam safely to dry land he was innocent. His death was proof of his guilt. The phrase, however, may have an indirect reference to the thought in Isaiah: "When thou passest through the water I will be with thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7617

The overblouse idea, which is so dominant in all the styles of women, is shown prettily adapted to children's uses in the frock herewith illustrated.

The dress has a plain blouse closing in the centre of the back and with a small turnover collar at the high neck. It also has full length sleeves, which are gathered and form a small puff above the band cuff at the wrist. Of course they may be shortened as much as desired and the pattern provides a cuff pattern for this arrangement.

Over this blouse is worn a small jacket, which also closes in the back. Its lower edge comes to the middle of the belt and may be given a plain or a scalloped finish.

The skirt has straight edges and is pleated all around, with plain panel in the centre of the front and the closing in the centre of the back.

In making dresses in this style the overblouse is sometimes the only bit of color and is of linen or silk, according to the balance of the material. Again overblouse and skirt are made to match, while white batiste is employed for the underblouse. Many combinations are possible, and it will require only a little thought to get something original in effect.

The dress pattern, No. 7,617, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires, as shown, 2⅛ yards of 36 inch striped material and ½ yard of 36 inch plain, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch lining.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. TURKS NEED SHIPS.

ROME, March 10.—Two of the most powerful of Austria's dreadnoughts are being prepared in a Dalmatian port, the Tribuna says, with the intention of repeating the exploit of the former German vessels Goben and Breslau and forcing the allies' blockade of the Adriatic, in order to reach the Dardanelles and bring assistance to Turkey in the Black Sea, as the situation of the latter is growing desperate owing to Russian naval supremacy in these waters. For this reason the Dardanelles have been swept up by the Turks and the Germans in order to clear a way for the Austrian battleships.

Some Reasons Why Every Farmer Should Have a Silo

By Fred. A. Read, Bear River, Annapolis Co., Nova Scotia

(By Fred A. Read, Bear River, Annapolis Co., Nova Scotia.)

The value of a crop preserved by a Silo is increased about forty per cent. over that of a crop harvested in the usual way.

Less room is required for the storage in a Silo of the product of an acre of land than in cured condition in a barn.

A much larger amount of digestible fod can be secured from an acre of silage corn than from an acre of hay.

The influence of well preserved silage on the digestion and general health of an animal is very beneficial.

The Silo enables us to preserve a larger quantity of the food materials of the original fodder for the feeding of farm animals than is possible by any other system of preservation now known.

Succulent food is nature's food.

Since smaller barns may be built when silage is fed, there is less danger of fire, thus decreasing the cost of insurance.

Inclemency of weather does not hinder its harvesting.

Silage enables us to keep more stock thereby increasing the fertility of the farm which will in turn give us larger crops and affords a chance for another increase in stock.

Ensilage is considered the most economical part of the ration of dairy cows and young stock. It will save about one-third or more of all feeds fed in winter.

A Silo prevents the losses that occur in curing.

Where hay-making is precluded as is sometimes the case with second crops, as Clover, Rowen, etc., on account of rainy weather late in the season, the Silo will preserve the crop, so that the farmer may derive full benefit from it in feeding it to his stock.

No danger of late summer droughts, as by using the Silo with Clover or other green summer crops, early in the season, a valuable succulent feed will be at hand, when pasture in most regions is apt to give out.

Crops unfit for hay-making may be preserved in the Silo and changed into a palatable food, such as thistles, weeds, etc.

The harvest can be removed earlier, making it possible to finish fall ploughing sooner and to seed the land down to grass or winter grain.

At a conservative estimate two cows can be kept by feeding silage at the cost of one cow from the same acreage, fed on hay or other roughage.

Convenience in feeding and economy of storage room as ten tons of silage can be stored in the same space as one ton of hay.

When fed with the proper rations, silage is a greater milk producer and fattener than any known feed.

Ensilage fed stock, as a rule, are in a healthier state than when other feeds are used.

When properly taken care of there is absolutely no waste of any part of the corn crop.

The acreage needed for pasture is greatly reduced and consequently more land can be brought under cultivation.

By providing a succulent forage winter dairying is made profitable and no reduction of stock is caused by a dry season.

It is the cheapest food that can be produced as well as the best.

It is a certain supply, notwithstanding the drought, the flood or the snows.

The Silo is the cheapest method of handling the crop, of storing it, and the best method of saving and realizing the fullest value of the crop as feed.

More stock can be kept on a certain area of land when silage is fed than is otherwise the case.

Silage feeding does away with all aggravating corn stalk in the manure and prevents their waste as well.

It excels dry feed for the cheap production of fat beef.

It keeps young stock thrifty and growing all winter and enables the cow to produce milk and butter more economically.

Its use lessens the labour required to care for a herd, if it is conveniently attached to the barn.

It allows the Spring pastures to get a start.

It enables preservation of food which matures at a rainy time of the year when drying would be almost impossible.

It does away with the system of strictly grain farming where few of the elements are returned to the soil.

It increases the digestive capacity of the animal.

The Silo supplements pastures and carries the burden of the winter feeding.

The Silo will greatly reduce the pasture acreage required and will have a marked effect on beef production on high priced lands.

Night pasturing has been found to be a very valuable practice in connection with summer silo.

A Silo permits of saving crops in years of great plenty for other seasons of less plentitude.

Experiments have proved that silage-fed steers have repeatedly made the heaviest and cheapest gains.

Silage saves a large proportion of grain needed in fattening animals. It saves the need of any grain while cattle are growing. Silage-fed cattle gain faster, finish more quickly, and the meat it better.

The silage system helps maintain soil fertility.

The palatability of silage for cattle and sheep is universally recognized by all farmers who have given this food a fair trial.

Cattle show great eagerness for silage.

Its succulent character makes it very comparable with grass or other green stuff.

The choicest of milk is produced by herds fed silage.

A Silo adds to the appearance of a farm.

By the use of a Silo the fodder is canned very much as a housewife cans fruit, preserves and vegetables.

In no other way is it possible to produce so large an amount of good fed from an acre of land as by raising corn and making the same into silage.

The succulent silage is the best possible substitute for June pastures.

It is relished by cows at all seasons of the year.

In winter cows can be fed a palatable balanced ration that will keep them up to summer flow.

Every winter we see a shortage in the dairy line. This can be overcome by introducing Silos.

With a Silo you can keep more stock.

Or keep the same stock on less acres and will leave more land for other crops.

Ensilage has a higher feeding value than roots.

Ensilage increases the milk flow.

Your creamery cheque grows larger by its use.

Keeps fodder contents pure, succulent, and palatable in every clime.

Ensilage increases production.

Ensilage saves labour.

A Silo is not an experiment, but has been proven.

The present high prices of feed stuff and of live stock make it imperative that the farmer conserve the wealth which their acres produce.

Silage has been demonstrated without doubt to be one of the best feeds for dairy cattle.

When pasture lands are very high it is more profitable to provide succulent feeds through the Silo than by pasture.

Silage can be kept longer than any other succulent feed.

All successful dairymen consider a good Silo a very necessary part of their dairy equipment, and the silage contained therein greatly increases the milk flow.

There is as much good in good milk producting silage as in green summer pastures.

Ensilage is a cheaper feed than pasture.

Ensilage means thriftier cattle.

It fattens more quickly.

A Silo will pay for itself the first year, and after that it is all clear profit.

Silage is a necessity for the most economical production of milk and butter fat, and the Silo should be on every farm.

It is one of the best investments on the farm.

There is no way to store, ton for ton, succulent feeds so cheaply as by a Silo.

The Silo and its product must now be regarded as a fixed factor in farming.

Silage is more palatable to cattle.

It has been proven that fodder corn or ensilage yields twice the dry matter that can be secured from a crop of roots grown on the same land.

It increases the milk and cream production and decreases the feeding cost.

There is a large number of crops suitable for ensilage, such as the ordinary grasses, Clovers, Lucerne, Vetches, Oats, Rye, Corn, and various weeds.

By all uniting in its use will help build up the country.

It stands like a beacon light to the farmers and points the way to safety to those whose course to independence is beset by crop failures and high priced feeds.

It can be fed to all kinds of stock.

A Silo saves lots of worry and anxiety, thus ensuring a longer and happier life.

It will help save two of the most expensive crops, that is, hay and grain.

The work is all done at one time.

The Silo method is by far the cheapest and most convenient way of handling the corn crop.

Ensilage helps to prevent diseases in the herd.

The fact that all farmers who have tried the Silo are unanimous in its praise would seem to form the best possible recommendation for its use.

In summing up would say: It has been abundantly proved that ensilage forms a wholesome and nutritious food for cattle. It can be substituted for root crops with advantage because it is succulent and digestible, milk resulting from it is good in quality and in taste. It an be secured largely irrespective of weather. It carries over grass from the period of great abundance to the time when none would otherwise be available and a larger number of cattle can be supported on a given area by the use of ensilage than is possible by the use of other crops. tw-1d-n

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney

By The Timely Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food — Has Built Up Nervous System Wonderfully.

Paralysis is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. Even nervous prostration and locomotor ataxia are among the most dreaded conditions. It is always better to avoid these results of neglected nervous troubles by keeping the nerves in health and vigor.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done wonders for people suffering from the more severe forms of nervous diseases, but we prefer to recommend it as a means of preventing such conditions.

This letter from Mrs. Nichols well represents what we mean, for she was undoubtedly on the verge of more serious trouble when she heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and sought its aid.

It is best to be warned by nervous headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness and irritability and to apply the remedy in time.

Mrs. Merritt Nichols, R. R. No. 3, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep and found it hard to get my work done at all, but having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used, there would be much less sickness."

There is no lack of evidence as to the great work of restoration being carried on by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The sales of this great nerve tonic are rapidly increasing as its virtues are being found out. But this will not help you unless you put it to the test in your own particular case. It is well worth trying, and will not disappoint you. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50 all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

HEAVY FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT

TRENT POWERS PURCHASED BY GOVERNMENT

MORE VIOLENT ATTACKS MADE ON FRENCH POSITIONS AT FORT DE VAUX

Heavy Fighting in Corbeaux Woods is Also Reported in To-day's French Official Statement--Germans Claim a Gain Near Rheims But French Report Says Attack Was Repulsed---All Attacks on Fort De Vaux Were Beaten off

PARIS, March 11.—The Germans have launched another violent attack against the village of Vaux and Fort De Vaux, the War Office announced this afternoon. All attacks on the fort have been repulsed, but the Germans have captured a few houses in Vaux village.

Heavy fighting is also occurring on the west bank of the Meuse, near the eastern border of Corbeaux wood. The French by a counter attack, drove the Germans out of communicating trenches they had occupied.

After a most violent bombardment the Germans launched a heavy infantry attack between Troyon and Berry Au Bac, said the official statement. The attack was repulsed.

In Lorraine we damaged the German works near Embermenil.

TREBINZOND MAY NOT RESIST THE RUSSIANS

PETROGRAD, March 11.—The Turkish fort of Trebizond may be surrendered to the Russians with little or no resistance, according to Tiflis despatches to-day. The big guns in the harbour have been dismantled and all the city's valuable stores removed.

Russian vanguards are now within less than a day's march of the city. The Russian fleet is harassing the retreating Turks by shelling the roads lying close to the Black Sea shore.

Casualties Among Canadians To Date Number 25,000

OTTAWA, March 11.—The list of actual casualties among the Canadian forces including killed in action, died of wounds and sickness, wounded and missing, but not known to be prisoners-of-war, has been totalled up to March 1 by the casualties branch of the Militia Department, and amounts to 13,961.

There have been killed in action 2,338 Canadians. Some 988 have died of wounds and 296 have succumbed to sickness, of a total of known dead of 3,624. There is besides, however, a list of missing men not known to be prisoners-of-war, of 1,012. It is practically certain that by far the greater number of these men are dead, which swells the list of Canadian dead to almost 5,000. The total number of wounded is 9,325. If prisoners-of-war and cases of sickness are all included the total number of casualties would be nearer 25,000 men.

AMERICANS ON BOAT THAT WAS TORPEDOED

WASHINGTON, March 11.—First ship carrying Americans to be torpedoed without warning since the new Austro-German submarine war on armed merchantmen went into effect was reported to the State Department to-day.

The Norwegian bark Silius from New York to Havre, with seven Americans aboard, was reported torpedoed in the Havre Road Thursday night without warning. All Americans were saved, but three of the crew were drowned.

Officials frankly declare that the power the undersea boat represented will be called to account for the act. It is believed the U-boat was German.

THE GERMANS CLAIM A RAID AT RHEIMS

BERLIN, March 11.—By an unexpected attack against the French lines in the vicinity of Rheims the Germans have penetrated French positions to a depth of nearly two-thirds of a mile on a 1,400 yards front, the War Office announced this afternoon. The gain was made southwest of Villeaux woods.

GERMANS ARE SHOWING ACTIVITY IN THE EAST

PETROGRAD, March 11.—Heavy attacks east of Kozlov were repulsed with serious enemy losses according to despatches received here to-day. The Germans are becoming more active on the entire front, particularly around Riga, where several attacks have been broken up by the Russian artillery.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, March 11—Firm trading in the narrow list of active stocks featured the first hour. Crucible and Baldwin Locomotive both advanced, and American Locomotive took an upward trend. The Mexican stocks fell off somewhat.

War industrials and Mexican issues again held the centre of attention in the initial trading on the stock exchange to-day. There were few changes, the market generally opening where it left off last night. Mexican petroleum opened at 105 3-4 up 1-2 a point; Crucible at 8 1-2 up 1-4 of a point, and U. S. Steel at 84. The coppers were slightly higher

GOVERNMENT IS NOT LIKELY TO GIVE REFERENDUM

Conviction Growing in Well-informed Circles That the Prohibition Legislation Will Be Passed in the House

VOTE AFTER THE WAR

TORONTO, March 11.— While an announcement of details of Government's intentions respecting prohibitory legislation will not be made until some day next week the conviction grows in usually well informed circles that there will be no referendum upon prohibition while the war lasts.

Within the week now closing the inadvisability of a referendum at the present time has been so forcibly brought home that the government has taken cognizance of the fact that a referendum a few months hence will only unnecessarily agitate the province and please no faction in particular. The government, unless all signs fail, will therefore speedily enact the legislation promised and dispense with the vote of the people until after peace has been restored.

REID'S RE-OPENING A GREAT ATTRACTION

Visited To-day by a Great Number of Women, Who Admired the new Interior and New Styles.

That much interest had been aroused in the new Reid Store was evident from yesterday's attendance. From the opening until the closing of the doors there was an uninterrupted stream of visitors anxious to inspect the remodelled interior and the Spring fashions displayed in the various sections. Approval of both was unanimously expressed. The management was freely complimented for having accomplished such a transformation in less than a month.

Many of our most prominent women embraced the occasion to obtain for themselves or daughters the new garments, hats and furnishings wanted for Spring. It was as much a Spring opening display as a store re-opening. The fashions gathered in New York, Montreal, Toronto and elsewhere were matters of extreme interest. They were frankly and deservedly admired. Prices, too, were a source of much surprise and satisfaction to those who had been led to believe that the new fashions would be high-priced because of the shortage of materials and dyes. The reopening was a success in every sense of the word.

The delay in the arrival of some of the new store fixtures was regrettable, but, in a few days, the complete accessories will be installed, to make the newly remodelled interior very attractive. Id

NO REAL FEAR THAT HUNS WILL BREAK THE LINE

T. P. O'Connor Says That There is Little Prospect That Germans Will Seriously Interfere With the Defence of France

PROVED A BOMBSHELL

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, March 11.—This has been a week of mingled anxiety and growing confidence. Verdun still fills the foreground, and the people here read the hourly accounts of the great battle with as keen interest as do the French people.

There is no real fear that the Germans will push through or that they will seriously interfere with the defence of France or her ultimate advance in the spring.

On the other hand the growing trouble Turkey is having with Russia, who is taking possession of her whole Asiatic dominions, the reported movement against Enver Pasha and the growing peace movement, reported largely from American sources, increases the belief, long held that the real stroke against the Central Powers will come in the East in the overthrow or the backing out of Turkey. Either would certainly mean the intervention of Roumania, possibly of Greece, and perhaps the withdrawal of Bulgaria from giving further assistance to Germany.

PROVED A BOMBSHELL.

Here the speech of Winston Churchill has proved a regular bombshell, but whether it will affect the position of the Ministry is not yet clear.

The strong personal animosities that Mr. Churchill's strong personality have always evoked, the Gallipoli disaster, which still hangs around his neck, the abruptness of his whole volte face with regard to Admiral Lord Fisher, has weakened the effect of his speech. Arthur J. Balfour's is a more leisured personality, and not as effective as Winston Churchill's ill-regulated driving power has added weight to the indictment.

On the other hand, there is a powerful anti-Fisher party in the navy. Mr Balfour has many friends and many critics who regard Chuchill's intervention as inopportune and mischievous, and further developments must be awaited before we can pronounce the ultimate effect of this disturbing speech.

I saw Mr Lloyd George last week at his country house at Walton Heath. He looked thin and pale and tired, but was full of spirit. He is loud in his admiration for the French nation, and says that they have confronted the grave situation with as much as, if not greater, energy than have any other of the Allies.

"France is, indeed, a great nation," he said.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

The Irish in England are preparing for the celebration of St. Patrick's Day, but in accordance with the present conditions, there will be no banquet nor political speeches. There will be, however, receptions and charity concerts.

St. Patrick's Day has been declared a "flag day" when subscriptions will be raised in London and all the great cities of England for funds that will be used to supply Irish soldiers and Irish prisoners with comforts. All classes of Irishmen, Nationalists and Unionists have joined the committees.

It has just been announced that twenty-nine Irish soldiers have won the much coveted Victoria Cross.

Some Thomas Hardy of the future will find abundant material for such a series of sketches in this war time as Thomas Hardy has written about episodes in the days of the war with Napoleon. For the war meets you everywhere in England to-day. I realized this a few days ago, when taking a little trip down to Bath to visit two friends—Sir Charles and

An announcement of momentous importance to this city regarding Hydro power development in Central and Eastern Ontario was made last night by Hon. Edward Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, to the effect that an agreement had been completed for the purchase at $8,3[illegible]0,000, payable in Ontario 4 per cent Government bonds, of the entire business and assets of the Electrical Power Company (Seymour concern) including all their subsidiary companies, twenty-two in number. This represents the cash invested in the present enterprises. The purchase, it is believed, does not at all represent the price asked.

In making the statement Hon Mr. Ferguson said it had been purposed for a long time to serve central and eastern Ontario under the Hydro system with cheap power, but the question had arisen as to the water-powers on the Trent River. In order that the Ontario Government, under its Hydro system, should have the field down there, negotiations have been going on for some time with the Electric Power Company, which controls the various power interests in that district for the purchase of their entire rights, "so that," said Mr. Ferguson, "we will make the whole of the power on the Trent available to the people at actual cost and put them in the same position as the western portion of the Province is with the Niagara power.

Reach Picton and Kingston.

"We expect to be able to reach Picton and Kingston with power within six months. This proposition from the Trent development will probably not be able to serve farther east than Kingston, but the Government has under way a project by which the advantages of public development and distribution under the Hydro system will within the near future be given to the extreme east of the Province. That will include portions which are not able to be reached economically from the Trent system. The Hydro Commission, Hon. Mr. Ferguson stated, had examined minutely into every phase of the company's business and every feature of the possibilities of development from the Trent, and the purchase by the Government had been recommended by Sir Adam Beck. The Ontario Government would have control of waterpowers in central Ontario except in the cases of those that are under lease on the Trent, concerning which there were negotiations between the companies and the Dominion Government. ARE LADIES "PERSONS"?

A gallant gentleman, William McDonald, North Bruce, has introduced into the Ontario Legisature, a bill, intituled an Act "to extend the Legislature Franchise to women." It is a very short bill, and simply provides for amending the election act by striking out the word "man" where it appears in the sections giving right to vote and substituting the word "person". It seems to be very simple; but will women take kindly to a boon, which involves describing ladies as "persons"?

RESULTS OF NON-PARTIZANSHIP.

A very important announcement is that found in another column to the effect that the Ontario government has purchased, for $8,360,000, all the business and assets of the Electric Development Company (Seymour Power Company). This will settle for this district the question of popular ownership of the principal public utilities. Whatever advantages come from the development of the Hydro-Electric principle in the public interests can be traced to the subordination of the partisan principle. The sucess the principle has achieved could not have been accomplished without non-partizan cooperation. While the executive part of the enterprise fell to the hands of a Conservative government, it had strong Liberal support. In fact the principle owes its origin to Liberal initiative. A Liberal moved the first resolution in the Ontario Legislature in favour of the municipal cooperative principle involved in the Hydro-Electric principle. Subsequently Sir Adam Beck became its champion; and, though some of his colleagues in the government were not enthusiastic, he persevered, and with the support of the two chief Liberal journals of Toronto and others, the principle has received general adoption and wide application. Of the latter, the new movement is one of the most important, and of the greatest interest to Peterborough and district. An enterprise to be assured of the highest measure of success, is greatly helped by the cooperation and harmony of the two great parties in support of the principle upon which it is founded. In war work we have declared and observed the party truce, and that the Hydro-Electric has achieved so great a measure of success, is to the credit of the men of both parties who have made common cause, to the exclusion of any but incidental party considerations. Parties can with great advantage, unite in common action upon the furtherance of great principles; while the human instinct of fighting can be satisfied by legitimate struggles over details of application.

THE POWER OF LITTLE THINGS

The record of the "one-cent-a-day club" of Ashburnham—the part of Peterborough east of the river, now commonly called "East City"—shows the cumulative effect of little contributions, systematically made. For the month of February, the club collected for the funds of the Red Cross Society $66.75. This makes a total of $200.00, given by the cent contributions of members since the club was organized.

This result is a lesson, teaching us that we should not despise the day of small things, and the lesson applies to all of us in our domestic, social, and civil relations. The great statesmen of Great Britain are preaching with earnest insistence the gospel of economy. Economy in our expenditures is the basis of benefaction. If we waste our means or much of our means, in more or less prodigal expenditures upon non-essentials, we shall have less to meet the demands that in this time of strain are made upon us to adequately meet the necessary measures of taxation and the equally necessary contributions to causes that are auxiliary to the great national and imperial efforts of the government and military and naval authorities.

Small savings, small contributions, if they are the measure of our ability, are very important acts of true patriotism. It is in its small way, and in principle, as patriotic for one of small means to deny himself or herself in order to help the cause for which we are fighting, as it is to shoulder a rifle and take a stand in the trenches. He or she has done what they could, and the greatest patriot can do no more.

Not only do the commulative advantages of small savings or small givings accrue to the benefit of our cause in this war, but they are an element in the upbuilding and good condition of our population. It will be admitted that nine-tenths of the poverty, misery and degradation of the world that command so much of our charitable energy and organization and so much of the means of the thrifty, are the result of wasteful, but not necessarily vicious exepnditure of means and the neglect of small savings that practised in the one case and neglected in the other, bring burdens upon the victims themselves and upon society that has to meet the requirements of the situation created.

As a nation we are spendthrifty, and as a nation we are not saving This applies in great measure, individually and to governments and civic corporations. We are weather skeptics and act and spend and waste our small or abundant means, as if there was no such thing as the proverbial "rain day" to be provided against. We neglect to teach the important doctrine of the gospel of thrift. We bring up our children, or permit them to stray up themselves without impressing by precept or example the tremendous importance of systematic savings and habits of thrift.

The Peterborough Board of Education did an infinitely greater injury to the interests of the community by neglecting to establish the fact and example of penny savings banks in the schools than by all the insurance contracts that could be made. With banks like these established in connection with our schools and with the incidental teaching of thrift and economy the next generation of Canadians would be vastly improvel. They would not only be a thriftier, more prosperous and a better class of citizens, but there would stand to their credit, in the aggergate, large sums of money in cash, which would otherwise have been wasted upon, perhaps, harmful luxuries, and would have developed fixed habits of thoughtless and wasteful use of means, the parents of poverty and the ruin of homes, as we see illustrated before our eyes every day in th year.

THE POLICE FORCE.

The public meeting held last night to consider the reduction of the estimates for the police department showed an active popular interest. Though the attendance was not large, it was representative of all classes of citizenship and interests. There is no doubt strong feeling in favour of retrenchment in the city estimates, but there is also necessity of providing adequate police protection. The difficulty is to steer the middle way, between the two aspects of the dilemma.

There is no need of arguing the necessity of economy in civic expenditure. That is an ever present necessity; but especially so at the present time when the burdens of sharing in war are heavy to be borne.

Nor is there need of arguing the necessity of adequate police protection. But here the difficulty consists in reaching a consensus of opinion upon which consitutes an adequate force. The question is, is the police force as now constituted adequate or will it be adequate with the reduction of the strength of the force by two?

There is one outstanding fact that so far we have not adequate police protection, that is we have not adequate patrolling of the outlying sections of the city.

Nearly the whole attention of the force in this regard is confined to the business section of the city. This section is, in a material sense, the one that needs police supervision and control; but the outlying sections of the city, especially in the summer, in a moral sense especially, demand vigilant police patrol. Apart from the fact that our important factories lying on the outskirts need to have a watchful eye kept upon them, the citizens generally in these districts need protection also. When the schools are closed, the average boy, which often includes the bad boy, is at large and the pranks and often malicious mischief of young lads is a source of annoyance and very often of loss.

The city outskirts in the summer time, present a favourite and fruitful field for the practice of immorality for the operations of a class of depraved men, who in one form are practisers of the white slave traffic. Scores of young girls owe their downfall to the opportunity afforded by parental neglect and want of control, to seek or be decoyed into the dark places of the outlying city.

In both these cases, the necessity of police control is indicated. The presence occasionally of a policeman in uniform in these heretofore unpoliced districts, would exercise a deterrent effect and tend to lessen, if not prevent, the misdoings of boys and the undoing of girls, not to speak of the regulation of the possible annoyance presented by the genius "tramp."

It is a fact that when occasion may arise for a policeman in the outlying parts of the city, there is none nearer than the central district, and before one can arrive the necessity may be gone—the possible culprit escaped. The question to be settled upon, one of the questions to be solved, is whether the present or a numerically reduced police force can so be distributed as to serve the purpose of adequate patrol of all sections of the city. It is to be considered whether the middle of the city, where the streets are always occupied by somebody; where there is always some eye open to deter wrong-doing and wrong-doers, needs the exclusive presence of the whole police force at the expense of the outlying districts, where the opportunities of wrong-doing without witness or possibly of immediate detection, are as ten to one.

The whole subject is one that needs careful handling. The city council ought not, as it is assumed it will not do, be unreasonable in its demands for economy; and the Police Commissioners ought not, as it is assumed they will not do, use the arbitrary power the law clothes them with, in a way to show disregard of the wishes of their fellow citizens, but will use every effort to meet the demands for economy by some readjustment and redistribution of duty of the force, that may be found consistent with reasonable efficiency. We are a small community, and it should be possible to practice sufficient give and take to prevent anything like rupture or undesirable friction.

CONSERVATIVE DEMAND FOR PROHIBITION LEGISLATION

Significant of the tremendous advance in public opinion regarding the prohibition of the liquor traffic are the comments of The Toronto World and The Toronto Telegram—Conservative newspapers that cannot, by any stretch of imagination be regarded as leaning unduly toward the side of the advanced temperance movement. In the judgment of these papers the course to be taken by the Hearst Government is clear and emphatic. There must be no war-time poll on the prohibition issue. The question must be dealt with by the Legislature and at once. The Toronto World says:

"If the Government intends to enact a prohibition measure it does not seem wise from yesterday's experience that a campaign should be inaugurated either for or against the principle. The pros and cons of the question are not now to be settled by discussion, and this is virtually admitted by the resolve to have a second vote on the retention of the Act after the war. As far as appearances go, the majority may be judged to be with the Premier in his decision. He would lose nothing by taking the step he proposes as a war measure without delay."

The Toronto Telegram is equally insistent:

"If the Hearst Government feels that Ontario has given the rulers of this Province a mandate to accept the N. W. Rowell Committee of One Hundred policy, let the Hearst Government legislate in fulfillment of that mandate and spare Ontario the affliction of a war time election on the license issue."

Immediate action by the Government is demanded from both sides. There is a clear mandate for prohibition. Judging by some of the letters that reach the Globe, as well as by the attitude of a section of the onlookers to the prohibition procession in Toronto, there seems to be a grave misunderstanding as to one important underlying principle of the prohibition movement. So far as the work of the Committee of One Hundred is concerned, no action has been taken by it that is calculated to infringe upon the rights of the individual. But clear thinking is necessary by those who oppose prohibition on the ground that it interferes with the liberty of the subject.

In the government of Ontario, as in that of the Dominion, the liberty of the subject is determined by legislation, which is imposed upon the minority under the system of majority rule which obtains in all British communities enjoying self-government. No better system has yet been devised. As Mr. Birrell once expressed it: "It is the fate of minorities to suffer." The will of the majority must prevail in democratic countries. It was in strictest conformity with the fundamental principle of British government that the Committee of One Hundred decided on a referendum. It is not the Committee of One Hundred but an overwhelming majority of the electorate which has decided for a dry Ontario. Were the signatures to the petition translated into votes, Ontario would be a dry Province to-day. Let it not be said, therefore, that the Committee of One Hundred, or any minority in the Province, is seeking to impose its will on the majority. The referenum decided on by the Hearst Government, and endorse by Mr Rowell on behalf of the Opposition is a final guarantee that the people of Ontario alone have the right, and will have an opportunity to exercise the right, of determining the future relations of the Province to the liquor traffic. Let the people decide finally either now or at the end of the war, but there is clearly no need of two decisions.

"It is not liberty that is involved in this fight, so far as the opposition is concerned. A strong sense of duty and patriotism at this grave crisis in Canada's history should lead men to realize that greater than the liberty to act is the spirit of self-sacrifice which leads the citizen to surrender all that his country may give. It is this spirit which has inspired thousands of moderate drinkers to petition for the closing of the bar.

A Bull's Eye.

If an advertiser could make every advertisement, and every word in it, do its best work for him, he would make a record and invariably hit the bull's eye. Perhaps such a score is not possible, but the rifle with which he shoots, may be the best possible, thus enhancing his chances for a perfect score.

The one best rifle, the nearest to perfect in advertising, is the newspaper. Others have been tried and are being tried by new and inexperienced advertisers; but as they watch results and grow in wisdom, they put their faith primarily in the newspaper. The example of these experienced ones is worth following.

A.L.S.

THE KINGDOM OF THE SKY

This column is written for The Examiner by the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

Citizens may join this society by paying two dollars. Every member receives twelve books, star maps, Observer's Guide, and other scientific data free from the Ottawa Government. The society will endeavour to give answers to all astronomical questions that may be sent in.

At about seven o'clock any night next week standing on any of the streets of Peterborough that run north and south, if you turn your face to the south and look up into the sky you will see shining directly down upon the street the stars as outlined above.

The brilliant constellation of Orion will be slightly to the west and Procyon will be slightly to the east and Sirius will be almost directly in the zenith.

Next to the big dipper, Orion is probably the most widely known of all the constellations.

It contains more bright stars than does any other single group. They exact all the more immediate admiration because they are clustered so closely and symmetrically as to form a set figure of dazzling jewels.

A veritable "Sunburst of diamonds in the sky."

To the ancients, this figure, as its name indicates represented the giant Orion, placed in the Heavens in heroic attitude facing Taurus, the mighty bull.

Orion is the only constellation containing two stars of the first magnitude. These two stars are Betelgeuse and Rigel (pronounced Betelgerz and Reejel.) The colour of Betelgeuse is a deep red tinged with orange. This indicates advanced age. Light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, coming with inconceivable rapidity. The light we are just now receiving from Betelgeuse started on its journey about 102 years ago.

Betelgeuse is situated at the giant's right shoulder and Bellatrix on the left. Half way between Betelgeuse and Rigel you will observe three bright second magnitude stars forming the belt. The upper star of these three is directly on the celestial equator. Hanging from the belt you will notice a short row of fainter stars these are called the giant's sword. The third star in the sword, to a good eye will appear a little hazy. This is none other than the great nebula of Orion. In a field glass the sword stars appear to be double, while in a good telescope the third star resolves itself into six stars surrounded by a nebulous cloud. This brilliant constellation will soon be too far down the western sky for easy observation. However, it will again twinkle over the eastern horizon about the latter part of next October. A little further to the north and east, you will observe two bright stars, called the twins, in the constellation of Gemini. In the Elizabethan era, it was the custom to swear "By Gemini" and you will sometimes hear a slang term to-day, "By jiminy." This phrase is just a corruption of the older custom. These two stars appear to be travelling together, but their proximity is only apparent.

Pollux is over three times as far away as Castor and they are travelling in different directions.

To the east and a little to the south of Orion you will find the brightest star in the sky. (Please remember planets are not stars). This bright star is the far-famed Sirius, sometimes called the great dog star. This star has attracted much attention through all the ages. Sirius is comparatively near to us, just a little over eight light years away, and Procyon, you will see it just a little north and east of Sirius, is just a little over ten light years away.

Sometime when you have a few moments to spare find out how many seconds there are in ten years, and multiply the answer by 186,000, the answer to this will be about the number of miles the great star Procyon is distant from us.

Procyon gives about eight times the amount of light our own sun radiates.

Next week we will show a diagram of the constellation of Leo the Lion, and the planet Mars.

We will discuss the condition of Mars and the probability of intelligent life existing there.

Owing to the smaller size of Mars, it has gone through its various stages of development in a shorter time than has the earth.

By studying the present condition of Mars, we may be able to deduce the future condition of our own earth upon which we live.

DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT

Ex-Alderman Joseph Batten a Man of Many Activities

Peterborough has lost another prominent citizen, Mr. Joseph Batten, who passed away late yesterday afternoon after a short attack of la grippe.

The late Mr. Batten was born in Dummer Township sixty-seven years ago, and lived during his youth near Warsaw, where he learned the blacksmithing trade with David Kidd.

Coming to Peterborough he worked for one year with Tobias Fitzgerald, then for five years he was in business for himself in the town of Beaverton. Peterborough, however, had a strong fascination for him and for the last forty years has been a resident of the city, conducting a successful business on Simcoe Street for upwards of a quarter of a century.

Mr. Batten took a great interest in municipal affairs and was a member of the Council from 1901 to 1905, and again in 1910.

In fraternal circles he took an active part particularly in association with Orange societies, having been Past County Master, West Peterborough L. O. L., Past Grand Preceptor of Royal Black Knights of Ireland of Eastern Ontario, and a member of L.O.L. No. 80. He also belonged to the Canadian Order of Foresters Court Peterborough No. 99.

In religion, Mr. Batten was a Methodist, having been prominently connected with the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, as Trustee, member of the Quarterly Official Board and Class Leader. He also was a member of the Layman's Association.

In politics, Mr. Batten was a Conservative.

Surviving him are his wife, who was Miss Mary Ann Le May of Dummer, to whom he was married forty-five years ago, and two daughters, Mrs. R. G. Cottrell and Mrs. R. N. Jones of this city; one brother, John Batten, Port Carling, and six sisters: Mrs. William Harding, and Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, Warsaw; Mrs. Flowers, California; Mrs. J. Quinlan, Detroit; Mrs. Hewitt, Rochester, N.Y., and Mrs. Meyers, Orillia.

IN FIVE MINUTES! NO INDIGESTION, GAS OR SOUR, ACID STOMACH

The Moment "Pape's Diapepsin" Reaches the Stomach All Distress Goes

"Really does" put bad stomach in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almot marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.

Bad Roads And A Small Market

The roads leading to the city, particularly those running east and west, are in bad shape owing to the great quantity of snow that has fallen lately, and as a result the market this morning was very small.

The law of supply and demand is always a deciding factor in fixing prices, and to-day was no exception to the rule. A host of buyers, but few vendors; result, high quotations.

Eggs brought 30 cents, with one or two lots at 29 cents, notwithstanding the tendency on the outside to drop.

Butter maintained its high level of 30 cents, and was being snatched up quickly.

Cream sold at 25 cents a quart.

One vendor had a quantity of honey in small glass honey-receptacles which he sold at 15 cents a piece. He also had lard at 15 cents a pound.

Oranges sold at 30 to 40 cents a dozen, lemons 25 cents, grape-fruit four for a quarter, celery, two bunches for 15 cents, and lettuce three bunches for ten cents.

Home-Made Cooking.

The ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League occupied a table at the south end of the Market Hall where they had on sale home-made cooking as well as hot tea, coffee and sandwiches.

Outside Market.

The offerings on the outside were not very numerous. Beef sold at 11 cents for the front and 19 cents for the hind quarter. Pork brought 15 and 17 cents.

A few bags of potatoes sold for $2.25 each. Vegetables were very scarce, and were offered at their usual winter prices.

Two crates of roosters occupied the seat of a cutter and were held at the rate of $2.50 for the five.

A small lot of furniture, mostly of the bedroom variety, was auctioned off.

No wood or hay put in an appearance.

If the roads are in good shape next week there should be a large market on Saturday.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can discontinue with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once. Go to the Warne Drug Company, or to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefit from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and try it: you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Talmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A NOTEWORTHY THEATRICAL ETENT

The Distinguished English Actor Cyril Maude, With His Internationally Successful "Grumpy" at the Grand on Wednesday Next.

It has been written by a famous dramatic critic that "It is more than a pleasure—it is a privilege—to see Mr. Cyril Maude as "Grumpy," in the play of that name," which for the past two seasons has been piling up an enviable record of success in America, with a between season production at the New Theatre, London, where Mr. Maude gained for the crusty octogenarian as great a measure of popularity, as he had obtained for it in this country.

On Wednesday night Mr. Maude will be seen for the first time in this famed characterization in this city. This admirable actor has been but a little over two years before the American public, yet in that time has won a very important place in the regard of all theatre patrons, who delight in fine acting. Previously to his coming to the United States and doing "Grumpy," Mr. Maude had been, for over 15 years one of the conspicuously successful actor-managers in London, and a great favourite with all of the English public that found its amusement in the theatre. During that period he controlled as well as acted at, first the Haymarket theatre, and after, The Playhouse. In these two distinguished dramatic houses, he made many productions and played many parts, which have been included among the most important contributions to the English stage.

"Grumpy" is well described as a comedy with drama. Its authors are Horace Hodges and T. Wigney lawyer of London, known to his intimates as 'Grumpy,' a sobriquet bestowed upon him by his granddaughter, Virginia, because he is testy, childish and fidgetty, constantly hockling those who serve him, but withal deserving the nick-name of endearment as his illnature is never more than skin deep and only imperfectly hides the warmest heart and most gently humorous nature in all the land. The story of the play discovers 'Grumpy' at the age of 83, domiciled in his country home outside of London. A nephew, the erstwhile guardian of a diamond valued at $460,000, is mysteriously robbed, while a guest in his uncle's home and this incident forms the basis for a new sort of detective plot, which is worked out on distinctly humorous lines be permitting more than a glimpse of melodrama. The masterly impersonation of age supplied by Mr. Maude is a treat in stage characterization that none can afford to miss.

Wrong Names Under Pictures

A Mistake in To-day's Illustrated Section of the Examiner

In the illustrated section of to-day's Examiner appears the photographs of two local officers, Lieut. Burritt Kelly of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, and Lieut. Claude Rogers, of the Canadian Mechanical Transport. By some freak of misfortune peculiar to the printing of newspapers, Lieut. Kelly's name appears under the photograph of Lieut. Rogers, and vice versa. Both men are so well known that the mistake will be apparent, and The Examiner takes this opportunity of apologizing to their friends for the error.

CROSS, FRETFUL BABIES

The cross, fretful baby is a sickly baby—the well child is always happy and smiling. Mothers if your baby is cross and cries a great deal something is wrong. His little stomach and bowels may be out of order; his teeth troubling him, or he may be bothered with worms. The mother should immediately give him Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to relieve the baby. Concerning them Mrs. Ronald Hurley, Gilks, N.B., writes: "I know of nothing so good for cross, fretful babies as Baby's Own Tablets and I am pleased to recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Pastor Russell Matter Brought Up In House

Capt. J. H. Burnham Called Attention of Parliament to the Matter

In the House of Commons, yesterday, Capt. J. H. Burnham of West Peterborough, asked if the Acting Minister of Militia had heard that "a propaganda had been established or was about to be established for the suppression or partial suppression of recruiting." He had read in a newspaper that Pastor Russell, an American, was about to enter Canada "with some conscientious scruples" with regard to recruiting. He had, moreover, received a telegram from the Colonel of the 93rd Battalion at Peterborough, asking if it would be possible to prevent any interference by Pastor Russell, who was going to hold a meeting there on Sunday afternoon next. The officer had been informed that it was Pastor Russell's intention to tell the people that it was unnecessary for them to enlist, and how to satisfy their consciences in that regard.

Hon. S. A. Kemp, Acting Minister of Militia, said that he had not seen the newspaper articles to which Capt. Burnham had alluded. He added that "the Government was not retarding recruiting, but was doing everything in its power to encourage recruiting."

GERMANY'S NEW ENEMY

A new Portuguese Cabinet was established last June. Its virtual admission of allegiance to Britain and her Allies in December of 1915 has now culminated in a declaration of war on Portugal by Germany. The personnel of the Cabinet is as follows: President of the Republic, Dr. Bernardino Machado; Minister of Justice, Catano Menezes; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Augusto Spares; Minister of the Colonies, Norton Matteo; Minister of Public Works, Manuel Montero; Minister of Public Instruction, Lopez Martins.

Portugal derived its name from O Porto in the tenth century. Previous to that it had been known as Lusitania. It is 365 miles in length, 130 miles broad and covers an area of 35,745 square miles, including Madeira and the Azores. The population is 5,687,627, and of these three million are employed in or maintained by agriculture. The Portuguese are very illiterate, 78 per cent. only being able to read.

Portugal's most valuable export is wine, of which there is an annual yield of 17,000,000 gallons. In 1908, $10,179,480 worth of wine was exported half of which went to Britain.. Cork, fish and copper are other important exports.

In 1910 the Portuguese dynasty was overthrown and a republic established modelled on the French government system. Most of the aristocracy have left the country and for the past six years there has been much internal strife and the constant expectation of a counter-revolution.

Military training is universal and compulsory. The army on a peace footing is estimated at about 32,000, while in time of war, 175,000 men are available. The navy consists of six cruisers, four destroyers, one submarine and about sixty small vessels, manned by nearly five thousand sailors.

MOTHER! YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH FROM CONSTIPATION

If Tongue is Coated, Breath Bad, Stomach Sour, Clean Liver and Bowels

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

To-night the Last Opportunity to See This Great Photo Play at The Empire

What we have been saying so strongly the past few days as to the excellence of the film we are showing at the Empire, "The Sporting Duchess" has resulted in two fine audiences who have greatly appreciated the picture. We expect even more people than last night will be present to-night, the last opportunity to see this play.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week we present "The Circular Staircase," a photo play full of excitement all the way through, with a strong love story woven into the action.

We can't get you a better programme of clever plays with a fine comedy as they are not to be had. We are not boasting, but merely stating a fact when we say that the Empire Theatre gives you as good and as up-to-date, clean pictures as any photo theatre in Canada.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

Division of Opinion Among Ratepayers

Mr. G. G. Gladman Thinks There is Not Half Enough Policemen While Ex-Ald. Morgan Would Install a Black Maria—Policeman With "Red Moustaches."

THE PUBLIC MEETING

What was designated an "indignation meeting" was held last evening in the City Council chamber when a fair representation of ratepayers appeared in the flesh to discuss the estimated expenditure of the Board of Police Commissioners. The net result of the meeting is embodied in the following resolution:

Moved by Ald. Stratton, seconded by Mr. W. H. White, that this meeting of ratepayers which is desirious of the city affairs being carried on as economically as possible owing to the strenuous conditions brought about by the war, respectfully ask that the Board of Commissioners of Police endeavour by a re-arrangement of duties, of the members of the force, in and out of the station, to effect a substantial reduction in the proposed expenditures for the current year, and carry on the work with two men less. To reduce other incidental expenditures commensurate with economy which is not only desirable but essential during the period of the war.—Carried.

Alderman Applauded.

Mayor Duffus was invited to act as chairman which he did in accordance with the expressed wish of the meeting. The Mayor is a member of the Board of Police Commissioners. This fact was made known to the meeting by Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance committee of the City Council. Members of the Council submerged their identity in the spectators' gallery and applauded heartily whenever the discussion veered in their favour. Beyond this there was little demonstration of any kind and Mayor Duffus found little difficulty in keeping order. On one occasion the Mayor instituted a casual search for the gavel, but that symbol of law and majesty was missing. This was when Dr. G. D. Fortune challenged Mr. G. G. Gladman, president of the William Hamilton Company, to prove certain statements regarding the patrolling activities of the police force. Mayor Duffus admonished the speakers to keep law and order and not say anything that would occasion regret or reflect on the efficiency of the force.

Work For the Boys.

"It is the opinion of the Council," said Mayor Duffus, "that the estimates are too high and that the police force should be reduced by at least two men. The Police Commissioners were experienced men and by reason of their positions in public life were qualified to fulfill the duties incident to that particular office. It was pleasing to see that the members of the City Council were animated with the spirit of economy. We are not going to undertake any work that can be left until the boys come home," said the Mayor in conclusion.

Ald. Dobbin thought that it would be possible to rearrange and reduce the force so that its efficiency would not be impaired.

Mr. P. G. S. Webb invited Ald. Stratton to review the situation for the benefit of those present. He said that Ald. Stratton's attitude in respect to the cost of operating the police department, was a popular one with the general public.

Ald. Stratton replied by saying that the wishes of the Council were generally known, and as a member of the Council he would like to hear what the ratepayers had to say.

A Black Maria.

Ex-Ald. H. Morgan said that the department would do well to install a patrol wagon so that the policemen could respond to a call in a matter of minutes instead of several hours.

In the opinion of Mr. W. R. Morris, the recent action of the Commissioners in reducing the estimates by two hundred and seventy-five dollars was uncalled for. They should have stood pat, asserted Mr. Morris. He thought that it was an unfortunate thing that only one out of the three commissioners was responsible to the people. Steps should be taken to amend the act so that one of the commissioners would be responsible to the government.

Ald. Stratton—"It was necessary for the Commissioners to reduce the estimates by two hundred and seventy-five dollars. They had absolutely no way of spending it."

Mayor Duffus intimated that the military guard now guarding the local industries would be removed at an early date.

Mr William Carter was sorry to say that many of the ratepayers talked so fluently on the streets yet were unable to express themselves at the meeting. He thought that the majority of the people were behind the Council.

After eulogizing Ald. Stratton for the stand he had taken in connection with the matter, Mr. T. B. McGrath suggested that the Council extend their economic activities to other departments. "It doesn't give it the right ring" observed Mr. McGrath.

Mayor Duffus pointed out that the Council had only dealt with two items so far. One concerned the grant to the Belgian fund and the other grant of two hundred dollars to the Orange Association to help defray the cost of the annual celebration that will be held in Peterborough this year.

Mr. James Hill's sympathy was with the City Council.

"What control or authority has the Council over the Police Commission?" inquired Mr. Gladman.

Mayor Duffus—"None."

Mr. Gladman—"Then what is the object of calling this meeting to discuss something over which we have no control. We can't have too good a police force. The same thing applies to the fire brigade. We haven't half enough policemen in the city. I have resided in the city a great many years and I have never seen a policeman west of Bethune street, south of the C. P. R. station, north of McDonnel street or in East City. As a ratepayer I feel that we should have them in all parts of the city, and I am quite willing to leave the government of the police department to Judge Huycke and Magistrate Dumble, who are familiar with the needs of the department. We have no more control over the Police Commission than over the Board of Education. Curiosity brought the most of us here. The Council threw away money last year by the wheelbarrow load. Money was spent in repairing streets that were afterwards torn up and paved."

Reason For the Meeting.

Mayor Duffus explained that the reason the meeting was called was because one member moved a resolution to that effect and another seconded it and the majority of the Council favoured it.

Dr. Fortune challenged Mr. Gladman to prove his statement regarding the area covered by the policemen and offered to put up one hundred and offered to put up $100 to prove that he was wrong. Dr. Fortune said that he saw more of the town at nights than most people and had seen policemen in all directions.

Mr. Gladman said that the night watchman, who has been employed at the William Hamilton Company's plant for fourteen years had also stated that he had never seen a policeman in the neighbourhood of the plant. Mr. Gladman said he did not wish to be misunderstood. He only referred to his own personal experience and that of some of his employees.

A Link With the Past.

Ald. William Langford favoured the meeting with a lengthy dissertation on economy and its relation to the Police Department. He recalled the time when the city struggled along with two or three policemen and was infested with lumber jacks who started out occasionally with the object of painting the town red.

Ald. Galbraith removed a lock of hair from his eye and followed in the wake of Ald. Langford. He was also in a reminiscent mood.

Mr. W. H. White was curious to Commissioners install time clocks on the respective beats. At Mr. Stuart's request Ald. Stratton produced a list of statistics relating to the growth of the force during the ten years, showing that the increase in population during that time was forty-two per cent., while the growth of the police force represented two hundred per cent.

Mr. W. H. White was curious to know how many men were needed inside. He spoke of two constables with "red moustaches" who he said, were seldom seen on the street. He was of the opinion that if somebody was put on to watch the policemen and keep them moving they would cover more ground. I am not mentioning any names," said Mr. White.

Two of the ratepayers voted against the resolution.

25 CENTS DESTROYS YOUR DANDRUFF AND STOPS FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair! Make it Thick, Wavy and Beautiful—Try This!

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxurience which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few week's use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair —new hair—growing all over the scalp.

The Province Buys

ers the Provincial Government expect to obtain from the Dominion.

"The position is this," declared the Minister, "that all the electric energy to be served throughout central Ontario will be taken from a Government-owned plant and distributed at cost."

To North Bay and Nipissing.

Under the arrangement which has been come to, not only central Ontario, but North Bay and the Nipissing district will be able to get the advantages of Hydro public development.

Twenty-two companies have been taken over, all of them, with the exception of the Nipissing Power Company and its companion enterprise, the North Bay Light, Heat and Power Company, being in what is known as the Trent Valley district. By taking over the Seymour interests the Government, through the Hydro Electric Commission, will be able to serve municipalities as far east as Kingston, and the Hydro Commission will make provision at once for carrying lines to all the municipalities that have been clamoring for Hydro power, but hitherto unable to get it owing to the Seymour monopoly powers.

Mayor is Pleased.

His Worship Mayor Duffus is well pleased at the culmination of the efforts to secure for the people, control of the Trent water powers. The advantages that will accrue to Peterborough as a result of this move, are immeasurable. "The more power that is used, both in the city and county, the cheaper it will be," said the Mayor. For years the City Council has endeavoured to straighten out the power tangle, and with this object in view, several trips have been made to both Ottawa and Toronto These efforts have resulted in the purchase of the power interests in this district, and the day is not far distant when Peterborough will be enjoying the advantages of being located in the centre of a network of water powers. This move, culminating as it has done, in the purchase of all the available power in this district, will have an important bearing on the development of the radial railway project which is now before the authorities. Mayor Duffus is very optimistic as to the future and is gratified at the latest achievement in this direction.

Mr. T. F. Matthews

Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, believes that the new arrangement will simplify a great many matters, particularly the taking over of the Otonabee Power Company. From a conversation with Sir Adam Beck, Mr. Matthews assumes that the radial railway and the gas plant will come under the management of the Utilities Commission. "This will make a nice proposition," said Mr. Matthews.

Others who were interviewed regarding the above matter expressed similar opinions.

A LITTLE INFORMATION ABOUT TO-MORROW'S VISITOR

The Founder of "Millennial Dawnism" as Revealed by the Leaflet—Some Facts About the Self-Styled "Pastor Russell" Written by Rev. J. J. Ross, of Hamilton.

The following information about "Pastor" Russell is given in a leaflet entitled "Some Facts About the Self-Styled 'Pastor' Charles T. Russell," published by Rev. J. J. Ross, pastor of the James Street Baptist Church, Hamilton:

(Published June, 1912.)

"In this leaflet I am to tell you something about the so-called "Pastor" C. T. Russell, the founder and chief executive of "Millennial Dawnism." Though the name of Russell is quite familiar, very little is known about the man himself. Nothing is known of his parentage nor of his early boyhood. We first hear of him selling shirts in Alleghany, Pa., having inherited this business from his father. He lectured on religious subjects from time to time in various halls and churches, becoming known as the crank preacher. He got a considerable following of the common people, and sold out the five men's furnishing stores which he owned, thenceforth devoting all his time to teaching and preaching his peculiar religious doctrines and giving out that he himself "was some great one." He never attended the higher schools of learning, knows comparatively nothing of philosophy, systematic or historical theology, and is totally ignorant of the dead languages, and yet he is successful in making his disciples believe that the most difficult passages in the Old Testament and the book of Revelation are as simple as a sunbeam to him. "Pastor" Russell was never ordained and has no church affiliation. He would not be given a place in the pulpit of any evangelical church on the American continent or any other country where he and his religious views are known. By thousands he is believed to be a religious fakir of the worst type, who goes about like the Magus of Samaria enriching himself at the expense of the ignorant. Years ago he gave himself the title of "Pastor" and from this many have inferred that he was a properly approved minister of the gospel.

"Pastor" Russell was in Toronto a few weeks ago and announced himself as the head and "president" of the so-called "International Bible Students' Association," with head office in London, England. When he first began his propaganda his headquarters were in Alleghany, Pa. In course of time, he was successful in building up an elaborate publishing establishment in Pittsburgh, which he called "Zion's Watch Tower." In a worldly way things went well with him for a time. Then he gave the name "Millennial Dawn" to his publications. The stories of the divorce proceedings got into circulation about him, and his business suffered. Wishing to frustrate the verdict of the court in giving his wife alimony, he changed the names of his publications to "Studies in the Scriptures," and transferred the head office to Brooklyn, N.Y., where it is at the present time. Since taking this new location the institution is known as "The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society," "The London and Brooklyn Tabernacles," "The People's Pulpit," and now the "International Bible Students' Association." It comes out that these names separately and together are appellations bestowed by Russell upon himself, and his followers. By the name "International Bible Students' Association," the public is deceived into thinking that the institution is international in extent, that the governments of the world are behind it, and that it is made up of accredited representatives of all the denominations and theological colleges, when in fact the name stands only for the followers of one man, and not a scholar at that. That appellation is, therefore, a misnomer. Its purpose and use is to deceive the public. The opinion of that organization (if it be an organisation) is the opinion of one man. . . .

Russell has published a set of books, bound in six volumes, including about two thousand pages, which he now calls "Studies in the Scriptures." The title is misleading and is intended to deceive the Christian public. The teaching of these books subverts the faith of Christians of all evangelical denominations and substitutes for the truth as it is in Christ the destructive doctrines of one man, who is neither a scholar nor a theologian. The whole system of Russellism is anti-rational, anti-scientific, anti-Biblical, anti-Christian and a deplorable perversion of the Gospel of God's dear Son.

There is nothing in the English-speaking world to compare with the system presented in the books for error. The great heretical leaders of the early centuries were not more daring, more blasphemous or more destructive than is the author of these books. They contradict almost every fundamental of evangelical Christian faith by a bold denial of the proper diety, incarnation, resurrection, ascension and high priestly intercession of Jesus Christ. Russell also denies the Second Advent of Christ in the Biblical sense of that event, the personality, work and deity of the Holy Spirit, the Trinity and the atonement made, through the death and risen life of Christ. He teaches that the Second Advent of Christ took place in 1874, that those who sleep in Christ experienced their resurrection in 1878, and that the present order of things will terminate in October, 1914. He also makes bold to affirm, the Bible to the contrary, that "eternal life" is mere existence, being exclusively a quantity, not a quality of life; that it is not a present possession on faith, but a future inheritance conditioned upon good conduct and character here. Moreover, Russell teaches and affirms in these books that there is no conscious future punishment for sin, and, though inconsistent, after death some time, somewhere, there will be a second chance and another offer of salvation.

Thus we see from a careful and unprejudiced analysis of the teachings of the "Millennial Dawn" Books, issued by the self-styled "Pastor" Russell, that the system of error which he represents is a combination of Unitarianism, Universalism, Restorationism, Second Probationism, Swedenborgianism and Annihilationism.

Every reader is warned against this false teacher and his teaching as dangerous in the extreme. It is safer to stand by the Lord Jesus than by any human teacher. It is safer to take our system of truth from the Bible than from the Watch Tower. It is safer to take the creeds of Christendom than the vagaries of one man. See Matt. 7-15; 1 John 4-1

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

The Man Who Has Added Millions to the Sunday Schools in the Past Ten Years is Coming to Peterboro

Mr. W. C. Pearce of Chicago, Ill., Adult Division Superintendent of the International Sunday School Association reported in February last, that during the past ten years, since the organization of Adult Bible Classes has become popular, two million men and one and a half million women have been added to the Sunday Schools of North America. This result is largely due to the influence of class activity among organized classes. Mr. Pearce is the first and only International Secretary of the Adult Class Movement.

Accompanied by Rev. E. W. Halpenny, General Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, Mr. Pearce will attend the annual meeting of the Peterborough Sunday School Association on Wednesday, March 15th, at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in the afternoon, and Bethany Tabernacle in the evening. 8d-00

The Duffus' Garage In The Saddle

Starting the Campaign For the 1916 Ford Car—Nothing to be Left Undone to Keep Alive the Enthusiasm of the Universal Car

Someone has said: "A man with a push can get there, but it takes a man with character to stay there."

For present purposes the name of one of our local outstanding examples of the above truism, Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, of the Duffus Garage, and newly elected Mayor of the City, may be mentioned.

Founded upon his practical business experience as a Ford Car dealer alone, the flattering success which he has made of this business, and the integrity, as well as push, which has characterized his business methods, are too well known to require further eulogies of his worth as a man of character.

Keeps Going.

As the energetic local representative of the Canadian Ford Car Company, Mr. Duffus has determined that nothing will be allowed to interfere with the continued promotion of his favourite business. The number of Ford car sales in his territory is bound to be increased this season. Already, Mr. Duffus has taken delivery of 182 cars, most of which have been sold. Recently he held a special get-together cabinet council with his general garage staff with the result that a fresh spring impetus has been infused into every unit, and an aggressive campaign launched.

$60 Off Every Car.

The vast Canadian Ford factory is back of the Duffus Garage, pledged to supply every demand. The bold steps taken this year to again reduce the prices of the Ford Car in Canada will be a tower of strength to the dealer. The reader is referred to the four-column advertisement of the Ford Car Co., which Mr. Duffus has caused to be inserted in to-day's issue of The Examiner. Next week, therefore, will begin a spectacular district-wide drive in the interests of Ford Car selling under Mr. Duffus personal directions. The wall of excuses for postponing the buying of that car will be besieged, and the heavy artillery of the Duffus Garage will start a war on procrastination.

Delay Dangerous.

The man who wants a car should grasp this opportunity to share in the price concessions. If you had a "mint of money" you couldn't buy a better car. It is light, strong, comfortable and dependable, and its cost is well within every modest income.

The Canadian Ford Car Company has prepared for a production of 40,000 cars this year; and it was upon the basis of this increased output that the Company was enabled to reduce the price on each car $60. The importance of this reduction is all the more reamrkable when the advance in the price of raw material which enters into the manufacture of the Ford cars is taken into account. There is no telling, however, how long this reduction in price will last. The new war tax will fall very heavily on the Canadian Ford Car Company, and is estimated that it will amount to over a million and a half dollars. For this reason it is intimated that the price may be increased. So that those who contemplate buying should not leave it off too long before the operation of this new law takes effect.

What is worth while doing at all, is worth while doing now. "Buy a Ford Car now, and put the balance in the bank."—"No matter how contented your lot in life may be, you will be happier with a Ford" — is some of Mayor Duffus' Ford philosophy.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Lieut. Percy Might who until recently has been principal of one of Toronto's schools and is now attached to the 93rd Battalion will address the Y.M.C.A. Mens' meeting, Sunday at 4.1 5o'clock. We would urge every man and older boy to be present for Mr. Might has an inspirational message for all.

A rushing business is being done at the Y.M.C.A. building at the present time. We have gymnasium classes for soldiers at 6.30 and 9 a.m.; 2 and 5 p.m.. These classes together with the Collegiate classes and the regular gymnasium classes of the Y.M.C.A. are working the gymn. and baths to the limit. Sergt. Loomis, and old Peterborough Y.M.C.A. leader has charge of the physical instruction for soldiers.

The dormitories have been filled during the past week but to keep them filled we must secure an average of about one man per day for there are many changes among the young men who are roomers here. We have kept a waiting list for young men who desire dormitory rooms, during the past month and no man has been asked to wait longer than 48 hours.

Dormitory Mens' Supper.

Wednesday evening, March 15, at 6.30 o'clock, a complimentary supper will be served to our roomers that they may become acquainted with each other. The officers of the Association are pleased to note that the alterations to the building have worked out fully as well as anticipated greatly increasing the supervision of the work making it possible for the "Y" to devote its time to taking on additional work for soldiers and provide a home by means of the dormitories for an increased number of young men so while the financial receipts of the Association during the past year have fallen below estimates, still the Y.M.C.A. supporters have much to be thankful for.

Clothing made of pressed feathers as a substitute for wool has been invented by an Italian priest.

The record for efficiency is claimed for a French oil engine with a fuel consumption of less than 40 pounds per horse power hour.

Need Attention in March or Face May Stay Covered.

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish it to look well the rest of the year. The March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all Summer unless removed. Now is the time to use othine—double strength.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful that it is sold by druggists under the guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of othine—double strength, and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.

RED CROSS NEWS.

A prominent farmer near St. Catharines paid $25 to the Railway Co. to have a crossing named after him. The money was turned over to the Red Cross.

School children at Eaton, Sask., contributed $130 to the Red Cross Funds.

FOR BRITAIN'S HONOUR

The following interesting story was written for the Examiner by Signaller John R. Heron, a Peterborough boy at the front with the 5th Battery, C.F.A. Signaller Heron represents a Canadian artillery man at the front as telling the story, which it might be added, is founded on fact. The incident described actually occurred, although Signaller Heron was not involved in it.

Thomas Bertrand,
Signaller C. F. A.

He gave himself for an enemy, and died for Britain's Honour.

He came to us one morning, early—so early that even the cook was not up, and that's going some, before me. His name—well, at first glance, it might have been Algernon, with a "de" to finish it off; but he was just plain "Tom." He actually blushed as he told us shyly: "I was christened Thomas, but all my friends call me Tommy." Of course it was a foregone conclusion that he should be the sport of the camp, and well, I don't blame the fellows.

You see, Tommy was not at all ordinary; he stood 5 ft. 11 in. without the thick army boots, and had broad muscular shoulders which were the envy of all. But his face—well, it wasn't simply handsome; it was pretty. His eyebrows, dark and beautifully arched, caught one's attention and compelled a second glance into his clear gray-blue eyes, which seemed to be hidden by his exquisite lashes, for all the war's like a maiden—bashfully; for are not all maidens bashful? But I'm no hand at describing charms, so we'll sidetrack the "gush".

Well, he'd been sent up to the Battery Staff—with the Artillery—as a relief for a signaller who had left us to take his commission, and I felt sorry for the poor kid the first day—really the fellows piled it on too thick. He knew more than any of them about any subject except war and they assailed him at his weak point, telling him some yarns about the trenches which were fearful and wonderful. Of course I heard all over again the wonders of Ypres (embellished until I could recognise very little of the original), and they end by telling Bertrand (did I tell you that was our chum's second name) that the fighting here next Spring would be ten times as heavy as Ypres. Of course this information is not to be found in any official communique, but we had to dish up something special for the benefit of the new recruit.

That evening I was to go to our trench station, and Tommy was told to come with me. I was rather pleased with the arrangement as I thought he would have a quieter time with me and I could put him into the run of things.

Well, Tom and I seemed to hit it off together, right from the beginning; we had the same tastes, the same viewpoints, and he was one of those fellows with whom one feels at home right from the word "go". Against all military precedent we soon got to calling each other by our front names, and by the time we set out for the trench we were like old pals.

At 4 o'clock I told Tommy to get ready, and half an hour later I returned to find him waiting, all harnessed up. I really had to laugh—he was loaded like a pack mule, little parcels stuck all around him.

"What have you in that bundle?" I asked, indicating a monstrous roll on his back.

"Blankets," he replied; "I have five, but I'm leaving one here, I guess four will be enough."

That shows you how much he knew about war. I persuaded him to take the one blanket and leave the four. I also took from him an overcoat, a leather jacket and two pairs of socks.

Well, we got under way at last and say, I did have some time! He did not know the whistling of a bullet from the squeak of a rat. Once I got over a bit to his left just as a star shell burst, and after I had 'flopped' down I looked at him—he was fully twenty seconds longer than I in getting down. A bullet whizzed between us, and after that my own shadow was not quicker than he. Once when we were crawling over a particularly bad stretch of ground he said "Say, Jim, wouldn't Darwin be pleased to see us now?"

It took me a few minutes to get his rift, but then I just had to roll on the ground and laugh. Really we did appear to have the creeping, crawling, wriggling, propensities of the monkey.

We got into our dugout—six feet by four—and took over the station O.K. During the first night our line was broken and I left Tom in the dugout while I went out to repair it. I was gone about two hours, having had to take cover several times as Fritz turned a machine gun on me or had a little sniping practice at my flyfling figure. You see I had to run along behind five trenches with the wire in my hand—now on the parapet—now in no man's land. It's nice work, with star shells going up all around.

Well, when I arrived back Tom my said: "Jim, I haven't known you long, but if ever I prayed, I prayed now that you'd come back." He was in dead earnest—afraid I'd been plugged.

Things were quiet that night and most of next day, but on our second night in the trench the enemy had out a working party on the barbed wire. We heard the thud, thud of their picks as they dug holes for the posts. These working parties are nightmare-like. Sometimes a man near you gives a little cough and his shovel clatters against his pick, and when you get to him you find he will not use either again.

On this particular night we discovered their working party and sent up a couple of star shells. Can you see the picture? About a hundred men working busily when little points of light shot up, bursting in the air and showing them up like sunlight. They drop flat and hug the ground while our machine guns and rifles hail death amongst them. The strain is awful; if they remain still some may escape, but they cannot; their nerve is broken; they leap to their feet and run for the parapet, run as only death-hunted men can run. Some are within a yard of safety—another leap only between them and the trench—but that relentless machine-gun spurts its bullets continuously, and not one of the working party escapes. Then, for a time, it may be ten minutes, silence reigns—it seems as if Death, himself, has stayed his hand, quelled at the richness of his harvest and the insensate stupidity of these beings his plaything. And then peals out his cynical laugh as a rifle cracks, starting him again on his mission of destruction.

By morning, the wounded had all been brought in—ours and theirs—(for they had caught one of our patrols during the night). Of course mistakes had been made—each side had fired on the others as they got out to pull in the wounded—but here, in Flanders, men are jumpy and guns go off quickly. They had all been brought in—all, that is, except one, a German, lying badly wounded half way between the two trenches. Two of their lads getting out to bring him in were shot by some of our fellows who were rather jumpy. It was a pity of course, but things like that will happen in wartime. The poor fellow out there was moaning piteously and tossing about from side to side in pain. It was terrible to see. Suddenly Tommy was beside me whispering, "You're a good sort, Jim, although I've not known you long. You know the photo I showed you last night? I have it in my pocket—send it to her and tell her how it happened. Good-bye!" And with that he was gone. Before he got over the parapet he was plugged, but they did not kill him. He went on doggedly straight to the wounded German, while both sides gazed on him, astonished.

He reached hte German, and, picking him up staggered on to the German trench. And then they understood. Half of the men in the trenches to both sides were out on the parapet cheering.

He reached the Germans and handed the wounded man over to his comrades. Then he saluted; but it was not over yet, for a German officer sprang out, and, taking off his own Iron Cross, he pinned it on Tommy's breast. The Germans cheered again as he saluted and turned back. Half way over he staggered a few times, then fell, and lay still. Several of us leaped the parapet to bring him in. He died out there in no man's land in my arms, whispering—but where do a man's thoughts turn when he is about crossing the Great Divide? We stood for a few minutes with bared heads and the German Officer stood up on the parapet to show his respect for a brave man.

He was buried with military honours and had the highest tribute a warrior can have amongst warriors, he was a "true white comrade."

I felt lonely that night as I returned to the Battery—something seemed to have gone out of my life. I felt bitter, too, as I passed along the silent roads past ruined homes and through the piled-up ruins of villages. Bitter towards those shirkers whom I would have put where Tommy was for one night—take them from their baseball games where they abuse the umpire from the stand knowing he is too far away to hit them—and set them down in a trench where I should have the pleasure of showing them around. The trench would have two feet of mud and water in the bottom of it, and in some places there would be holes four or five feet deep. Down the trench a wind would be blowing that pierced to the bone, and above its howling they would hear another noise which they would not understand, never having heard it before. They would cower in a corner, afraid of the bullets that whistled over, afraid of the naknown. Then I would say to them: "You hear that noise? No, it's not the wind I mean, but that swishing noise passing over your heads. You hear that thudding in the earth in front and that moaning in the air above? It is not the thud of a baseball flying off a bat, nor its whistle through the air. No, it's not baseball they're playing now; you are not waching a game you cannot play yourselves; you are watching the game of "death"; and now you cannot jump up and abuse the umpire. You are watching the game that others played while you at home were playing pool—now you are watching the game of man against man, and the stake is "life."

Here we walk and talk and sleep and eat with death. How do you like it?"

"You see that flash down the trench there, and you hear that roar? Just come with me and we'll see what has happened down beyond that traverse. No, that was not a paper bag burst down there—it made you more uneasy than the cinema representation of a coal box! You have never seen a dead man? Your face is white, is it, and your teeth chattering, and your hands wet with sweat, you with the patent shoes and nice choice in socks? You can guess what awaits you around the corner? You don't want to go? No, I know you don't; there's a sickness in your stomach and a weakness in your knees, and you would sell your soul—if you have one at all—to be rid of that eternal whis overhead. But what of the others—those lads who are strewn over Flanders with their few inches of earth over them; and what of the lads who haven't even that?

What of those thousands who are lying staring up at the sky with eyes that will not look any more at the baseball game, although they liked it as much as you. Why are they stiff and stark? Why should they be thus, for you?

Ah! Here we're at the traverse, where we saw the flash. What are you stopping for? Step carefully and you won't touch him; but as you pass just look in his eyes and ask yourself why you have not been running the same risks as he has done. Why are you not standing in these trenches fighting for Britain's honour as a man should stand if he would hold his head up and count himself a man?

You would not like to lie there with your eyes fixed like that—you might be hit, yourself, you say, and you would not like that. No, but do you think HE liked it more?

Here is another—and another—all men who have played the game while you were creeping about at home in safety. You have so many friends you say?—here give me a hand to make this poor fellow comfortable for he will not see the sun rise. Hush! What is he trying to whisper through the blood which almost chokes him. There's your answer—he has friends—it is a girl's name he is trying to say.

That girl has something to be proud of, but God help the girls who depend on you for protection. I wonder they are not ashamed to be seen with you now, when every decent man who is fit, is out fighting for them. That's how I felt towards the shirkers that night. As I thought of Tommie and the other brave fellows I know in the first line trench in Flanders. Yes, Tommie was a good sort; in three short days he came and went, but his memory has not passed. And though he was not much of a soldier, as far as training went, he died as a Briton should—a soldier and a man. Oh, don't make me tired saying some have to keep the home fires burning. That's all very well, but every day of this war there are hundreds of sad and weary eyes gazing impatiently into these dying embers—hopeless until the Hun is beaten.

Now, what are you going to do about it. I've hit straight from the shoulder, but out here we have no time to waste saying polite things and pretending we're not what we are.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

MILITARY NEWS

ter will soon be able to send off another supply of socks to the trenches.

Over sixty pairs have been sent this week. They were divided between Sergt. D. J. Lawrie, Pte. Peter Wallace, Pte. Trevor Cuffe, Trooper McKinley, Gunner Orme Cavanagh and Pte. Harry Wood, with the request that they would distribute them amongst the Peterborough men in their vicinity.

Delayed Separation Allowances.

While the number of seperation allowances assigned to wives and dependents of enlisted men has been fairly well kept up and adjusted, there are a number still in abeyance. Will all those whose allowances have not, so far, been adjusted, call or send word to the local office of the Patriotic Fund. The matter will be at once advised to Ottawa in the hope that speedy adjustment may follow.

Experience of those engaged in taking on and making these allowances is that nearly every case delayed is due to lack of information. The allowance is granted within certain well defined lines. In order that the claim may be considered, with a view of its ultimate adoption, full information should be supplied. It is remarkable the number of cases in which the claim is clouded. Were all cases straight cases, such as the claim of a wife whose husband has enlisted, all would be plain. But claims are put forward in which the woman concerned is neither wife or widow. Possibly her husband has left her, practically deserted her, and the claim is based on the enlistment of a son. Then the difficulty, in the case of there being more than one son, was the enlisted man her whole support. Investigation and enquiry can only reveal the facts.

The military people at the local Armouries are not to blame because allowances are delayed. The cards are filled in and forwarded. But the applicants have not supplied information and it takes some experience to draw out the conditions which should be forwarded, and which, if stated, would enable the Department to determine.

The Patriotic Office has taken up and successfully had completed over fifty of such cases, and the only reason that may be assigned for the success is that the proper information is patiently, skillfully and convincingly drawn out and presented. The Department will, in all cases, do what is fair, and often what is sympathetic, if the data is given and the adjustment left to the good offices of the officials.

If there be any still delayed, some help can be given in the way of adjustment by calling at the Patriotic Office.

Capt. R. E. Layfield, Quartermaster of the 80th Battalion, is home for the week-end.

The Pioneers have challenged Sergt. Watson's team to a game. The challenge reads hockey, but from the following line up it looks as if the Pioneers wanted to play football:

Goal—G. Moore.
Backs—P. Walton and E. Koster.
Half Backs—P. Lavery, T. Allen and W. W. Bailey.
Forwards — E. W. Bailey, T. Bacon, E. Manley, and W. Welling.

The recruiting station looks very nice.
There is lots of company, I mean mice;
The noise of them is dreadful here,
They're like the Germans full of fear.
Last night in the office I fell asleep,
The mice they woke me playing round my feet;
Two friends in mufti came in and sat down,
To talk about their King and their Crown.
I said boys enlist and take your place,
Shame not your flag but come face to face
To our own dear Empire you can't be too loyal.
These German cruelties should make your blood boil.
Fight for your liberties the call is to you,
Turn out for your freedom and don't look so blue;
Enlist, it's your duty, don't make up any more,
Don't wait for conscription to knock at your door.

Hocken Now Orange Order Grand Master

Order Decided to Leave Temperance Entirely With the Government

HAMILTON, March 11.—The Grand Orange Order of Ontario West have decided to leave the question of prohibition entirely in the hands of the Ontario Government, according to a resolution adopted at the conference. The resolution was to the effect that "in view of the stand taken by the order in leading all fraternal orders in opposition to the liquor traffic, and in view of the fact that the temperance people themselves seem satisfied with the premises of Premier Hearst, the order wishes to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Premier, particularly in view of the advanced temperance legislation already carried out."

The following officers were elected: Grand Master ex-Mayor H. C. Hocken, of Toronto, defeated Lieut.-Col J. I. Hartt; M. P.P. of Orillia who was then chosen Deputy Grand Master over Lieut.-Col Donald Sharpe, M.P.P., of Welland. Col Sharpe was elected Associate Deputy Grand Master Battalion, C.E.F., now quartered at Quebec The office of Grand Chaplain went to Rev. H. D. Peacock, chaplain of the 83rd Battalion, C. E. Pastor Russell At The Grand

PASTOR RUSSELL OF BROOKLYN TABERNACLE, N.Y.

Pastor Russell, the great author and lecturer, President of the International Bible Students' Association, and Pastor of the New York City Temple congregation, will deliver a lecture next Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Grand Opera House, his topic being, "The Battle of Armageddon." The Brooklyn Pastor comes at the invitation of the Associated Bible Students of this city.

Pastor Russell's recent public utterances have attracted special attention because of the fact that, during the past forty years he has frequently expressed the conviction, based upon the interpretation of Bible prophecy, that a time of unprecedented trouble was impending and would become world-wide. The time set by this Bible scholar was the autumn of last year. Since the outbreak of hostilities in Europe he has been delivering a series of lectures specially relating to the war and Bible prophecies respecting its outcome. His address here next Sunday is one of these.

The present conflict in Europe is but the prelude to an even greater struggle, according to Pastor Russell's view. He believes the following conflict will be largely the results of the poverty and distress occasioned by the war and the discontent these cause, finally leading to social revolution and anarchy. This succeeding conflict, the Pastor declares, is clearly marked in Bible prophecy and termed, "the battle of Armageddon," and described by Christ as "a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." This final trouble, the venerable preacher believes, will prepare the world for, and usher in the long-promised reign of "peace on earth and good will among men" at the hands of the Prince of Peace.

Pastor Russell is an independent religious worker, and has won world-wide distinction as a defender of the Bible and because of his "anti-hell fire" preaching. He is a familiar figure here, having visited this city a number of times during his long career of public life as author and lecturer. During the past year, the Pastor created quite a sensation by the launching of a moving-picture exhibition detailing the story of the Bible from the creation to "Paradise restored." This progressive method of carrying on evangelistic work has proven eminently successful according to the report of the Bible Students' Association which financed the production. The drama, styled "Creation," has been shown during the past year throughout this country and Canada. Many millions have witnessed the production.

As usual, it has been announced that no admission charge will be made at this lecture, and no collection taken.

NO REAL FEAR THAT HUNS WILL BREAK LINE

Lady Henry—the latter, as is known, one of the most prominent and popular figures in the political society of London, and formerly Miss Lewisohn of New York—whose only son has been missing since the Battle of Loos. Bath is the most eloquent survival to-day of the eighteenth century, crowded with lofty, spacious and beautiful old-fashioned houses; and in every nook and corner some survival by medallion or statute of the days of Sheridan and the world that figures in "The Rivals" and "The School for Scandal." After half a century of more or less eclipse, Bath is coming to its own again; for the closing of Carlsbad and other German and Austrian resorts has thrown the Britisher back on the water cure towns of his own country — quite as good, though, perhaps, not so amusing as those of the Continent; and Bath has got a greater claim, owing to the discovery by Sir William Ramsay, our greatest scientist, of radium in its waters. I can speak from personal experience of the waters and baths of the old city as the best I have met yet.

SIGNS OF THE WAR.

But not even an hourly occupation in water drinking and baths could keep me oblivious of the ever present and ever haunting war. Every waiter—except a young Swiss—who attended at table, wore an armlet as proof that he had offered himself for military service. The street cars, as everywhere else, had young women as conductors, and women as ticket collectors met every train. Something new to me, however, and entirely new to English life, was the motive I found on several offices and outside several shops, that they were closed for the lunch hour. If there be anything on which the Englishman prided himself as being different from the less active foreigner, it was that his business never stopped during business hours, and that lunch was never allowed to interfere with business. But shortness of hands was plastered all over the town as the explanation of this extraordinary new departure. It was noticeable also, that there were no young men to be seen in the streets, except those who wore the armlet. Bath has become a city of women and old men; and the same is true of almost every town in the country.

PRIOR PARK.

The Germans certainly are giving us plenty to do, as I discovered when I went outside to one of the breezy heights that surround Bath. I found myself in a gigantic building called Prior Park, with a vast park. The building has a curious history. A Bath citizen, Allen by name, who began life in humble circumstances and then attained wealth, conceived the ambition of showing what splendid building material there was provided in the stone in which Bath is so abundant, conceived this lordly pleasure house built with somewhat megalomaniac amplitude, with the result that there is a big pile with vast halls, tremendous basements and two or three chapels, one of them a perfect gem. There is also a theatre — one of the daintiest I have ever seen. The building was once used as a Catholic boarding school, and several high ecclesiastics lived and died and are buried there. No school, still less an individual, could keep up a building so enormous; so for the last fourteen years the place has remained untenanted. Now comes the war, and carpenters, plumbers, and builders are engaged in turning into a receptacle, mainly for Canadian soldiers. The chapels are spared, but every other nook and corner is filled with beds for the wounded, the convalescent, the discharged men gathered here before starting for their homes in Canada, there to confront life with wounded bodies and souls. From one of the Canadian officers in charge I heard thrilling stories of the sensations of the battlefield, spoken of by all returning soldiers with still vivid horror of its ghastly accomplishments, and especially of the indescribable suspense and mental torture of lying for hours under the hell storm of shell fire. The story thrilled me with awe.

A TEMPORARY HOSPITAL.

And then I went back to Parkwood, the country house where my friends, the Henrys, dwell. Like the good people they are, they are finding some relief and consolation for their own loss by attending to the griefs of others; and they have turned a beautiful house in their grounds into a temporary hospital. Here for the last eighteen months of the war the wounded have found a refuge, and I have paid a visit every time I was at Parkwood to this asylum. If I could honestly have avoided talking to the poor fellows I would gladly have done so; for every time I have paid a visit I have gone away with a lump in my throat. Pathetic these wounded soldiers are. You might imagine you were visiting a public school, where football was the nearest approach to encounter, instead of an asylum for lads who had already stood the test of the unspeakable agonies of modern warfare. Some of them were in bed; but the majority were at the graphophone, or singing loudly choruses to the ragtime music played by a young lady who came to entertain them; and many of these were laughing and talking as though they had never confronted death. But if you talk to them and study their faces, you see underneath the ineffaceable mementoes of the agonies through which they have passed. There is a strained look in most of their eyes. Those who remain in bed look, of course, still more pathetic, for they have their moments of acute suffering and you hear of ghastly wounds on the body, in the legs, on the head—all borne with patience, not much referred to, and when spoken of the lad always adds something about making the best of things. And then I thought of the handsome lads I had seen in Paris with either a leg or an arm gone, and compelled to limp through life thus mutilated. And then on top of that rose the gigantic vision of hundreds of thousands of such lads, walking through the streets of nearly every town and village of the Europe of to-day.

Now and then you saw not a youth, but a man approaching the forties; with bald patches already on their heads; without the glowing and unconquerable hopefulness of youth. And yet these men had gone forth to do battle for their country—unasked, uncoerced, simply because of their love for their soil. Quieter, of course, in manner, less jubilant, more resigned than the youngsters, these middle-aged men made a profound appeal to my feelings.

STORY OF A YOUNG OFFICER.

And then to complete my experience I returned to Parkwood, and there found a young officer — a nephew of Sir Charles Henry—who had been allowed to return for a week from the trenches. I remember the night after the declaration of war seeing this lad pursuing his father—whose only son he is—begging to be allowed to go and fight for his country; he was not more than a month or two over eighteen at the time. His poor father looked worried, and the mother even more worried; but the lad persisted, and he had to go. And now I found him after eighteen months of war still a child in some things, but how much also of a man. I stopped up half the night listening to this boy's tale of his adventures. The language of the young soldier is quite a vernacular of its own. Its main difference from the language of the ordinary man in civilian life is that it describes the ghastliest things in language of almost studied — except that it seems so unconscious—frivolity. "One day," says the boy, "you'd have died with laughing"; and then he describes as a laughter provoking achievement some horrible moment when every officer and every man were face to face for some minutes with death. As for instance the final approach of the mine which the Germans had been preparing for days; the thud-thud of the approaching miner; then the firing of the charge; then by some miraculous chance its failure to explode, and the loud and laughing mockery of the saved Tommies at the failure of their enemy.

A curious feature I noted in this lad's conversation—as in that of most of the lads from the trenches—was the complete absence of personal feeling. They almost seem to love the Germans who are trying to kill them, and whom they are trying to kill every moment of the twenty-four hours. So much is this the case that there have to be the strictest orders against any fraternising between the troops. "Are these orders carried out?" I asked. "Certainly," said little Clarence Henry—that is the name of my young soldier friend—"I saw a sergeant degraded and given two years' imprisonment because he pulled up with a German soldier." Once only did I see the face of the boy become overcast, and that was when he described seeing two spies caught; one in a church tower, from which he had been signalling by moving the hands of the clock; another who had been showing lights. "It was dreadful," said the lad, with something like a thrill in his voice, "to see two men, young and robust, and to know that in a couple of hours they would be corpses." And then he wound up by the characteristic jibe of the soldier to the politician: "We don't hate each other; we don't want to fight each other—we could shake hands to-morrow if it weren't for you politicians in London and Berlin."

I was a bit shocked at the responsibility for all that dread carnage that was thrown upon my shoulders as upon those of others; but then I re-read some passages from Treitschke and Bernhardi, and my purpose was strong again. It is they and men like them—the Crown Prince one of the worst of them—who have proclaimed that war is the highest, the best, the most enduring of human pursuits; and I felt strong again. We must war to the end; for thus only can we destroy now the gospel of war.

RHEUMATISM A MYSTERY

Unless Rooted Out of the System It Grows Worse and Worse

Some diseases give immunity from another attack, but rheumatism works just the other way. Every attack of rheumatism invites another. Worse than that it reduces the body's power so that each attack is worse than the one before. If any disease needs curing early it is rheumatism but there are few diseases physicians find more difficult to treat successfully. Wet weather does not cause rheumatism as was once thought, though weather conditions may start the aches and pains. Rheumatism is now known to be dependent upon the blood condition, and medical authorities agree that the blood becomes thin with alarming rapidity as rheumatism develops. Maintaining the quality of the blood is, therefore, a reasonable way of preventing and curing rheumatism. That it works out in fact is shown by the beneficial results which follow a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich blood which drives out the rheumatic poison, and while the blood is kept in this condition there is no danger of the trouble returning. Mr. W. T. Fell, Palermo, Ont., says: "I was attacked with a trouble which was ultimately pronounced rheumatism. Often I was barely able to crawl into bed, and seldom able to do a full day's work. In this condition I doctored for a year, absolutely getting no better. Then I consulted another doctor whose chief consolation was that unless I could get rid of the trouble I would be a cripple for life. He prescribed dieting, and I doctored with him for at least six months, but instead of getting relief I became weaker and less able to get around. Then I decided to try a doctor in Toronto, and was under his treatment for about four months with no better results. I gave up the doctors and tried other remedies which were equally futile. Then one day our store keeper sent me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, saying that if they did not help me I need not pay for them. I took them and then got some more and found they were helping me. I probably used $10.00 worth before I felt fully cured but they did cure me and were cheap as compared with the other treatments which did not help me. The cure was made several years ago, and I have not had a twinge of rheumatism since. To-day I am well and strong and I believe I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE 93rd BATTALION TEAM BEAT LINDSAY SOLDIER RIVALS BY 6 TO 1

Khaki Teams Played Interesting Game at Brock St. Rink Last Night—A Small Crowd Saw Some Pretty Hockey by the Soldiers

LOCALS HAD NO TROUBLE

The 93rd Battalion had little trouble in beating the 109th Battalion team last night at Brock St. Rink, the local soldiers winning from the Lindsay khaki brigade by 6 goals to 1. They were ahead 4 to 0 at the end of the first half, and 5 to 0 at the close of the second, and were never in much trouble. The Lindsay aggregation trotted out a good team too, including Mitchell, Flavelle, Mills and Welsh, of this year's Lindsay juniors, and Sandercock and Chuck Carew, of last year's Midgets. It was a good battle all the way, with some of the prettiest hockey of the season sandwiched in. The 109th showed some pretty combination, but the Peterborough soldiers had it on them all through in speed and stick handling and came back so fast that the Lindsay combination was broken up pretty well before they could carry the rubber in close. The 93rd had a four-goal lead at the end of the first period, and should have increased it considerably in the second, when for one period of five minutes they had the visiting team penned in at their own end of the rink. The homesters showed perhaps more combination than they have all season, besides performing brilliantly individually.

Claude Montgomery, the Electric junior goaler, was in the nets for the 93rd, and the youngster played a star game, blocking and clearing in fine fashion. His brother, Sergt. Montgomery, was in great form last night, although early in the game he received a crack between the eyes with the puck that made him take the court. The smash was enough to keep most men out of the game, but he was back as soon as he had the cut dressed. Sexton, Windsor, Blewett and Ketchum all contributed some fine hockey, and Evans, the Electric rover, did good work in spite of lack of practice.

For Lindsay, Carew and Mills at rover and centre, respectively were the pick of the advance guard, while Flavelle and Sandercock, the defence pair, gave a good account of themselves.

Pete Spratt was the master of ceremonies, and the teams lined up as follows:

109th	Goal	93rd
Mitchell		C. Montgomery
	Defence
Sandercock		R. Montgomery
Flavelle		Evans
	Rover
Carew		Sexton
	Centre
Mills		Windsor
	Right Wing
Welsh		Blewett
	Left Wing
Higginbotham		Ketchum

The 93rd pressed from the first face-off, and gave the 109th defence some busy moments right off the reel. Soon after the opening Ketchum, who played on the defence for the first period, broke away and passed to Evans, who centred to Windsor, and the latter pushed goal No. 1 past Mitchell. A little later Montgomery got away for one of his speedy rushes. His shot was blocked, but Windsor followed in fast and slammed the rubber through. Soon after Montgomery was hurt, and had to retire for repairs, the 109th dropping Higganbotham. Blewett scored for the 93rd a little later on a bullet shot from the side, and also bagged No. 4 in much the same way.

The 93rd only got one goal in the second period, although they should have had a few more. Early in the period they drove the visitors back on the defensive and held them there while they poured in an avalanche of shots. Some of them missed by inches, and those that were on were blocked by Mitchell. Finally Evans and Windsor got away together, and the former, taking a pass, went in close and shot a beauty into the top corner of the nets. Just at the close of the period a sparring match between Windsor and Flavelle provided some excitement. Nobody was hurt, but it was hot while it lasted.

The 109th played their best hockey in the last period. They uncovered some good combination, and gave Montgomery some busy moments, but he was practically unbeatable. The 93rd scored their last goal half way through the period, Ketchum finding the nets on a pass from Blewett. The 109th's only counter was scored after time was up. The timer's gong had rung, and the timers had started to cross the ice when Sandercock secured in front of the 93rd nets. Referee spratt "had a heart," and let "Sandy" have his shot before he rang his bell to wind up the game. The drive beat Montgomery for the only 109th score of the night.

The 93rd will play a return game in Lindsay next week.

SARNIA WIN THE INTERMEDIATE TITLE

Sprung a Surprise on Belleville Beating Easterners by Ten Goals and Winning the Round---Grover Halpin Scored the Winning Goal For the Champs

SARNIA, March 10.—The Sarnia intermediate O.H.A. team to-night overcame the lead obtained at Belleville by the septette of that city and scured the championship by one goal when they defeated the visitors here this evening in the best game of hockey ever staged in the local Arena, the score standing 14 to 4. With only a couple of minutes to play, Grannary, of Sarnia, made a brilliant rush down the ice, and, falling within a few feet of the goal, made a poke at the puck and it went into the nets. Halpin, on a beautiful play by himself, passed in the last goal just a few seconds before the final bell rang.

The game started off with a grand rush for the first two minutes; the teams see-sawing from one goal to the other, until Grannary scored. Finch, from a mix-up in front of the goal, notched the next in eight minutes. Jack Dore then made a fine play down the ice and landed the puck in the nets. Belleville then came to life, and Whalen notched one, the Sarnia defence being absent. Hilman, on a pass from Grannary, scored in 15 minutes, and Belleville ended the period with Tinkle scoring, making the score 4 to 2 for Sarnia.

The second period started in fast, and Hilman, on a pass from Dore, scored in 30 seconds. Some fine combination work was then put on by Sarnia, and Dore, on a pass from Hilman, scored in 12 minutes. The Sarnia defence was now moved well forward, and the defence line was left to Dwyer in goal, but he was equal to the task. A nice play by Grannary on a pass from Finch scored another. The period ended 7 to 2.

Hilman, in five minutes of play in the third period, secured another goal, and after a few minutes' play Whalen was hurt and Bob Finch was taken from the local line-up to even up. Tinkle then got the third goal for the visitors, and Hilman, coming through the defence of Belleville, scored his next goal and set 1,200 people howling to their utmost capacity. Halpin, on a fine individual play, scored; also Dore. Then Belleville secured their last goal, Tinkle scoring. Goals by Grannary and Finch, followed by another by Grannary, tied the score on the round, and by Halpin gave Sarnia the championship.

The Sarnia fans were unable to restrain themselves on the last goal by Halpin, and as the bell sounded they carried the conquering heroes from the ice to the rooms. The band in the meanwhile had lined up and paraded through the streets of the city, a thousand or more men cheering loudly. The game was well fought by the visitors, but the better team won out. The work of both teams was clean and fast, and won the appreciation of the crowd. The line-up:

Referee Bernhardt handled the game in a very capable manner. The stars were Symons, Tinkle, Whitty and Connelly, and the whole Sarnia team, with a strong light on Dwyer.

Peterborough has two representatives on the champions—Joe Dwyer and Grover Halpin starring for Sarnia.

Canadian Lines in France Not Bad Place To Live In

"Wee Bit Monotonous at Times, But on Whole We Don't Fare Badly," Says Soldier—Good Food, Warm Clothing and Four Packages of Cigarettes a Week—Army Service Corps Doing a Wonderful Work

LONDON, March 10.—During the retreat from Warsaw in the summer of last year a number of critics of repute assured us that armed forces were the only objective in war. Others held that "the greatest secret of the war was to make oneself master of the lines of communications"—the lines leading from the bases to the army field. Of these two divergent views, one inclines to the opinion, as the result of a recent trip to the Canadian forces, that the latter is at least of equal importance with that of the critics.

Our first realization of the supreme mastery possessed by us came when crossing the Channel on Monday. From the time we left a certain English port until we reached the French coast we saw great activity prevailing everywhere, vessels of every description and type passing to and fro, as if conditions were quite normal. To the achievement of conveying thousands of troops across must be added the hundreds of civilians that come and go each day, and the thousands of tons of stores, munitions, and victuals that are transported both to Flanders and France every day of the week.

Work of the A.S.C.

Travelling from the port of disembarkation to Canadian headquarters, some 9 miles away, we saw something of the wonderful activities of the Army Service Corps, who complete command they enjoyed of the communication lines, and the strategy they employed in rushing material to the firing zone. Literally thousands of wagons lined every road and unpretentious lane for miles at a stretch. Guns of every description and calibre, from the heavy howitzers to the new Lewis marvel, were there by the hundred, in no few cases ingeniously hidden from view to elude the vigilant airmen. At certain points of the route, too, we noticed a number of sheds dotted here and there, curious-looking establishments, which we were informed were utilized by the A.S.C. for the temporary storage of material. They serve most important functions in this titanic organization. Formerly, several days elapsed before it was possible to get either men or munitions to the firing line, but to-day, owing to the command of the avenue of traffic, as well as to the presence of the motor wagon, men or provisions leaving London terminus, say, at twelve noon, can be in the trenches by eight the same evening.

Artillery Excellence.

The first item in our programme was a visit to see the artillery at work. Arriving at the chest of a certain hill where they established themselves months ago, the party were shown to a point of vantage from which they were able to see the German trenches about a mile and a half away to our left. "Granny" "Aunt Lizzie" and "Mother", as the 15-inch, 12-inch and 9.2 guns we are affectionately called, were all doing their bit. "Mother", if anything being rather more active than the rest. Out of twenty shells which she fired, probably for our benefit, no fewer than fifteen found their mark, and dealt the Hunnish no uncertain destruction, tearing his parapets and trenches into smithereens. Every two or three minutes orders were given to fire at such and such an angle and range. In a few seconds one heard the terrific boom of 9.2, and a second later the exultant voice of the battery major. It had got home, and nothing else mattered.

Gunners Enthusiastic.

The methods employed in finding the range are diverse and ingenious. One of the officers jubilantly declared that they had the enemy batteries located to a ninety, and that quite recently his guns had succeeded in silencing them on many occasions, thanks to a plentiful supply of H.E.'s. One was greatly impressed with the manner in which the gunners went about their work. They were no mere automatons, firing here and there in mechanical style, as if purely from a sense of duty. On the contrary, they displayed the greatest enthusiasm and resourcefulness in all they did, now exchanging suggestions with one another, and now devising fresh means of irritating the Boche and of bringing their already destructive power more effectively to bear upon him. Were it possible to speak more in detail of the role the Canadian artillery are playing and the impression they are making on the enemy, it is certain that every heart in the Dominion would be a thrill of pride.

Trouble for the Foeman.

Leaving the artillery, we drove to General Turner's instructional schools, where we found the men listening to lectures and practising new methods of trench warfare, grenading and the like. Here again it is naturally not permissible even to hint at the devices that await the enemy when he attempts to advance, but even if ever he does succeed in rushing the Canadian trenches, he will find himself in a most uncomfortable plight, and with all his trouble yet to come. Later in the day we launched with General Turner, whom we found highly optimistic over things generally, and from his headquarters saw an Ontario regiment marching by to the strains of their regimental band. The battalion had only recently finished their period of duty in the trench es, but they looked more like having spent a month on the Riviera. Without exception they looked splendid, bronzed, in robust health, healthier than the men usually found in our camps this side of the Channel, and they marched with well-measured pace and beautiful precision.

Still Bombarding Ypres.

For some reason or other our original programme was cut short by exactly half, making it necessary for us to cover the ground within the limitations of Tuesday and Wednesday. By way of compensation, however the party were allowed the unique opportunity of visiting the trenches, and of staying the night of Wednesday in them, each correspondent going to one of five brigades. The day was an ideal one for sightseeing, the sky being cloudless and as blue as the hyacinth. On our way to that mysterious place known as the "Front" we saw gleaming in the distant haze the almost ghost like white towers of Ypres, which the enemy was still "straffing" in ridiculous fashion.

In the Trenches.

Driving ahead, we presently approached the communication lines, after passing through a veritable labyrinth of winding paths bearing such familiar names as Toronto, Winnipeg, Montreal, and Vancouver, all the time under the boom of our own and enemy guns, which made the air sibilant with their speech. The communication trenches we found proved a welcome change from the slush and mud of the roads we had just traversed. There was scarcely any mud to be seen, while for the most part they were perfectly dry. It was about six in the evening when we arrived in the firing line, an hour at which we learnt, that 'Granny' 'Aunt Lizzie' and 'Mother' were put to bed for the night. "You won't hear any more of them to-night," said my escort. In company with one of the majors, I was duly shown through the front line trench es, passing through Hyde Park, Regent street and Piccadilly.

Boys Kept Busy.

Everywhere I found the lads cheerful and as happy as sandboys, each man engaged on his own particular task. Some were doing sentry duty, others were busy rebuilding parapets which had been shattered by the Hymn of Hate the previous afternoon. Some again were standing high near the sandbags, peering in grim earnest towards the Bosche trenches, while others were comfy tucked up in their parlors, either enjoying a smoke, letter writing of playing some sort of game. As we approached what is known as the "Bull Ring" we were warned to be careful and to "duck low". Regent street is a bad enough place," said our informant, but Piccadilly is 'hot stuff'."

Dangerous Points.

And so it proved to be. These particular trenches, now occupied by eastern and western battalions are regarded as about the most dangerous in this part of the front. At Piccadilly, for instance, "No Man's Land," or "Canada's Land," as the men will quickly remind you, is only a distance of 265 yards across.

Conditions of trench life have improved greatly during the past few months, and the Canadian lines to-day the a pretty tolerable place to live in. "It gets a wee bit monotonous at times," said one of the men, "but on the whole we don't fare badly. We have plenty to eat, drink, and smoke, and there is always a good supply of warm, clean clothing available for us.

Day's Menu.

"For breakfast, about seven o'clock we have tea or cocoa, bacon and bread. Our dinner consists of a pound of good fresh beef, potatoes, and bread, or steak, potatoes, and bread and onions. For tea again we don't fare at all badly. We usually get bread and jam, biscuits and tea or cocoa, and on top of all that we get as many smokes as we can very well manage. Generally, we do our own cooking on our trenchfires, but when there is a shortage of cooks, our rations are brought to us already prepared. In addition to the four packets of cigarettes there are included in our regular rations each week we receive quite a lot from private sources.

A Hint.

"By the way," interjected one of the men, if you are writing to Canada about us, would you mind telling those good people out there who send us these nice things not to put chocolates and cigars in the socks they knit and send out to us. We don't like to write ourselves for fear they might misunderstand us, and think us ungrateful. But when they reach us out here the chocolates are usually dissolved away and the cigars are unsmokable."

The story used to be some months ago that the men practically lived on bully beef and biscuits in the trenches. I searched in vain for either of them, and was afterwards informed that not since the stirring days of Ypres, Festubert, and St. Eloi have they entered prominently into the daily menu.

The Night's Work.

The nightly round of trench life consists of one hour in every four doing duty as some sort. The other three the men spend in their dugouts. Most of these parlors are extremely comfortable, and in some cases have some pretension to luxury. In one of them, for instance, I found chairs, tables and even some curtains, (not more than seven cents a yard,) which the men proudly speak of as Early Victorian Chints.

During the two days we were privileged to be at the front the authorities tried to make them as profitable as possible, and our thanks are particularly due to Sir Max Aitken and Major Manley Sims, D.S.O., who proved to be a leader of the best type.

Price Before the War $650
Price After a Year of War $530

Why Are We Proud To Advertise This?

On the very day that war was declared the price of the Canadian Ford car was reduced $60.

But don't mistake the reason for this reduction. It was made in spite of the war—not because of it.

To understand this reason properly requires a knowledge of how prices of Ford cars are decided upon.

For instance, sometime before August 1, 1914, the Ford Canadian executives decided that the demand for Ford cars for the fiscal year starting Aug. 1st., would be about 30,000 cars. With this production it would be possible to reduce the price $60.

So an announcement was made to the public at large that the prices for Ford cars would be $60 less for the coming year.

It must be admitted that this was a remarkably sincere and substantial expression of faith in the prosperity of Canada and the Empire that promoted this Canadian firm to stake their entire business on the continued prosperity of their country.

Yet the Ford Canadian executives did not allow the war to interfere with their plans in the slightest degree. They considered the prosperity of Canada and the victory of the allied cause as assured.

This was emphasized a second time last August when the prices of Ford cars were again reduced by $60.

Profitably to manufacture the Ford Canadian car at this lowered price requires a production of 40,000 cars during the year ending Aug. 1,1916.

To quote from General Manager McGregor's own statement:

"If this company is able to manufacture and sell 40,000 cars between August 1, 1915, and August 1, 1916, we know that our buying capacity, the production efficiency of our manufacturing plant, and the distribution of overhead expense over a volume of this size will enable us to reduce our prices $60 per car and still make a reasonable profit for the company on this volume."

"If we are only able to manufacture and sell 20,000 cars, the reduction of $60 per car would not be warranted and this company would be operating at a loss. It is the profit on the additional 20,000 cars which makes the price reduction of $60 possible."

Although to build 40,000 cars means doubling last year's business, the Ford executives firmly believe that prosperity in Canada will be of such proportions this year as to create a demand for fully this much increased business. And the sales to date and the prospects for the next few months prove that they are correct in their belief.

Moreover this action becomes increasingly significant when the advance in price of raw materials is taken into consideration. At least one automobile manufacturer has been obliged to increase the price of his car on this account. And the Ford Company have again an added burden in the increased duty on the few raw materials that they are obliged to buy in the United States. But all of these increases have been absorbed into manufacturing costs by the Ford Company as part of its obligations and its duty in times such as these.

It is another significant fact that while prices on other products have so generally been increased, the prices of Ford cars have been decreased.

So the Ford Company of Canada is proud to advertise this reduction in Ford cars because it is a substantial, material proof of its faith in Canada.

The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., is a Canadian Company owned in great part by Canadians, and as such believes in Canada. It believes in her prosperity. It believes in her final triumph and the triumph of the Empire in this tremendous struggle that is now demanding so much from her manhood and from the faith and support of her people.

TO AIM AT RAISING $300 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND

Weeks of March 13th and 20th to be Known as "Patriotic Week" Among the Agents of the Prudential Insurance Co. of This District

The staff of the Peterborough district of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. of America held a staff meeting at their detached office at Oshawa yesterday, March 10th. Agents from detached points, comprising Whitby, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Campbellford, Oshawa, and the entire staff at Peterborough were present.

The meeting was addressed by Superintendent Stewart, of the Toronto district; Superintendent Lefever of the Kingston, Ont., district, and Superintendent Allen, of the Peterborough district, and it was decided to set aside the weeks of March 13th and 20th to be called "Patriotic Week," in which each agent will give a proportion of their special salary earnings, and set their aim to realize, if possible, $300 to present to the General Patriotic Fund at Ottawa, through the Peterborough branch. The meeting was very enthusiastic, and in the course of Superintendent Stewart's remarks, he stated that Toronto district held a special week last year, in which $600 was raised for the Patriotic Fund, and that they were also holding a special week this week to raise $1,000 for the Patriotic Fund.

Of course Toronto is a very much larger district, but the people can depend upon the staff of the Peterborough district to do all in their power for this fund, which everyone must realize is the least that can be done by any of the citizens of Canada.

Mrs. Pankhurst Gives Advice

Abandon Political Dignities She Tells People of Toronto

TORONTO, March 11.—Speaking before a large audience at the City Hall to-day Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, well known English suffragist, advised Canadians strongly to abandon all kinds of political disputes, particularly the bilingual question as between French and English speaking races in Canada. She said it was like playing the Kaiser's game to keep up such a party struggle.

BABY WORTH $30; MAN $4,000

Prof. Fisher of Yale Urging Social Insurance Bill, Fixes Values.

BOSTON, March 11.—Prof Irving T. Fisher of Yale, urging the adoption of a bill for compulsory social insurance for workmen, told the Committee on Social Welfare at the State House to-day that he estimated the value of a baby to be $30.

"And I estimate the value of an adult to be $4,000," he said. "The value of an aged person, by computations under the proposed system becomes a negative quantity.

"The bill would bring preventive medicine into every home. Last year there were 630,000 unnecessary deaths in the United States."

Annual Prohibition Convention To Be Held in Toronto March 25-30

Following the great demonstration in Toronto when the monster Prohibition petition was presented to the Government comes the Annual Prohibition Convention of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance, March 29th- 30th, which in view of present circumstances promises to be the most momentous of any that have preceded it.

Aside from the important question of the action to be taken by the Alliance at this critical juncture there will be many special features of more than passing interest. Among these are Hall and Summers. Probably the most effective up-to-date campaign novelty in the big prohibition fight in the States is the now celebrated dialogue-debate "Wet vs. Dry," by Hall and Summers. These men have campaigned in a great many states in the Union, and with phenomenal results. "Bryan is eloquent; Roosevelt is blustery; Taft is brainy; Wilson is logical. Then it is known that Franklin was wise: Jefferson diplomatic, and Hamilton Brilliant. Mix with them Billy Sunday enthusiasm, Sam Jones gruffness and Lincoln humour and pathos, and you have Hall and Summers, the ace of trumps of prohibition."

A Forceful Speaker.

Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, one of the outstanding leaders of the temperance movement in the United States, is the national attorney of the Anti-Saaloon League. Mr. Wheeler was for some years State Superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, and commanded the forces ther in some of their hardest fought battles. He new has charge of the legislative campaign at Washington, where a national prohibition bill is before Congress. Mr. Wheeler is a most forceful and attractive speaker and, coming, as he does, officialy representing that great fighting organization the Anti-Saloon League, his presence will be an inspiration and help to us in our campaign here.

A feature of the convention will be a military band concert by the full regimental band of the Queen's Own Rifles, under the leadership of Bandmaster B. H. Barrow. No band in Canada stands higher in military and musical circles than the Queen's Own. A great treat is in store for those who are privileged to be present at this concert.

The Programme committee has been particularly fortunate in securing the services of the eminent New York City Basso, Mr. Fred Butler, whom Dr. Wilbur Chapman describes as "the world's greatest interpreter of sacred music." Mr. Butler was formerly with the Alice Neilson Opera Company, but has in recent years given his time to temperance and evangelistic work.

Mrs. Butler will assist her talented husband as pianist, and the entire conduct of the convention singing will be under Mr. Butler's direction.

Prof. P. C. Jeffers, who has for several years presided over the grand organ in Massey Hall, will against assist in this way. Prof. Jeffers is in the front rank of Canadian organists, and his masterly handling of the Hall instrument has contributed greatly to the pleasure and effectiveness of the convention singing.

Every minute of this great convention programme will be chock full of interesting items. Special railway rates have been arranged.—Com.

Spring Planting of Flower Beds

By O. CABLE, 121 Smith Street

(By O. Cable, 121 Smith St.)

The most important thing in flower beds, is to prepare them properly. This should be done in the fall if possible. The beds should be dug out to a depth of not less than 1½ feet to 2 feet, the deeper preferred, as the better the bed is made, the longer it will keep in good condition. Begin to fill up with a good layer of rotten manure, finishing with good turfy loam which has been cut and stacked with an alternate layer of loam and manure, for at least six months. In spring the beds should be lightly worked up again before planting. The next item is what style of plants to use for your garden. There are the big massive growing plants, such as non-flowering and flowering Cannas, Castor beans, Salvias, Stevias, Foliage, and Achyranthus, which should be planted with the beans and non-flowering cannas in the back or centre, according to the shape of the bed, with the others planted in the order named above. A few of the best varieties of cannas are: King Humbert bronze foliage and large orange scarlet, flowers, Harry Laing, and Alphonse Bouvier, green foliage, and large scarlet flowers, Florence Vaughan, and Queen Charlotte, green foliage, with yellow and red flowers.

Then there are the old favourites, the geraniums, which will grow almost anywhere with a minimum amount of attention. The best varieties are L. C. Nutt, rich dark crimson flowers. John Doyle, bright scarlet. Madame Burney, bright pink. Mrs. Parker, soft pink. Mrs. Lawrence, salmon pink, and La Favorite, white. There are numerous other varieties which do well in beds, and we have the silverleaved variety (Madame Laberoi), which makes a fine bordering plant, either by itself or mixed with the small leaf achyranthus. Other plants which make good borders for geranium beds are blue lobelia, white allysum, dusty miller, (Whiteleaved Centaureas), and the small fibrous-rooted begonias with red flowers.

Next in order, we will take the annuals. These cover a host of plants, suitable for cutting purposes for the house, or for beautifying the garden. The one best known and most generally grown perhaps, is the aster, deservedly so, as there is no flower which has been brought to such perfection in the last few years as the aster. There are many types and varieties, but I will only mention a few of the better ones. There are the shaggy flowered ones, such as the Comet, Crego, and Ostrichplume, then there are the incurned varieties such as Perfection Semple's Branching, and the Queen of the Market, which latter perhaps is the earliest of all good asters. There are a very great many other annuals, which should be given a place in gardens according to the room you have, such as Stoke, Zinnias, Antirrhinums, Phlox, Verbenas, Marigolds and many other varieties too numerous to mention.

Some other varieties of flowers which should have a place in the garden wherever possible, are the Sweet Peas, Dahlias, Gladiolus, Tuberous Begonias and Pansies.

The sweet pea is one of the most popular flowers grown, and the dahlia one of the most showy, which should be more extensively grown. Tuberous begonias are in a class by themselves, with their fine leaves and finer flowers. These do best in a half shady spot, with well drained rich soil. When well grown, there is nothing looks more beautiful in the summer border. Gladiolus or Lovord lilies might be called the Queen of the Garden, as the rose is sometimes called the king. The gladiolus is increasing in popularity every year, as it does well in nearly any position in the garden, but for best results a sunny place is preferred. Some of the best varieties are: America, soft pink; Peace, white; Princeps, scarlet, and Mrs. Francis King, salmon scarlet.

Pansies are too well known to say much about, but the best plan is to sow the seed, the latter end of July, and then transplant when big enough to handle, to a bed, and transplant a second time to where they are to flower, either in the fall or early spring. Cover up with a few pieces of brush to protect them from the worst of the winter, and there is nothing which will give a much better display all through the spring and summer months. In closing I might say it pays to buy your seed from the best sources, even if you have to pay a trifle more for them. Also in regard to watering, never water flowering plants when the sun is shining strongly on them, as it spoils the bloom, and lessens the beauty of the garden.

Can Dead Man Be a Drunkard? Court to Decide

NEW YORK, March 11.—Does a man quit drinking liquor when he dies?

The courts of New York are called upon to answer this question in a fight over the will of Patrick Kerney, who provided that his son William should not inherit any of his property unless he stopped drinking before the father died. There were three other sons.

William died before the father did, but the will was left unchanged, and when, two years later, Patrick also joined his ancestors, William's heirs demanded a share of the estate on the ground that William had stopped drinking entirely before his father died. Dead men, they said, consumed no malt or spirituous liquors.

Counsel for the other heirs oppose this contention with the argument that mythology and general belief sanction the use of wine and other spirits on Olympus and similar places.

LORD DERBY'S SCHEME

Says Married Men Are Called Out Before He Expected.

Manchester, Eng., March 11.— The Earl of Derby, speaking here on the question of the enrollment of married men for military service, declared he regretted this early calling up of married men more than he could say.

"They were being called up long before they expected to be, and long before I expected, the *y*would be," he said, "but I should be casting a slur on their patriotism if I believed they were not going to come forward when called upon."

Lord Derby said he was certain that in good time they could get all the single men, but unless the married men came forward there might be a shortage which might be absolutely fatal.

SEEK SACRED GOLD CROWN.

Object of Austrians in the Invasion of Lombardy.

MILAN, March 11.—The treasure at Monza, about nine miles north of here, which the Austrians are credited with desiring to seize, is the iron crown of Lombardy. It is really a golden crown, but round the inside runs a strip of iron, reputed to be a nail of the true cross, brought back by the Empress Helena from Palestine.

The rulers of Lombardy are said to have been crowned with this piece ever since the seventh century. The Austrians carried it off in 1859, when they lost Lombardy, but it was restored in 1866, and has been the great sight of Monza cathedral since then.

VERDUN BATTLE BEGINS ITS FOURTH WEEK

CONDUCTORS HELD OUT SOLD TICKETS

Detective Testifies Against C. P. R. Conductors in Conspiracy Case.

OTTAWA, March 13. — The evidence of Sam Rosenthal, a Montreal Pinkerton detective, was completed in the case of the seven C.P.R. conductors and three others who are up for preliminary hearing on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the company by means of a ticket selling scheme.

The case continued Saturday. Rosenthal is the only witness heard so far. He claims to have unearthed a scheme wherein Harry Merson, of Ottawa and Montreal, was the leading figure in a conspiracy by which the conductors held out tickets they collected and sold them to Merson, who, in turn, sold them to persons travelling to and from Montreal. Rosenthal cited many occasions on which he had travelled on these tickets, which could be purchased for $1.80. On other occasions, when the conductors became familiar with him as one of the gang, he travelled to and fro with another detective, Maurice Wolff, by paying the conductor $1 apiece.

Wolff corroborated Rosenthal. The clearing house for the ticket scheme is alleged to have been the hat store of Abraham Pinco, one of the defendants.

The accused men are Conductors Silas Alexander, Mark Baker, Thos. Carter, Harry Dunham, Chas. A Merriam, Francis Nelson and Robt. J. Willoughby, and Messrs. Clarence Bortz, Harry Merson and Abraham Pinco.

Cuts Off Comrades Fingers While in the Air

Examiner Special:

British Headquarters, March 13.—The cool heroism of two British airmen was demonstrated recently when on of them amputated the fingers of another while under fire.

Lieutenants S— and Captain C. D. —were being chased by a German aeroplane commanded by Lieutenant Immelmann, who opened fire on the Englishmen with his machine gun and pierced their gasolene tank with his first shot.

The British aeroplane began to descend in a volplane, and the German fired again wounding the captain in the right arm and smashing two of his fingers. While the captain steered with his left hand, Lieutenant S— amputated the two fingers.

The airmen came down to safety, but as they had no more gasolene in their tank they were unable to set fire to their machine, which fell into the hands of the Germans.

BATTLE OF VERDUN ENTERS ITS FOURTH WEEK WITH HEAVY ARTILLERY FIGHTING

Around Forts Douaumont and Vaux, and at Bethincourt on the West Bank of the Meuse, in Preparation For Heavy Infantry Attacks

LONDON, March 13.—The battle of Verdun entered its fourth week to-day with reports of intense artillery battling around Forts Douaumont and Vaux, and at Bethincourt on the west bank of the Meuse, evidently in preparation for heavy infantry attacks. The Germans searched out the French front all day Sunday with a terrific hail of steel projectiles. The French accepted the cannonading as a forerunner of renewed attempts against Fort Vaux and positions northwest of Verdun, and made ready to meet the assaults. Despatches from Berlin to-day contained the first admisson from German sources that the Teutons no longer hold Vaux fort. An official statement two days ago admitted that the French by counter attacks had gained a foothold in the fort. Major Moraht, military critic of the Berlin Tageblatt, reports that the Posen reservists who occupied Fort Vaux wer driven out, but expresses the hope that their repulse is only temporary.

Paris despatches brought a detailed account of the fighting for Fort Vaux. They credited the Germans with great bravery, but repeated the official claim that no German soldier entered the fort itself.

GERMAN LOSSES 200,000.

PARIS, March 13.—German losses in the first three weeks of the Verdun offensive were estimated at 200,000 in an official statement issued by the French War Office to-day.

ALLIES ARE PREPARING FOR A BALKAN OFFENSIVE IN MAY

SALONIKI, Feb. 5.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The great Balkan offensive of the Allied armies is popularly believed to be arranged for the first week in May. Should weather conditions prove exceptionally favourable, it may occur even earlier. That it will take place soon, no one in Saloniki doubts for a moment. The only thing that can stop it is for the Germans and the Bulgarians to move first—and there is little belief in this contingency.

The increasing stores of munitions and supplies arriving in this port in an unending stream, the constant hard work of Gen. Sarrail and his staff, the activity of the Allied scouts and aeroplanes and the cheery features and high spirits of the French and British soldiers and the eagerness of the Serbs to get themselves in fighting trim again at the earliest possible moment add to the conviction that an Allied offensive from Saloniki in the spring is a certainty.

OVER 200,000 TROOPS.

There are to-day some 85,000 French and 120,000 British troops here. Besides the British and French, there are some 16,000 Serbs in Saloniki and along the Greek frontier. There are also said to be some 15,000 more French on their way from Marseilles, making a total of 236,000 Allied troops as a garrison for Saloniki, not counting the personnel of the warships stationed in the harbour.

In addition to these forces actually available, or soon to be available in Macedonia, there are the remainder of the French and British troops withdrawn from Gallipoli, still at Mudros and generally scattered about the islands of Lemnos, Tenedos, Imbros and Mytilene.

BIG FORCE AVAILABLE.

There are probably more, but assuming that there are only 100,000 of these, ready to be despatched to Macedonia or Egypt as occasion may require, this would bring the figure of those available for instant use in Saloniki up to 336,000 men by spring. There are also 25,000 Serbs in America and elsewhere who have only recently been called to the colours and some of whom are arriving every few days at Saloniki, which brings the figure up to 361,000 men.

Serbs Recuperating.

Meanwhile in Corin there are some 134,000 Serbs, refitting, and at Biserta some 25,000 more, making a total of 159,000 Serbs available for work in Albania, to be added to whatever force the Italians decided to concentrate at Avlona. Considering these figures the general impression here is that they indicate either a wasteful excess of force gathered in about the Balkans or that a general Balkan offensive is planned.

In the event of such an offensive being successfully begun, it will be impossible for the Hellenes or anyone else to hold the Greek army back from going on to Sofia with the allied powers. In this event, to the 690,000 men available for a Balkan offensive in the spring may be added 200,000 Greeks, making a total of 790,000 men operating in the Balkans by mid summer, against a maximum of 600,000 Germans, Austrians, Bulgarians and Turks.

YES—IT IS POSSIBLE TO STOP RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a tormenting and stubborn malady. In some cases it yields to treatment which is without avail in other cases.

The darting pains, lame muscles or stiffened joints only disappear by gradually expelling the uric acid, and so many thousands have been relieved by the blood-enriching oil-food in Scott's Emulsion that you should give it a faithful trial. Scott's Emulsion acts as a powerful blood-purifier by increasing the red corpuscles and it strengthens the organs to carry off the acids which cause the trouble.

Try Scott's Emulsion. It cannot harm. It has helped thousands and may be exactly what you need. No drugs.

Five-Year-Old California Boy Loses in Fight for Big Fortune

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, March 13.—"Teddy" Slingsby, the five-year-old California boy, to-day lost his fight for the Slingsby millions, reversing the decision of the Lower Court. The Court of Appeal ruled that "Teddy" was not the legitimate son of Charles Henry Reynard Slingsby and Mrs. Dorothy Morgan Warner Slingsby of San Francisco, and therefore not the rightful heir to the estate of Rev. Charles Slingsby.

FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

Are Told How to Regain Strength and Vigor.

Mrs. James A. Smith, of Oakland, Cal., says: "My husband, now eighty-two years of age, is a retired Veteran of the Navy, and he has been strengthened and benefited a great deal by Vinol. My long experience with first class physicians and nurses enables me to discriminate in medicines, and I must say Vinol has proved its wonderful qualities to relieve and strengthen the whole system under very trying circumstances. When the blood is thin and needs strengthening, and to build up a depleted system, nothing equals Vinol."

Nothing equals Vinol to strengthen old people because the tonic iron, the medicinal properties of fresh cods' livers, beef peptone and mild native wine which it contains are the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissue and create strength.

We ask every feeble, aged person in Peterborough to try a bottle of Vinol, with the understanding that we will return their money if it fails.

A Leading Food Expert

stood before the big battery of milling machines in the Grape-Nuts factories, and after inspecting both the wheat and flour said to the miller:

"That's selected wheat, and no 'patent flour' stunt, either. That wheat comes out of the rolls as honest and unrefined as it went in. Where did you ever make flour before that retained the true mineral content of the grain?"

And the wise miller replied: "I have worked in a good many mills, and I am no youngster, but let me tell you, I never made whole wheat flour like that until I came with this company."

The truth is, white flour is woefully lacking in certain essential mineral elements which are thrown out in the milling to make flour white and pretty, and its use frequently results in impaired health and activity.

The famous pure food,

Grape-Nuts

is made of honest whole wheat and malted barley; and supplies in splendid proportion all the brain- and nerve-making, bone- and muscle-building elements of the field grains, including their mineral elements.

Rich, nut-like flavour, ease of serving, and quick digestibility have made Grape-Nuts a household word the country over.

LONDON, March 13.—J. P. Morgan left here for Liverpool to sail for New York on the liner Philadelphia. A number of Government officials were at the Eastern station to bid farewell to the American financier.

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"But you must tell me, Yvonne! Will he permit us to meet?"

"Do you think my father would forbid it? How you must have misunderstood his real nature! He has even gone away from Pont Aven for a few days, so that his presence in the village may not be irksome to you. Shall we try and pretend to forget what has passed, Dear? It is useless to grieve now over the mistakes of other years. And you will see, I am sure, that no one in Pont Aven should be able even to guess at our true relationship. I ask that for my father's sake. I love him dearly, and would not have him suffer."

With a splendid effort the older woman raised herself in the bed and summoned a wan smile. "Indeed, indeed," she cried, "I will do nothing more to injure him! Is that a hand mirror on the dressing table? Please give it me."

Yvonne hesitated, and her mother smiled again.

"I shall not grieve because of white and drawn cheeks," she said.

When she held the mirror in a thin hand, and compared its reflection with Yvonne herself with critical eyes, the girl grasped her true intent. Her abundant hair, only a shade darker than Yvonne's own brown tresses, framed the well poised head and slender neck. Distress and lack of solid food had lent a pallor to cheeks and forehead which had the curious effect of rendering the clear-cut features strikingly youthful. Mouth and chin had a certain quality of hardness and obstinacy not discernible in the girl's face. Otherwise they resembled sisters rather than mother and daughter.

"Yvonne," she said wistfully, "if we say we are strangers, no one will believe. I shall invent a twin sister. You are my niece. I quarreled with my sister because she married an impoverished painter. This ice; but it must carry us. Your father has done the wisest possible thing in leaving Pont Aven to-day. He refuses to forgive my shabby treatment of a sister; but Christian charity impels him not to forbid you from visiting me. Don't volunteer this information. Let it be dragged from you unwillingly. It is a cruel thing that my first advice to you should be a lesson in duplicity; but I have earned that sort of scourge, and must endure. Now you understand. We are aunt and niece. Don't be surprised if I act a little when the nurse returns. By the way, write to your father and tell him what I have said. I'm sure he will approve, and the fact that I am eager to make this small atonement for the wrong I did him will show that I still retain some sense of fair dealing."

"Yes, Dear, I'll write to-day. I don't think it is very wicked to adopt a pretense that enables me to visit you without — without setting idle tongues wagging."

"Without causing a village scandal, you might well have said," came the bitter retort. "Very well, Yvonne, I will not say such things," for the girl winced at the unerring judgment that supplied the words that had nearly escaped her. "Now let us talk of other matters. Tell me something of yourself. Where and how do you live? Why are you wearing that costume. Do you dress like that habitually? And how wonderfully it becomes you! Talk, Dear, and I'll listen, and if I fall asleep when you are taking don't imagine that I am heedless and inattentive; for I have been brought nearer happiness in this hour than I would have believed possible yesterday. Do you realize that the wreck was directly due to my folly? The captain wished to put into the Aven estuary when the storm became very bad; but I refused to permit it. Wallie—that is Mr. Carmac—always yielded to my whims, and he imagined I preferred Lorient to Pont Aven. I didn't. I knew that your father lived here. His art proved more enduring than a woman's faith. It has made him famous; though I had the cruelty, the impertinence, to tell him once that he would never emerge from the ruck. I never heard of you. For some reason I thought you had died in infancy. Yvonne, Heaven forgive me, I may even have wished it! But you see now why I wanted to avoid Pont Aven. As though any of God's creatures can resist when He points the way!"

So it was the mother who did most of the talking, and the daughter who listened, with never a word of reproach, and not even a hint that had a wilful and conscience-tortured woman not imposed her imperious will on the Stella's course the yacht would have ridden the gale in safety in a roadstead five miles removed from the village of Pont Aven itself!

When Madame Bertrand bustled in her patient was asleep, and Yvonne's cheeks were tear-stained.

"Poor lady!" murmured the Breton woman. "She's nothing but a bundle of nerves. All night long, after the effect of the bromide had passed, she kept crying out for her daughter—meaning you, Mademoiselle. What a notion! Yet, you are so alike!"

"With good reason, Madame," said the girl. "She is my mother's sister. There was a family quarrel years ago. Please keep this to yourself; though Madame Carmac will probably tell you of it later."

Yvonne was glad, when her father's letter arrived, to find that he agreed with the little deception, which hurt none, and explained away the seemingly inexplicable.

On the second day after the wreck Mrs. Carmac, outwardly at least, was restored to good health, and assumed direction of her husband's affairs.

Sending for Captain Popple, she asked if any effort had been made to salve the large sum of money and store of jewellery on board the yacht. The red-faced mariner had evidently been giving thought to the same problem.

"No, Ma'am," he said. "When the vessel struck those on deck had no mind to go below, and those below were hard put to it to get on deck. We all lost everything except what we stood up in. It has been blowin' great guns ever since, and a French gentleman who knows every inch of the coast tells me that the reef may be ungetatable for a fortnight, or even a month, unless there's a change in the weather."

"When you say you lost everything do you mean that you and some members of the crew lost money as well as clothing?"

"No, Ma'am. If any swab has the howdacity to pretend that a sovereign or two has slipped out of his pockets, I won't believe 'im; but it'll be hard to prove the contrary."

"Are you in any special hurry to return home? Have you another yacht in view?"

Some men might have hesitated, but Popple was bluntly honest, both in nature and speech. "Bless your heart, Ma'am!" he said huskily, "I'll get no more yachts unless I'm a luckier man after turnin' fifty than ever I was afore. The Stella was my last seagoin' job, an' no mistake."

"Then you will not suffer professionally by remaining here?"

"I'll stop as long as you like, Ma'am."

"Very well. I have telegraphed to my London bankers for a supply of money, which should reach me to-morrow. I want you to arrange for salvage operations. Employ a driver, and hire such other assistance as may be necessary. It is important that a jewelcase in one of my trunks should be recovered, if possible, also five thousand pounds in French and English bank-notes which is in a leather wallet locked in a steamer trunk beneath my husband's bed. That trunk also contains a number of important papers. I shall be glad if it is brought to me unopened, no matter what the expense. Meanwhile make out a list of all that is reasonably owing to the men, and tell them I shall arrange at once for their return to Southampton."

"I've done that already, Ma'am. Mr. Raymond tole me to get busy."

"Ah! That was thoughtful of him. In future, however, take orders from no one but me."

Captain Popple was evidently about to offer a comment, but checked himself in time. "Right you are, Ma'am," he said.

Mrs. Carmac smiled quietly. This outspoken sailor's face was easy to read. Yvonne was present, and he hardly knew what to say.

"You had something else on the tip of your tongue, Captain," she prompted. "Out with it! I have no secrets from this young lady."

"I don't like contradict'ry sailin' orders, Ma'am, an' that's a fact," admitted the skipper. "Mr. Raymond axed me not to do a thing, no matter who gev the word, without consultin' him."

"His arm is broken, I believe?"

"Yes, Ma'am; but he's able to get about to-day."

"That simplifies matters. Kindly send him here."

The sailor raised his hand in a clumsy salute, and went out.

"I am not an admirer of Mr. Raymond," said Mrs. Carmac to Yvonne. "He was a useful sort of person to my husband; but he has a Uriah Heep manner which I dislike intensely. Now I shall get rid of him."

For an instant the Breton shrewdness of judgment came uppermost in the girl. "Don't make an unnecessary enemy," she ventured to suggest.

"I simply purpose dismissing him on very generous terms."

"But—have you—forgotten—perhaps you never knew — how wildly you spoke that night in the cabin of the Hirondelle? Mr. Raymond was there too. He may have overheard a good deal."

Mrs. Carmac was momentarily staggered. "Do you think so?" she cried rather breathlessly.

"There was every opportunity. I saw the man, and he retained his senses, though in great pain."

"Thanks for the warning, Dear. I'll handle him gently."

"Shall I go?"

"I prefer that you should remain."

"But it might be better if you were to see him alone. He has not met me since we came ashore."

"Well—you may be right. I'll take your advice. Don't leave me too long alone. I mope when you are away."

Yvonne slipped out. She passed Raymond on the stairs; but he gave her no heed, regarding her as belonging to the establishment.

Misery in Back, Headache and Pain in Limbs.

Dear Mr. Editor—For more than a year I suffered with misery in the back, dull headache, pain in the limbs, was somewhat constipated and slept poorly at night until I was about ready to collapse. Seeing an account of the wonderful qualities of "Anuric," prepared by Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., I sent for a box, and before using the whole box I felt and still feel improved. My sleep is refreshing, misery reduced, and life is not the drag it was before. I most cheerfully recommend this remedy to sufferers from like ailments.

Yours truly, W. A. ROBERTS.

NOTE: You've all undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his well-known medicines. Well, this prescription is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physicians and specialists of Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney complaints, and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing Tablet, Dr. Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

I know of one or two leading druggists in town who have managed to procure a supply of "Anuric" for their anxious customers in and around this locality. If not obtainable send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First.—Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second.—The medicine most successful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism; it overcomes disease.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Third.—The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Fourth.—Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

PRAYERS FOR WAR HORSES

Forbidden by Bishop of Oxford But Believed In by Japanese

Among the questions raised by the war is at least one ecclesiastical question. The Bishop of Oxford issued a pastoral letter against the offerings of prayers for the dumb animals that have fallen. The sufferings of the horses and dogs in France and Belgium having been impressed upon a section of his diocese prayers were offered for them, but the Bishop forbade the practice, on the ground that it has never been the custom of the Church to pray for "other beings than those which we think of as rational." Probably no churchman in England enjoys a higher reputation for learning and brilliancy than Bishop Gore. He is by no means a narrow interpreter of the laws and traditions of the Church, and his protest against the offering of prayers for the dumb allies is not likely to be found fault with.

It is interesting to recall in this connection that services for dumb brutes were celebrated in the war between Japan and Russia. The Japanese, though they breed few horses, and most of them of an inferior quality, did not fail in paying honor to the horses that fell in the various battles of that war, and one of the most moving orations inspired by that struggle was that of a Japanese general who delivered a memorial address for the slaughtered animals at a State funeral, the troops standing at attention while he spoke. He recited the services of the horses and the number that had fallen in this battle and the other. He solemnly thanked their spirits in the name of the Emperor, the army and the nation for the assistance that they had afforded their human comrades, and these spirits, he was assured, would be held in loving remembrance by the people of Japan, whom they had so materially assisted in the great struggle. In fact, the general spoke of the horses as eloquently as General Tago on another occasion spoke of the private soldiers who had laid down their lives in Manchuria.

The Japanese tribute to the dead horses was based upon the belief that there is a hereafter for horses as well as for human beings, and that the spirits of the dead can be invoked

The Strength Of Woman

It Converted a Den of Gamblers Into Happy Homes.

By HELOISE BRAYTON.

A number of men were one evening sitting around the stove in a country store talking about the rapid growth of certain western towns. Among them was an old man of the name of Neilson, who was commonly called "the boomer," since he had made several fortunes booming towns. Being called upon to narrate some of his experiences, he told the following story:

One of the towns I boomed I called after myself—Neilson. It was on the line of a projected railroad that was to cross another projected railroad I bought all the property at this crossing that had been staked out by the chief engineers of the two roads and started my town.

The trouble with new towns is that they are composed almost exclusively of men. For awhile Neilson was the worst place on the face of the earth. It was full of gambling shanties, and I couldn't get the men to work because they preferred to gamble. I got them together on several occasions, telling them what a bright prospect we had before us if they would only be respectable, but that settlers wouldn't come in so long as they made the place uninviting. This would sober them for awhile, but it wasn't long before they would drop back to their former condition.

My right hand man was a Swede named Olaf Hendrickson. I was talking with him lugubriously one day about the immorality of the town when he said to me:

"Mr. Neilson, you can never make a community of men respectable without a fair proportion of the opposite sex. Women are essential to men just as men are to women, and children are essential to both. My advice to you is to make some move with a view to inducing respectable women to come in here, marry these men and establish families."

"You're a bachelor, Hendrickson," I replied. "How comes it that you, holding such opinions on the necessities of matrimony, are not married?"

"That is because before I came to this country I loved a girl in Sweden.

When I parted from her I told her I would send for her just so soon as I could get together the money for the purpose. Ten years have passed, and I have not been successful. A year ago I wrote her that she had better not wait for me any longer, and since then I have not heard from her."

I was so impressed with Hendrickson's views that, leaving him in charge of my plant, I went east for some women. I visited institutions where I might find those who needed to be provided for, and as some of my men were foreigners I enlisted the interest of the immigrant commissioners at New York. I could have returned in a few weeks with all the women I wanted, but I must have good moral ones and fairly attractive, so I wouldn't take any one without satisfying myself in this respect. Finally I got together the number of volunteers I wanted, apportioned among Americans and foreigners as my men were native or foreign born. I struck one woman from Sweden, older than the rest, whom I intended for Hendrickson.

Meanwhile my right hand man was busy erecting cabins intended for temporary residences for the women until they should become wives. He had no difficulty in getting the men to work for such a purpose, and the cabins, he wrote me, sprang up like mushrooms.

When all was ready I put the women into one passenger car, which they filled, and took them out to Neilson. On the way I talked with them to prepare them for the shock they would receive at meeting their future husbands and assured them that they would have no difficulty in bringing the men to the condition of human beings instead of that of wild animals, to which they had sunk.

The Swede whom I had intended for Hendrickson told me that, having nowhere to go on her arrival in America, she had been attracted by the name of my town, Neilson being a common name in Sweden. She said that, being elderly, she would not likely be chosen for a wife. Indeed, she did not care to marry; she hoped to make herself useful in some particular way. It wasn't best, she said, that all the women should be married. What would the world do without the old maid aunties? I told her that I had a husband, one of her own countrymen, picked out for her, but she declared that I must permit her to remain single.

Of course the day of our arrival was a gala day at Neilson. I was obliged to transport my cargo some twenty miles from the railroad and hired all manner of vehicles for the purpose. The population met us a mile from the town and escorted us, marching beside the wagons, to the recently erected cabins. The men behaved themselves much better than could have been expected. Indeed, their condition of barbarism was but a lapse from respectability.

Do you know that some matches were made on the road before reaching the town? But I had cautioned the girls to go slow and not marry any man without at least two days' courtship. They all agreed to this, and there was not a wedding until forty-eight hours after our arrival. That time was scarcely up when there were a dozen. The truth is there were no villains in my town, because as soon as I had discovered that a man was inherently bad I had fired him. I was surprised to see that as soon as the women arrived the men began to slick up. Razors made their appearance, and the long, scraggly locks were cut down. The second day after the women's coming I noticed several men in boiled shirts.

On the night of the feminine entry not a gambling shanty was doing any business, and, although their earnings picked up later on, they received their deathblow. On the evening of the women's arrival the men were all visiting and mating and from that time forward continued their visits till all the women had left the cabins and they were as deserted as the gambling holes.

The Swedish woman, Lena Erickson, either was not chosen or had declined any offer she might have received. She was but twenty-eight and good looking, and I don't doubt it was her own fault that she did not become a wife. She busied herself in helping the young wives make their homes, many of whom were very young and had little idea of fixing up a house. Lena would take hold of a bride's residence and in half a day transform it from bare walls and floors into a human habitation. The floor would be at least in part covered and the windows would be draped. Some of these things Lena did herself, others she showed the young wives how to do. Then she would have the husband digging in the yard and flowers would be set out.

We were all so busy that I took no thought for my intention of bringing my man Hendrickson and Lena Ericson together. Indeed, she was serving so valuable a purpose as a single woman that I abandoned my plan. As soon as the women arrived I sent Hendrickson away to stock up in a lot of articles that their presence rendered requisite. It was my intention to set him up as proprietor of a dry goods store. Then it struck me that as such he would need a woman's assistance badly, if indeed she would not be the real manager. So as soon as he returned I told him I had a wife for him, and since he had lost the girl he had loved he would better marry the one I had selected. He sighed and said that if I thought best he would consent, though it was evident he did so reluctantly. I left him to propose my plan to Lena. She positively declined. I argued with her for awhile, but finding I could not move her I told her that I wished her to become one of the managers of the dry goods store, and to this she gladly consented.

The next morning I summoned Hendrickson and Lena to meet me at my house that we might together lay plans for the establishment of the store. Hendrickson arrived first, and I was discussing the business matter with him when the door opened and Lena Ericson came in.

The two stood looking at each other as if wonder stricken for a moment, then rushed into each other's arms.

"Lena!"

"Olaf!"

As soon as they were quieted down they explained to me that Lena was the girl Hendrickson had left in Sweden. She had saved some money, just enough to take her to New York, and, knowing that her lover was somewhere in the west, had availed herself of my transportation to get farther in her quest.

That's the end of my story, gentlemen, except to add that the rascally civil engineers of the two railroads had staked them out where they were not intended to cross for the purpose of secretly buying up the property where they were intended to cross.

But our town was not left out in the cold. The power of the softer sex having been demonstrated, I made up my mind to find out what the women of Neilson could do in saving us from that fate. I picked out several of the best of them and sent them, headed by Mrs. Hendrickson, to the general offices of the roads to tell the story of the salvation of the men of Neilson. I sent by them a letter corroborating any statement they might make, giving a picture of what the town was before they came and what it was later, inviting the railroad officers to send some one to make an inspection and report. The women made a deep impression, and the vice presidents of both roads came to see Neilson. The result was that the roads were crossed five miles west of where the engineers had intended and insured the prosperity of our city."

SAFEGUARDING ROYALTY.

Precautions in Olden Days When an English Monarch Was Ill.

The British law retains some peculiar provisions with reference to the "illness of the king." These provisions are mere survivals in the present settled order of government, but there was a time when the king's incapacity afforded opportunity to aspirants to the throne to shorten his day at a minimum risk of detection. Accordingly certain wise precautions were matters of law.

In his "Institutes" Coke says: "If the King be taken sick there ought to be a warrant issue from the Privy Council, addressed to certain physicians and surgeons, authorizing them to administer to the Royal patient potiones, syrupes, laxitavas, medicinas, etc.; still, none of these should be given except by consent and advice of the Council, and they ought to set down in writing everything done and administered, and they should compound all drugs themselves and not entrust their preparation to any apothecary."

Coke thus wrote of precedent in 1610, and today the law is practically as he found it, although now the privy council simply hears reports of the progress of the king's malady and leaves actual treatment entirely to the physicians in direct charge of the case.

Two of a Kind.

A lady selected some purchases in a store, asking that they be kept for her until the next day. When she returned she could not remember who waited on her. After puzzling over the matter, she approached one and asked:

"Am I the woman who bought some embroidery here yesterday?"

"Yes'm," replied the girl, stolidly, and turned to get it.—Christian Register.

Simply Couldn't.

"Now, son," said the lawyer, "you were guilty of various misdemeanors today and must be taken to task."

"I apply for a stay of proceedings, pop, and a change of venue to ma."

And how could a good lawyer refuse such a request?

COULD NOT BEND DOWN

COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubiniecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

"HE IS ALWAYS TELLING OTHERS ABOUT THEM"

Brother and Sister Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills—News of Cure Too Good to Keep.

In this letter Mrs. Hurley relates how glad she and her brother are to tell how they were cured of indigestion and kidney trouble by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

That is the kind of enthusiasm Dr. Chase's medicines arouse and that is why they are so generally known and used to-day. People who are cured tell their friends and neighbours, and so the word is passed along.

From the limits of Dr. Chase's practice at Ann Arbor, Mich., the good news of these medicines travelled until they are known the world over and considered indispensable in many thousands of homes.

This is the kind of letters we are receiving daily and there can be no mistaking the enthusiasm expressed here:

Mrs. J. J. Hurley, Upper Hanwell, York Co., N.B., writes: "I suffered from indigestion for two years, and tried a great many kinds of medicine, but got no lasting relief until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I would take severe vomiting spells and be weakened down so that I could not do my own work. I shall never be able to give the medicine enough praise for the benefit derived from its use, and will strongly recommend it to all my friends.

"My brother has also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and they have entirely cured him of lame back and kindney trouble. He is always telling others about them."

Dr. E. L. Brine writes: "I can certify that this statement of Mrs. J. J. Hurley is correct in all details."

Chronic indigestion is almost invariably associated with torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and can never be really cured until these organs are awakened to healthful action by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. STUDY YOUR TONGUE.

It Is a Monitor That Registers Your Physical Condition.

One of the first things a doctor does when he is called to a patient is to look into his mouth. That is because it is the quickest and easiest way to examine an internal cavity of the body and observe the signs of health or disease there displayed. The mouth is lined with mucous membrane, which is quickly affected by many disorders and the tongue, which is simply a mass of muscle wrapped up in mucous membrane, is a veritable horizontal guide post.

Since it is a muscle its general size and shape and its susceptibility to proper control inform the physician of the muscular condition of the patient, and the state of the mucous membrane that covers it indicates the general systemic condition. A person who suffers from fever of any degree will generally show a "furred" tongue. The word graphically describes the condition, and it is not necessary to be a physician in order to recognize it.

In a long continued fever like typhoid the fur accumulates until the tongue is covered with a thick, brown mass that shades off to a lighter tint at the edges. In scarlet fever the tongue is often covered with a white fur dotted with little red points. That is called the "strawberry" tongue. When the stomach is badly out of condition the tongue shows a thick white or brown fur, and those who are suffering from tonsilitis or from any other inflammation of the throat may show a layer of thick, creamy white fur all over the tongue. Sometimes when the patient is much exhausted the tongue will not be furred, but dry, red and raw.

"Thrush" consists of small white patches raised above the surface and, although not serious in itself, generally shows that the constitution is weak.

One strange thing about the tongue is that, although it so often betrays the state of the stomach to the physician, yet in two of the most serious stomach troubles—cancer and gastric ulcer—the tongue is generally very clean.

The tongue in health is always under the muscular control of its owner and should be perfectly steady when it is put out. A tremulous tongue denotes weakness, and the tongue that is coated and tremulous in the morning, but that grows steadier through the day, is generally the result of too much alcohol.—Youth's Companion.

"One" as a Pronoun.

I have never been smitten with the use of the word "one" as a pronoun. It takes a word juggler to attempt it and get away with it. Unless one feels that one has won one's spurs in this respect and can extricate oneself from the mess one gets oneself and one's readers into one should avoid the use of the word one in referring to oneself as one would a plague.—Westminster Gazette.

The Frenchwoman and Hats.

It is said to take much less money to start a millinery shop in France than in England, because it is not necessary to the French milliner to carry a stock of trimmed hats. The Englishwoman, it seems, cannot buy a hat or anything else without seeing it completely finished. The Frenchwoman has imagination enough to picture the completed article to herself and knows just how she will look in it.

Procrastinate.

Teacher—What is the meaning of the word "procrastinate?" Pupil—To put off. Teacher—Right. Illustrate it in a sentence. Pupil—I tried to steal a ride on a street car yesterday, but I was procrastinated.

DRUMMER WON CROSS

Rallied Leaderless and Disheartened Men, Then Saved Comrade

When Drummer S. J. Bent left his humble English home to fight for King and country he little dreamed that in a few weeks he would return a national hero, a bearer of the most coveted distinction in the British army, the Victoria Cross.

The story of the gallant drummer is a modern romance of soldiering. He was fighting with the East Lancashire Regiment near Gheer one night, and the Lancashire men in the face of a hail of shot and shell were tenaciously holding an important trench. In turn the officers of the regiment, the platoon sergeant, and the section commander were struck down, and the leaderless men began to waver. A voice gave the signal to retreat, and the hard-pressed men began to retire. Then Drummer Bent's great moment came. Acting on sudden impulse he shouted, "Come on, boys! Carry on now and play the game." The British soldier's hatred of retreat is proverbial, and the men speedily returned to the shell-raked trench. Drummer Bent's action saved the situation, for the advancing Germans were met with such fierce fire by the Lancashire Regiment that they retreated in disorder.

Greater honors, however, were to come to Drummer Bent. One of his comrades, Private McNulty, who had left the trench, lay seriously wounded in the line of fire. Bent determined to save his pal. He left the trench and, though knocked down by an exploding shell, managed to reach the wounded man without being seriously hurt. Getting his toes under McNulty's armpits, he worked himself along the ground like a caterpillar, dragging his comrade with him, and both reached the trench without further injury.

When Bent's superior officer told him that he had been recommended for a medal for conspicuous bravery, the modest drummer took it as a joke and thought no more of the incident. With a bullet in his leg Drummer Bent was later invalided home, and whilst convalescent at Ipswich a telegram was handed to him, which ran: "Heartiest congratulations on obtaining the V.C.," and was signed by an officer.

The drummer gasped with astonishment, for it was the first intimation he received that he had gained the soldier's highest honor, and even then he was not sure of his success until the village blacksmith showed him the official announcement in a newspaper.

"I only picked up a pal," said Drummer Bent, modestly.

DAVID'S BELOVED FLAG

History of Zionist Double Triangle Reaches to Exodus

Time and history work strange ironies, for the oldest flag in existence to-day is without a country. Banners have flown over nations that rose and decayed and have become all but forgotten; but the flag of the Zionists still lives. Thousands and thousands of Zionists, who are waiting patiently for a day when they shall again have a country of their own, keep somewhere stored away within their homes this banner. For to them it signifies the unity and the nationalism that once was theirs, but which has vanished. It cries aloud to them of the day when David came riding back from his victories, and came down through the hero-worshipping throngs, keeping a proud step to the chanting of the women on the housetops: "David has slain his ten thousands."

Presumably, in the thirteenth century before Christ, the first rude forms of this flag came into existence. When the Hebrews were held against their will in Egypt by Pharaoh, the memories of freedom and independence that had been theirs before the days of bondage, led them to unify their hopes and aspirations in a banner. The flag was kept hidden until the mighty throng suddenly arose under the leadership of Moses and marched away back to their own lands. The description of that tremendous movement is all too vague in history. This dramatic leave-taking is dismissed with scant chronicles, so that nowhere does that flag that flew at the head of the columns receive its due.

The flag was not accepted as the power that it has since become until the days of David. This king, who is the first vitally human being whom history recognizes, had a mysterious coat-of-arms upon his shield. The double triangle may have meant something portentous; it may have meant nothing in particular. At any rate, the mighty king wore it, and made it loved by his people and feared by his enemies. The shepherd boy who rose to be the most commanding figure of his century stirred the imagination and the devotion of his nation exactly as he has stirred readers of the Old Testament to this day.

There was none of the supernatural powers of Moses about him. He was not a seer, a prophet, or a priest; he was a doer, an inspired leader, a man with all the weakness and the strength of a nation within him. He could sing and play; he could sleep at night with the roughest of his soldiers in the wilderness; he could fight, and love, and hate. He led the people with irresistible power and sure success; he did everything that they wished to do better than they could plan, and yet he was not above them. He had come from the ranks, he sinned among them; in the main he was honest, consequently he was popular.

It is easy of comprehension, then, why his shield should have become transferred to the national flag. Some great tribute must be paid him, so when he was gone and his greatest achievements became greater in the telling, the double triangle appeared upon the flag. Later the blue stripes were added. The priests in the temple at Jerusalem wore robes of bright blue wool. So the color was used because it meant to the people strength, purity; it typified to them their nationality, powerful in spiritual things, —ideas.

Germans Use Many Dogs

Major Richardson states that the Germans, who for many years past have recognized the value that dogs were likely to be in battle as aids to their ambulance, and particularly as auxiliaries to their sentries and patrols, have about 6,000 trained dogs helping the troops on both fronts.

Paper Money in France

A number of French cities, owing to the scarcity of coin, have, with the sanction of the Government, issued bank notes for a franc (20 cents) and half a franc. The town of Epernay, in the Champagne district, issued a note for 25 centimes, or 5 cents.

It is for these reasons that you can use it for frying doughnuts, croquettes, etc., for shortening pastry and for making cake, and secure as remarkable results as when frying eggs.

"The Princess Pats"

A touch of the plain and the prairie,
A bit of the motherland, too;
A strain of the fur trapper, wary
A blend of the old and the new
A bit of the pioneer splendor
That opened the wilderness flats
A touch of the home lover tender,
You'll find in the boys they call "Pats."

The glory and strength of the maple,
The courage that's born of the wheat,
The pride of a stock that is staple,
The bronze of a midsummer heat,
A mixture of wisdom and daring,
The best of a new land, and that's
The regiment gallantly bearing
The neat little title of "Pats."

A bit of the man who has neighbored
With mountains and forests and streams,
A touch of the man who has labored
To model and fashion his dreams
The strength of an age of clean living
Of right-minded, fatherly chats,
The best that a land could be giving
Is there in the breasts of the "Pats."

Submarines in 1372

Among the historical relics on exhibition in Berlin is the Ploegsurr-Marine, Germany's earliest submarine. The boat is of iron, and dates back to 1850. It was tried at Kiel, but its thin sides were crushed by the pressure of the water, and it remained at the bottom until it was discovered when the first excavations for the Kiel Canal were being made. Old as Kiel, this submarine is not the first one ever built. References to submarine operations date back to 1573. In 1727 no fewer than four cases submarine contents had been issued in England. In 1775 H.M.S. "Eagle" was attacked in New York Harbor by a submarine built by David Bushnell. Sergeant Lee, in charge of the submarine, actually got under the ship, but was unsuccessful in attaching the torpedo to the bottom of the vessel.

Some Searching Questions

An advertisement published in the English press contains a series of questions to employers of male servants. They are so real and pointed that they will bear republication:

"Have you a man serving at your table who should be serving a gun?

"Have you a man digging your garden who should be digging trenches?"

"Have you a man driving your car who should be driving a transport wagon?

"Have you a man preserving your game who should be helping to preserve your country?"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

7619

This bungalow apron is practically a dress and may be worn alone or with a frock under it. The bodice has a surplice closing and raglan sleeves which form a small yoke on the shoulders. At the open neck is a small roll collar.

The skirt of the apron has four gores. These are fitted neatly about the body and flare gracefully at the lower edge. The closing is at the left side of the front and a pocket occupies the right side.

When intended for wear when really working these aprons are made, as a rule, of a substantial gingham. All work is not equally hard, however, and for many household occupations a light weight and a light color are advisable. There are numbers of pretty printed cotton crepes which will be ideal for this style, and there are pretty percales, calicoes and the like which may also be used. Chambray and gingham in plain colors are always smarter than figured gingham, but both may be employed. Brilliantine also washes well and can be pressed into service.

The apron pattern, No. 7,619, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4¼ yards of 36-inch material, and ⅝ yard of 36-inch goods to trim.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

A PROUD OLD HORSE IN CANADIAN RANKS

Bill Bailey, Twice Ridden by the King, Serving His Country and Master in Europe

Bill Bailey has gone to the war. Bill hasn't enlisted, and he doesn't receive $1.10 per day. All he gets is several meals a day, much attention and much admiration. Bill Bailey is a horse. Be it said that this animal is the most famous among all those to be found in the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Lord Strathcona's Horse the artillery, or any other unit in which horses are required.

Bill Bailey derives his fame because of the fact that when King George visited Canada in 1902 and 1908, as Prince of Wales, Bill Bailey was his mount. In 1902 this horse was the property of the government, which purchased him some time previously in anticipation of the visit of the Prince of Wales. The following year Bill Bailey was bought by Major Taschereau of Halifax, an officer of the Royal Canadian Dragoons for many years. When the Prince attended the Tercentenary celebration at Quebec in 1908 Bill Bailey was again requisitioned, but he still remained in the possession of Major Taschereau. The major took five horses with him to England, but none could compare with Bill Bailey.

Bill stands 16½ hands in height and he is as black as charcoal. Although 21 years of age he will certainly last until he is shot at the front. "He is getting pretty old," said the owner. "And even if he should be wounded I think I will kill him outright. No German will get him alive anyway."

Bill has almost human intelligence. He does not need a whip or spur. He is human enough to know that both hurt, so he gallops, canters, runs or walks whenever he receives directions. He lies down when ordered and will follow his master anywhere when requested.

It is said that Col. Victor Williams and Major Taschereau once had an argument on the question of whether a horse would recognize its master—that is, if he were with a group of brother officers. Major Taschereau contended that Bill Bailey would recognize him anywhere. Just to prove it they lined up a number of horses, Bill Bailey among them, and a few officers casually walked by them. Major Taschereau was among the officers, but when he came to Bill Bailey the horse threw up his head and trotted after his master.

"No doubt about it, Bill has some sense," said the major. "He's almost human. You couldn't scare him with bugles, bands or dynamite, because he was trained for the visit of the Prince of Wales, and I have further instructed him on the folly of being scared of anything. He takes no notice of men, but I think he opens his eyes a little wider than usual if he spies a pretty girl. No one informed His Majesty when he reviewed the troops at Salisbury that Bill Bailey was present. I was away that day and I was very sorry. Captain Ned Williams was riding him. Bill Bailey stood as stiff as a ramrod when the King went by, and I hear his Majesty took more than one look at him. I also hear that the Queen gazed a little longer at Bill than the other horses, and that Bill reciprocated by just looking his prettiest and opening his eyes a little wider."

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A hydraulic brake for automobiles that has been invented in England operates on all four wheels of a car at the same time.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious—merry bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy cheeked people every where.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimetary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, await ing those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

THE BEST WAR POEM?

Robert W. Service Sends Verses Found on Dead Britisher

The war has produced few war poems of striking character. But here is one which, not only because of the strong human note in it, but also because of the story attached to it, will be read with interest. It came in a letter from Robert W. Service, who is somewhere up north, carrying the French wounded to hospital. He says:

MR ROBERT W. SERVICE

"He was living in Paris when the war started, and volunteered for service as an ambulance driver.

"I wonder have you ever seen this poem, or do you know if it has been published? This is what I have been told about it. It was found by a French priest on the body of a dead English soldier, after the battle of Marne. It is the best war poem I have seen yet.

They say that war is Hell, the great accurst,
The sin impossible to be forgiven;
Yet I can look upon it at its worst,
And still see blue in Heaven.

For when I note how nobly natures form
Under the war's red rain, I deem it true,
That He who made the earthquake and the storm,
Perchance made battles, too.

For a Sober Army

Public sentiment in Canada will strongly support the Minister of Militia in his efforts to prevent intemperance among the expeditionary forces of the Dominion. The Minister's orders to all commanding officers in Canada are: "that any recruit found under the influence of liquor shall be summarily dismissed from the service." If any man needs a clear brain, a keen eye and steady nerves, it is the soldier in the trenches facing a wily, capable and remorseless foe. Whatever tends to weaken or demoralize our soldiers in such a crisis as the present, is a deadly peril to the nation and ought to be suppressed with a strong hand.—Presbyterian Witness.

WAIL OF HYPHENATED PROVED HYPOCRITICAL

Munsterberg's Arguings Are Turned on Him—Does Germany Give the Hyphenated Much Rein?

Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Yale's history department has a few whole some arguments with which to reply to Prof. Hugo Munsterberg's plans for the hyphenated. He says: If the Germans, as Munsterberg advises, are "to keep the fire of the German belief alive on their hearth forever," of course the Irish, the Swedes, the Greeks, the Italians, the Hungarians the Slovaks, the Bohemians, the Poles the English, the Turks, the Egyptians the Albanians are entitled to do the same thing. We are assured by Professor Munsterberg that "the German mind is devoted to thoroughness and seriousness, to carefulness and lawfulness, to reverence and self-discipline. This German belief in training and expert judgment, in authority and efficiency, is the one weapon which can overcome the dangerous, happy-go-lucky carelessness of American life." Suppose we take a leaf from that book. Let us see what the especially thorough, serious, expert, careful nation does to race groups which attempt to do what Professor Munsterberg advises his countrymen to do to us.

Polish Rights Ignored

Germany is one of the most homogeneous countries in the world. Nevertheless, it has several non-German and discontented race elements. In the Masurian Lake region there are 400,000 Slavs who cannot speak German at all, and in Poland there are 2,000,000 Poles who cannot or will not use the imperial language. With these exceptions, the German Government has succeeded in compelling every man, woman, and child in its dominions, except alien residents, to know German. What would be the effect if the United States Government should make the attempt to compel everybody to speak English?

There are in the empire about 4,000,000 Poles, nearly the whole of whom live in the same province and preserve their Polish spirit. Does efficient Germany, whose former subjects are called upon by Professor Munsterberg to teach us the significance of race groupings, encourage this state of things? Does the German Government recognize that the Poles were there before the Germans came? Does the German Government encourage the Poles to "keep the fire of the Polish belief alive on their hearths forever"? Not precisely. Every effort has been made to Germanize the Poles, to break up the use of their language, to quench the memory of the glorious days of what was once a brilliant kingdom.

Some Fine Sarcasm

At the other end of Germany is another group, in Alsace and Lorraine. The people are German in origin, but some of them as distinctly French as the people of Bordeaux. Have they been allowed in the last forty-five years to "keep the fire of the French belief alive on their hearths forever"? Not precisely. In the northwest of the empire is another group of Danes—Danish in blood, in sympathy, in language. Are they making a contribution to the common life of the empire? Not precisely. The whole theory and policy of the German Empire is that every person within the empire and subject to the empire shall be German, join the German army, think German, and preach German.

Sauce for the Gander

Of course the explanation is that the State is superior to the individual; that the future of Germany as a great power depends upon the unity of her people that the Polish, French, and Danish cultures are inferior to the German and must give way to a higher Kultur. The three or four million non-Germans must bend to the sixty-one or sixty-two million Germans. Carry the principle over! Here in America where we have not three, but thirty race elements, shall we encourage any one of these elements to maintain itself on the ground that it represents a higher civilization which is to be a lesson to the rest of the country? Shall we permit what Germany would be horror-struck to allow—in order that Germans who prefer to leave their own country may unite as a permanent political force in the country of their adoption?

NEEDLES FOR ZEPPELINS

The French Have a Tiny, Sharp, Explosive Weapon

The French War Office has in operation an invention which seems to offer an excellent method of combating Zeppelins. The inventor is M. Antony Jacques, of Grenoble.

The new weapon consists of a long needle carrying a small shell. These needles are very light, and so is the shell they carry. When the needle pierces cloth or any light substances—and not till then—it explodes the shell. Fired against a brick wall it is harmless.

The needles are so small that a good quantity can be carried on an aeroplane. They can be fired from a very light gun, and when once they strike a Zeppelin and explode they will also explode the gases contained in the envelope, and so destroy the whole machine.

The invention came to the French War Office after careful and exhaustive experiments made by the Chief of the Fire Brigade at Grenoble.

Western Students Patriotic

With three members of the staff at the front, four in training, and eighteen students graduate and undergraduate, in the first and second expeditionary forces, the University of Alberta is well represented among those who are giving themselves to the active defence of the Empire. Four students from Alberta College (Methodist) also enlisted.

Saskatchewan University is represented by 24 students, almost all of whom are in training. The Methodist and Anglican colleges at Regina and the Presbyterian college at Moose Jaw sent about 15 students with the 1st and 2nd contingents.

ITALIANS PRESSING AUSTRIANS HARD

PARIS, March 13.—The French troops stormed and captured more than 200 yards of German trenches in Carmes forest, taking twenty prisoners, the War Office announced this afternoon. Official statement reported intense German bombardment in the regions of Douaumont, Bethincourt, the Woevre and LePretre woods, but no infantry attacks north of Verdun last night.

French war planes dropped 30 bombs on the railway station at Conflans, and returned unharmed. Elsewhere no important operations occurred last night.
